3 SECTION 1. DEFINITIONS. As used in this Act:

4 (a) “Foreign country” means any governmental unit with regard to which the 5 decision in this State as to whether to recognize the judgments of that governmental unit’s courts 6 is not initially subject to determination under the standards for recognition established by the 7 Full Faith and Credit Clause of the United States Constitution.

8 (b) “Foreign country judgment” means a judgment of a court of a foreign country.

9 Reporter’s Notes

11 The defined terms “foreign state” and “foreign judgment” in the current Act have been 12 changed to “foreign country” and “foreign country judgment” in order to make it clear that the 13 Act does not apply to recognition of sister-state judgments. Some courts have noted that the 14 “foreign state” and “foreign judgment” definitions have caused confusion as to whether the Act 15 should apply to sister-state judgments because “foreign state” and “foreign judgment” are terms 16 of art generally used in connection with recognition and enforcement of sister-state judgments.
17 See, e.g., Eagle Leasing v. Amandus, 476 N.W.2d 35 (S.Ct. Iowa 1991) (reversing lower court’s 18 application of UFMJRA to a sister-state judgment, but noting lower court’s confusion was 19 understandable as “foreign judgment” is term of art normally applied to sister-state judgments).
20 See also, Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act §1 (defining “foreign judgment” as 21 the judgment of a sister state or federal court). Several states (for example, New York) have 22 nonuniform amendments to the Act that change the defined terms to “foreign country” and 23 “foreign country judgment.”

25 The current Act defines a “foreign state” as “any governmental unit other than the United 26 States, or any state, district, commonwealth, territory, insular possession thereof, or the Panama 27 Canal Zone, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, or the Ryuku Islands.” This definition 28 obviously needs to be updated. The Committee decided at its April, 2004 drafting committee 29 meeting to abandon the “laundry list” approach of the current Act’s “foreign state” definition 30 and, instead to define “foreign country” in terms of whether the judgments of the particular 31 governmental unit’s courts are initially subject to the Full Faith and Credit Clause standards for 32 determining whether those judgments will be recognized. Under this new definition, a 33 governmental unit is a “foreign country” if its judgments are not initially subject to Full Faith 34 and Credit Clause standards. The Full Faith and Credit Clause, Art. IV, section 1, provides that 35 “Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial 36 Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner 37 in which such Acts, Records, and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.” Pursuant

1 to the authority granted by the second sentence of the Full Faith and Credit Clause, Congress 2 passed 28 U.S.C.A. §1738, which provides inter alia that court records from “any State, 3 Territory, or Possession of the United States” are entitled to full faith and credit under the Full 4 Faith and Credit Clause. In Stoll v. Gottlieb, 305 U.S. 165, 170 (1938), the United States
5 Supreme Court held that this statute also requires that full faith and credit be given to judgments 6 of federal courts. Thus, the Draft’s approach captures what appears to have been the underlying 7 principle of the “laundry list” definition in the current Act while not suffering from the need for 8 periodic legislative updating inherent in that approach. The Draft’s definition of “foreign 9 country” in terms of those judgments not subject to Full Faith and Credit standards also has the 10 advantage of more effectively coordinating the Act with the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign 11 Judgments Act. That Act, which establishes a registration procedure for the enforcement of 12 sister state and equivalent judgments, defines a “foreign judgment” as “any judgment, decree, or 13 order of a court of the United States or of any other court which is entitled to full faith and credit 14 in this state.” Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act, §1 (1964). By defining “foreign 15 country” in the Recognition Act in terms of those judgments not subject to full faith and credit 16 standards, the Draft makes it clear that the Enforcement Act and the Recognition Act are 17 mutually exclusive, and that, between the two acts, they cover the full array of foreign money 18 judgments.
19

20 The definition of “foreign country judgment” differs significantly from the current Act’s 21 definition of “foreign judgment.” The current Act’s definition serves in large part as a scope 22 provision for the Act. The part of the definition defining the scope of the Act has been moved to 23 the section 2, which is the scope section. Unlike the definition of “foreign judgment,” the 24 definition of “foreign country judgment” refers to judgments of “a court” of the foreign country.
25 This makes it clear that the Act does not apply to judgments issued by entities other than courts, 26 such as arbitral awards.
27

28 The definition of “judgment debtor” has been deleted because that definition is no longer 29 necessary in light of the Committee’s decision at its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting not 30 to include a registration procedure in the Act.
31

32 With regard to the problems leading to changes in this section, see generally the 33 discussion in section III(A) of the Study Report.
34

35 SECTION 2. SCOPE OF THE ACT.

36 (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), this Act applies to any foreign country 37 judgment to the extent that the foreign country judgment

38 (1) grants or denies recovery of a sum of money; and 39 (2) is under the law of the foreign country where rendered final,

1 conclusive, and, if the foreign country judgment grants recovery of a sum of money, enforceable, 2 even though an appeal from the foreign country judgment is pending or the foreign country 3 judgment is subject to appeal in the foreign country where the foreign country judgment was 4 rendered.

5 (b) This Act does not apply to a foreign country judgment, even though the 6 foreign country judgment grants or denies recovery of a sum of money, [to the extent that] the 7 foreign country judgment is 8 (i) a judgment for taxes;

9 (ii) a fine or other penalty; or

10 (iii) a judgment for divorce, support, or maintenance, or other judgment 11 rendered in connection with domestic relations matters.

12 (c) The party seeking to have a foreign country judgment recognized has the 13 burden of establishing that the foreign country judgment meets the requirements of subsection 14 (a). [The party seeking to avoid recognition of the foreign country judgment has the burden of 15 establishing that the foreign country judgment is one excluded from the scope of this Act under 16 subsection (b).]

17 Reporter's Notes

18
19 This section is based on Section 2 of the current Act. Subsection (b) contains material 20 that formerly was included as part of the definition of "foreign judgment." For discussion of the 21 problems caused by inclusion of this material in the definition of "foreign judgment," see Study 22 Report, section III (A) (3).

23
24 The domestic relations exclusion has been redrafted to make it clear that all judgments in 25 domestic relations matters are excluded from the Act, not just judgments "for support" as 26 provided in the current Act. See Study Report, section III (A) (4).

27
28 The qualifying phrase "if the foreign country judgment grants recovery of a sum of 29 money" has been added to the requirement that the foreign country judgment be enforceable

1 where rendered in light of the fact that only judgments that grant recovery are eligible to be 2 enforced. If the judgment denies recovery, then there is no money judgment to be enforced.
3

4 Section 2 of the current Act does not contain any provision indicating who has the burden 5 of proof to establish whether a foreign country judgment is within the scope of the Act. Courts 6 generally have held that the burden of proof is on the person seeking recognition to establish that 7 the judgment is final, conclusive and enforceable where rendered. E.g., Mayekawa Mfg. Co.
8 Ltd. v. Sasaki, 888 P.2d 183, 189 (Wash. App. 1995) (burden of proof on creditor to establish 9 judgment is final, conclusive, and enforceable where rendered); Bridgeway Corp. v. Citibank, 45 10 F.Supp.2d 276, 285 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (party seeking recognition must establish that there is a 11 final judgment, conclusive and enforceable where rendered); S.C.Chimexim S.A. v. Velco 12 Enterprises, Ltd., 36 F. Supp.2d 206, 212 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (Plaintiff has the burden of 13 establishing conclusive effect). This draft follows those decisions. See Study Report, section III 14 (B) (1).
15

16 The Committee decided at its April, 2004 meeting that the burden of proof with regard to 17 the exclusions from the scope of the Act stated in subsection (b) should not be placed on the 18 party seeking recognition, but did not expressly make the further decision that the Act should 19 state that this burden is placed on the party opposing recognition of the foreign country 20 judgment. This Draft places that burden on the party opposing recognition. The provision is 21 placed in brackets to highlight the fact the Committee has not expressly made a decision on this 22 issue.

24 The Committee decided at its April, 2004 meeting to add the “to the extent” language of 25 subsection (2)(a) in order to make it clear that, if only part of a foreign country judgment meets 26 the requirements of subsection (2)(a), then the foreign country judgment may be recognized 27 under this Act to that extent. This Draft adds similar language to subsection(2)(b). The 28 language is placed in brackets to call the Committee’s attention to it, as the Committee has not 29 expressly made a decision on this issue.
30

31 Comments to be added:
32

- 33 (1) A comment regarding the fact that the requirement that a foreign country judgment be 34 “final, conclusive and enforceable where rendered” involves three distinct concepts, all 35 of which must be present in order to satisfy the requirement; 36
37 (2) A comment discussing the rationale for the exclusions from coverage and noting that the 38 excluded types of judgments may be enforced under principles of comity; 39
40 (3) A comment discussing the fact that some countries set out VAT taxes as a separate 41 element of a judgment from the purchase price and that this should not make the 42 judgment to that extent one for taxes.
43

44 SECTION 3. STANDARDS FOR RECOGNITION OF A FOREIGN COUNTRY

1     JUDGMENT.

2             (a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), a court of this State shall 3 recognize a foreign country judgment within the scope of this Act.

4             (b) A court of this State may not recognize a foreign country judgment if 5                     (1) the foreign country judgment was rendered under a judicial system, 6 which does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of 7 due process of law;

8                     (2) the foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant;

9     or

10                    (3) the foreign court did not have jurisdiction over the subject matter.

11             (c) A court of this State need not recognize a foreign country judgment if 12                     (1) the defendant in the proceedings in the foreign court did not receive 13 notice of the proceedings in sufficient time to enable the defendant to defend;

14                     (2) the foreign country judgment was obtained by fraud that deprived the 15 losing party of an adequate opportunity to present its case;

16                     (3) the substantive law on which the foreign country judgment is based is 17 repugnant to the public policy of this State or of the United States;

18                     (4) the foreign country judgment conflicts with another final and 19 conclusive judgment;

20                     (5) the proceeding in the foreign court was contrary to an agreement 21 between the parties under which the dispute in question was to be settled otherwise than by 22 proceedings in that foreign court;

1 (6) in the case of jurisdiction based only on personal service, the foreign 2 court was a seriously inconvenient forum for the trial of the action;

3 [(7) the foreign country judgment was rendered in circumstances that raise 4 substantial doubt about the integrity of the rendering court with respect to the foreign country 5 judgment;] or

6 [(8) the specific proceedings in the foreign court leading to the foreign 7 country judgment were not compatible with the requirements of due process of law.]

8 (d) The person opposing recognition of the foreign country judgment has the 9 burden of establishing that one of the grounds for nonrecognition stated in subsection (b) or (c) 10 exists.

11 Reporter's Notes

12
13 This section is based on Section 4 of the current Act, and is the same in substance, except 14 as noted below. For the general context of these amendments, see Study Report, section III (D), 15 and particularly, section III (D)(3).

17 Subsection (c)(2) clarifies the type of “fraud” that will serve as a ground for denying 18 recognition. Courts interpreting this provision have found that only extrinsic fraud — conduct of 19 the prevailing party that deprived the losing party of an adequate opportunity to present his case 20 — is sufficient. The Draft follows these cases. See Study Report, Section III (D).
21

22 The public policy exception in subsection 4(b)(3) of the current Act says that recognition 23 may be denied if “the cause of action” is repugnant to the State’s public policy. Based on this 24 “cause of action” language, some courts have refused to find that a public policy challenge based 25 on something other than repugnancy of the foreign cause of action comes within this exception.
26 E.g., Southwest Livestock & Trucking Co., Inc. v. Ramon, 169 F.3d 317 (5th Cir. 1999) (refusing 27 to deny recognition to Mexican judgment on promissory note with interest rate of 48%); 28 Guinness PLC v. Ward, 955 F.2d 875 (4th Cir. 1992) (challenge to recognition based on post-29 judgment settlement could not be asserted under public policy exception); The Society of 30 Lloyd’s v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325 (5th Cir. 2002) ( rejecting argument legal standards applied to 31 establish elements of breach of contract violated public policy because cause of action for breach 32 of contract itself is not contrary to state public policy); cf Bachchan v. India Abroad 33 Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1992) (judgment creditor argued British 34 libel judgment should be recognized despite argument it violated First Amendment because New 35 York recognizes a cause of action for libel). Other courts have applied the public policy

1 exception without taking any notice of this language. See Study Report, Section III (D)(2)(ii).

2
3 At its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting, the Committee decided that the public 4 policy exception of subsection (c)(3) should be rewritten to focus on the substantive law on 5 which the judgment is based rather than on either the judgment itself or the cause of action. This 6 brings the Act’s public policy exception more in line with the traditional focus of public policy 7 exceptions.

8
9 The language “or of the United States” has been added to the public policy exception to 10 make it clear that the relevant public policy is that of both the State in which recognition is 11 sought and that of the United States. Most courts have recognized that state public policy also 12 includes U.S. public policy (and principles of federalism would seem to dictate this result), but 13 not all courts considering the issue have done so. Compare Bachchan v. India Abroad 14 Publications, Inc., 585 N.Y.S.2d 661 (Sup.Ct. N.Y. 1992) (British libel judgment denied 15 recognition because it violates First Amendment; when public policy is found in U.S.
16 Constitution, denial of recognition is constitutionally mandated) with Reading & Bates Constr.
17 Co. v. Baker Energy Resources Corp., 976 S.W.2d 702 (Tex. App. 1998) (refusing to consider 18 public policy argument based on U.S. patent law because relevant policy is that of the state, and 19 patent infringement is a matter of federal, not state, policy).

20 21 Subsection (c)(7) is a new subsection that is based on a similar provision contained in 22 section 5(a)(ii) of the ALI International Jurisdiction and Judgments Project. Under the current 23 Recognition Act, a court must deny recognition to a foreign country judgment if 24 “the judgment was rendered under a judicial system which does not provide impartial tribunals 25 or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law.” This provision has been 26 interpreted as focusing on the judicial system of the foreign country as a whole, rather than on 27 whether the particular judicial proceeding leading to the foreign country judgment was impartial 28 and fair. E.g., The Society of Lloyd’s v. Turner, 303 F.3d 325, 330 (5th Cir. 2002); CIBC Mellon 29 Trust Co. v. Mora Hotel Corp., N.V., 743 N.Y.S.2d 408, 415 (N.Y. App. 2002); Society of 30 Lloyd’s v. Ashenden, 233 F.3d 473, 477 (7th Cir. 2000). Subsection (c)(7) would allow the 31 court also to consider a lack of impartiality and fairness in the individual proceeding leading to 32 the foreign country judgment. See Study Report, section III (D)(1).

33
34 During consideration of subsection (c)(7) at its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting, 35 members of the Committee expressed support for subsection (c)(7), noting that bribery and other 36 forms of judicial misconduct can be a real issue with regard to certain foreign country 37 judgments. On the other hand, Committee members also noted that the language of (c)(7) does 38 not explicitly address the broader issue of procedural unfairness in the specific proceedings 39 leading to the foreign country judgment, and the Committee asked the Reporter to draft other 40 language that would do so. Subsection (c)(8) is designed to address the issue of procedural 41 unfairness in specific proceedings. Subsections (c)(7) and (c)(8) could be combined in one 42 provision, as the Act does in subsection (b)(1) with regard to the concepts of impartiality and 43 fairness in the context of the judicial system as a whole. For purposes of this Draft, however, the 44 provisions have been placed in separate sections to underline the fact they address different 45 concerns. Both provisions also are bracketed in order to highlight the need for further

1 Committee discussion.

2
3 The addition of subsections (c)(7) and (8) raise (at least for the Reporter) a question 4 about the relationship of these provisions to subsection (b)(1), which focuses on whether the 5 judicial system as a whole provides impartial tribunals and is compatible with the requirements 6 of due process of law. Is (b)(1) redundant in light of the addition of (c)(7) and (8), which allow a 7 focus on these issues in the individual proceedings leading to the foreign country judgment? The 8 Reporter believes that subsection (b)(1) still serves an important purpose. Subsection (b)(1) is a 9 mandatory ground for denying recognition, while subsections (c)(7) and (8) are discretionary.
10 Thus, if the entire judicial system in which a foreign country judgment was rendered does not 11 provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with due process, the court is required to 12 deny recognition to the foreign country judgment. On the other hand, if there is corruption or 13 lack of due process in the particular proceedings leading to the foreign country judgment under 14 subsection (c)(7) or (8), the court may, but need not, deny recognition. For example, a court 15 might decide not to exercise its discretion to deny recognition despite evidence of corruption or 16 procedural unfairness because the party resisting recognition failed to raise the issue on appeal 17 from the foreign country judgment in the rendering state and the evidence establishes that, if the 18 party had done so, appeal would have been an adequate mechanism for correcting the 19 transgressions of the lower court.
20

21 Subsection (d) allocates the burden of proof on the issue of nonrecognition to the party 22 opposing recognition of the foreign judgment. Current section 4 is silent as to who has the 23 burden of proof. Courts have taken different positions on the issue. Some courts, including the 24 New York courts, hold that the person seeking recognition has the burden of establishing the 25 nonexistence of the mandatory grounds for nonrecognition, while the person resisting 26 recognition has the burden of establishing the existence of one of the nonmandatory grounds, 27 E.g., Bridgeway Corp. v. Citibank, 45 F.Supp. 2d 276, 285 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (Plaintiff has burden 28 to show no mandatory basis under 4(a) for recognition exists; defendant has burden regarding 29 nondiscretionary bases); S.C.Chimexim S.A. v. Velco Enterprises, Ltd., 36 F.Supp.2d 206, 212 30 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (burden of proof is on plaintiff regarding mandatory requirements and on 31 defendant regarding discretionary requirements); Dresdner Bank, AG v. Haque, 161 F.Supp.2d 32 259, 263 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) (plaintiff has burden of proof no mandatory ground for 33 nonrecognition exists; defendant has burden of proof to establish that a discretionary basis for 34 nonrecognition applies); Banque Libanaise Pour Le Commerce v. Khreich, 915 F.2d 1000, 1005 35 (5th Cir. 1990) (discretionary grounds are phrased as affirmative defenses and thus burden of 36 proof regarding them is on the defendant). Other courts hold that the person resisting 37 recognition has the burden of proof with regard to both mandatory and discretionary grounds for 38 nonrecognition. E.g., Kam-Tech Systems, Ltd. V. Yardeni, 774 A.2d 644, 649 (N.J. App. 2001) 39 (burden of proof to establish ground for nonenforcement should be on party asserting the ground, 40 though burden might be shifted when fundamental fairness warrants it, as, for example, when the 41 information about the foreign proceeding is peculiarly within the knowledge or control of the 42 party seeking enforcement or is inordinately burdensome for the opponent to obtain); The 43 Courage Co. LLC v. The ChemShare Corp., 93 S.W.3d 323, 331 (Tex. App. 2002) (party 44 seeking to avoid recognition has burden to prove ground for nonrecognition); Dart v. Balaam, 45 953 S.W.2d 478, 480 (Tex. App. 1997) (burden is on the defendant regarding all grounds for

1 nonrecognition); Southwest Livestock & Trucking Co., Inc. v. Ramon, 169 F.3d 317, 320 (5th 2 Cir. 1999) (court must recognize judgment unless judgment debtor establishes one of the ten 3 specific grounds for nonrecognition). See Study Report, section III (D)(4). The Committee 4 decided at its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting that placing the burden of proof on the 5 party opposing recognition with regard to both mandatory and discretionary grounds for 6 nonrecognition was appropriate.

7 8 Some cases, such as Kam-Tech, cited above, have recognized an exception to this 9 allocation when fundamental fairness indicates that the burden should be placed on the party 10 seeking enforcement, for example when the information about the foreign proceeding is 11 peculiarly within the knowledge or control of the party seeking enforcement or it is inordinately 12 burdensome for the party opposing recognition to obtain information about the foreign 13 proceeding. The Committee may wish to consider whether such an exception should be included 14 in subsection (d).

15
16 Another issue the Committee may wish to consider is whether (c)(4) should provide more 17 guidance as to when it is appropriate for the court to deny recognition to a foreign country 18 judgment because it conflicts with another final and conclusive judgment. For example, an 19 analogous provision in the Hague Convention Draft on Exclusive Choice of Court Agreements, 20 Art. 9, para. 1(f) provides that recognition may be denied when

21
22 the judgment is inconsistent with a judgment given in a dispute between the same parties in 23 the requested State, or it is inconsistent with an earlier judgment given in another State 24 between the same parties and involving the same cause of action, provided that the earlier 25 judgment fulfils the conditions necessary for its recognition in the requested State ... .

26
27 Comments to be added:

- 28
29 (1) A comment explaining that the standard for determining whether a judgment violates 30 public policy is very high and thus only a narrow category of cases will be excluded 31 based on the public policy exception;
32
33 (2) A comment providing examples of the application of subsection (c)(7), if it is adopted by 34 the Committee;
35
36 (3) A comment explaining that the due process standard is measured by fundamental 37 fairness, not by the intricacies of what the courts have held due process to require in the 38 domestic context.

39
40 SECTION 4. [PERSONAL JURISDICTION.]

41 (a) A foreign country judgment shall not be refused recognition for lack of 42 personal jurisdiction if

- 1 (1) the defendant was served personally in the foreign country;
- 2 (2) the defendant voluntarily appeared in the proceedings, other than for 3 the purpose of protecting property seized or threatened with seizure in the proceedings or of 4 contesting the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant;
- 5 (3) the defendant, prior to the commencement of the proceedings, had 6 agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign court with respect to the subject matter 7 involved;
- 8 (4) the defendant was domiciled in the foreign country when the 9 proceedings were instituted or was a corporation or other form of business organization that had 10 its principal place of business in, or was organized under the laws of, the foreign country;
- 11 (5) the defendant had a business office in the foreign country and the 12 proceedings in the foreign court involved a [cause of action] [claim for relief] arising out of 13 business done by the defendant through that office in the foreign country; or
- 14 (6) the defendant operated a motor vehicle or airplane in the foreign 15 country and the proceedings involved a [cause of action] [claim for relief] arising out of such 16 operation.

17 (b) The list of bases for personal jurisdiction in subsection (a) is not exclusive, 18 and the courts of this State may recognize other bases of personal jurisdiction as sufficient to 19 support a foreign country judgment.

20 Reporter's Notes

21
22 The substance of this section is the same as section 5 of the current Act, except as noted 23 below. See Study Report, section III (E).

24
25 Subsection (a)(4) has been revised to extend its concept to other forms of business 26 organization in addition to corporations pursuant to a Committee decision at the April, 2004

1 drafting committee meeting.

2
3 Comments to be added:

4
5 (1) A comment to subsection (b)(3) indicating that the “agreed” language of that 6 subsection allows the defendant to challenge the validity of the purported agreement to submit to 7 the foreign court’s jurisdiction.
8

9 SECTION 5. PROCEDURE FOR RECOGNITION OF A FOREIGN COUNTRY

10 JUDGMENT.

11 (a) If recognition of a foreign country judgment is sought in a pending action, the 12 issue of recognition may be raised by counterclaim, cross-claim or affirmative defense.

13 (b) If recognition of a foreign country judgment is sought as an original matter, 14 the issue of recognition shall be raised by filing an action for recognition of the foreign country 15 judgment.

16 Reporter’s Notes

17
18 The most troublesome interpretative issues that have arisen with regard to the current Act 19 are those relating to the appropriate procedure for making the determination as to whether to 20 recognize a foreign country judgment. The current Act is silent on this question. At common 21 law, a foreign judgment, whether of a state or of a foreign country, was recognized and enforced 22 by bringing an action on the foreign judgment in the courts of the state where recognition and 23 enforcement was sought to have the foreign judgment domesticated. Once domesticated, the 24 judgment was treated as a judgment of the state in which the action to domesticate the judgment 25 was filed. The issue of recognition and enforcement of foreign country judgments under the 26 current Act still is most often raised by bringing an action on the foreign country judgment, and 27 the current Act has worked fairly smoothly when the issue of recognition is raised in the context 28 of such an action.
29

30 With regard to sister state judgments, however, the registration procedure provided by 31 the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act is available in most states. That Act allows 32 a judgment creditor to obtain enforcement of a sister state judgment simply by filing an 33 authenticated copy of the judgment in the clerk’s office in the forum state. By its terms, the 34 Enforcement Act only applies to sister state judgments, and, therefore, its provisions do not 35 provide for raising or determination of issues relating to recognition of a foreign judgment. With 36 regard to sister state judgments, recognition is mandated by the Full Faith and Credit clause.
37 Nevertheless, some courts have held that its registration procedure can be utilized with regard to

1 a foreign country judgment without any separate determination of whether the foreign country
2 judgment is entitled to recognition under the Act. E.g., Society of Lloyd’s v. Ashenden, 233
3 F.3d 473 (7th Cir. 2000). Other courts have held (correctly, it would seem) that the Enforcement 4 Act only applies to enforcement of foreign judgments and, therefore, at best would be available 5 as a means of enforcement of a foreign country judgment only after a separate proceeding had 6 made the determination that the foreign country judgment was entitled to recognition. E.g., 7 Matusevitch v. Telnikoff, 877 F.Supp. 1 (D.D.C. 1995); Hennessy v. Marshall, 682 S.W.2d 340 8 (Tex. App. 1984). In fact, the lack of any procedure for raising defenses to recognition, as 9 opposed to defenses to enforcement, under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act 10 has led some courts to find that if the Recognition Act is interpreted to authorize the use of the 11 Enforcement Act as the means for determining whether a foreign country judgment should be 12 recognized as well as enforced, then the Recognition Act is unconstitutional as applied when the 13 Enforcement Act is the procedure used because the party opposing recognition is denied notice 14 and a hearing with regard to issues related to recognition of the foreign country judgment. E.g., 15 Detamore v. Sullivan, 731 S.W.2d 122 (Tex. App. 1987); Plastics Engineering Inc. v. Diamond
16 Plastics Corp., 764 S.W. 2d 924 (Tex. App. 1989). (In Don Dockstader Motors, Ltd. v. Patal 17 Enterprises, Ltd, 794 S.W. 2d 760 (Tex. 1990), the Texas Supreme Court disapproved of the 18 decisions in Detamore and Plastics Engineering to the extent those decisions were in conflict 19 with its decision that the current Act was constitutional when the procedure for recognition and 20 enforcement was the filing of an action on the judgment rather than use of the Enforcement Act 21 procedure; because the Detamore and Plastics Engineering decisions were based specifically on 22 use of the Enforcement Act rather than an action on the judgment, however, their core rationale 23 apparently remains intact.)
24

25 Some states have nonuniform amendments to the current Act that provide for a 26 recognition and enforcement procedure. New York, for example, provides that a foreign country 27 judgment is enforceable “by an action on the judgment, a motion for summary judgment in lieu 28 of complaint, or in a pending action by counterclaim, cross-claim or affirmative defense.” 29 Florida has a nonuniform amendment creating a registration procedure in which issues of 30 recognition may be raised.
31

32 For further discussion of these issues, see Study Report, section III (C).
33

34 This section explicitly sets out the ways in which the issue of recognition may be raised.
35 It contemplates that recognition may come up in the context of a pending proceeding (usually, 36 although not always, because one of the parties wants to assert the preclusive effect of the 37 foreign country judgment) or as an original matter. When the issue of recognition is raised as an 38 original matter, this section follows those states that have required that the party seeking 39 recognition bring an action on the foreign country judgment requesting that the court recognize 40 the foreign country judgment. As is current practice, such an action could, and often would, 41 include a request for relief in addition to recognition, such as a request that the court enforce the 42 judgment or a request for prejudgment relief to preserve assets pending determination of the 43 action. The Draft thus preserves the common law action on the foreign country judgment, and 44 makes it the exclusive way in which to seek recognition of a foreign country judgment as an 45 original matter.

1 At its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting, the Committee considered and ultimately 2 rejected a provision that would alternatively have allowed the recognition issue to be raised 3 through a registration procedure analogous to that provided by the Uniform Enforcement of 4 Foreign Judgments Act for sister-state judgments. The Committee decided that a registration 5 procedure was not appropriate in the context of recognition of foreign country judgments. The 6 Committee concluded that the safeguards that would be required in a foreign country judgment 7 registration procedure in order to adequately protect the judgment debtor would remove most, if 8 not all, of the efficacy of a registration procedure for the judgment creditor.
9

10 A registration procedure represents a balance between the interest of the judgment 11 creditor in obtaining quick and efficient enforcement of a judgment when the judgment debtor 12 has already been provided with an opportunity to litigate the underlying issues and the interest of 13 the judgment debtor in being provided an adequate opportunity to raise and litigate issues 14 regarding whether the foreign country judgment should be recognized. In the context of sister-15 state judgments, this balance favors use of a truncated procedure such as that found in the 16 Enforcement Act. Recognition of sister-state judgments normally is mandated by the Full Faith 17 and Credit Clause. Courts recognize only a very limited number of grounds for denying full 18 faith and credit to a sister-state judgment – that the rendering court lacked jurisdiction, that the 19 judgment was procured by fraud, that the judgment has been satisfied, or that the limitations 20 period has expired. Thus, the judgment debtor with regard to a sister-state judgment normally 21 does not have any grounds for opposing recognition and enforcement of the judgment. The 22 extremely limited grounds for denying full faith and credit to a sister-state judgment reflect the 23 fact such judgments will have been rendered by a court that is subject to the same due process 24 limitations and the same overlap of federal statutory and constitutional law as the forum state’s 25 courts, and, to a large extent, the same body of court precedent and socio-economic ideas as 26 those shaping the law of the forum state. Therefore, there is a strong presumption of fairness and 27 competence attached to a sister-state judgment that justifies use of a registration procedure.
28

29 The balance between the benefits and costs of a registration procedure is significantly 30 different, however, in the context of recognition and enforcement of foreign country judgments.
31 Unlike the limited grounds for denying full faith and credit to a sister-state judgment, the 32 Recognition Act provides a number of grounds upon which recognition of a foreign country 33 judgment may be denied. Determination of whether these grounds apply requires the court to 34 look behind the foreign country judgment to evaluate the law and the judicial system under 35 which the foreign country judgment was rendered. The existence of these grounds for 36 nonrecognition reflects the fact there is less expectation that foreign country courts will follow 37 procedures comporting with U.S. notions of due process and jurisdiction or that those courts will 38 apply laws viewed as substantively tolerable by U.S. standards. In some situations, there also 39 may be suspicions of unfairness or fraud in the foreign country proceedings. These differences 40 between sister-state judgments and foreign country judgments provide a justification for 41 requiring judicial involvement in the decision whether to recognize a foreign country judgment 42 in all cases in which that issue is raised.
43

44 The Drafting Committee considered whether a registration procedure could be devised 45 that would adequately protect the judgment debtor in the foreign country judgment context while

1 still providing expedited recognition and enforcement for the judgment creditor. Unlike the 2 Enforcement Act registration procedure for sister-state judgments, the draft registration 3 procedure considered by the Committee provided that the filing of the foreign country judgment 4 with the clerk of court had no effect for 45 days after notice of registration of the foreign country 5 judgment was sent to the judgment debtor. The Committee concluded that, in order to 6 adequately protect the judgment debtor, the registration procedure also would have to require 7 that the judgment debtor be served with notice of the registration in the same manner as the 8 judgment debtor would be served with process if an action on the judgment were filed, rather 9 than simply being mailed a notice of registration of the judgment as provided in the Enforcement 10 Act.

11
12 Two of the main advantages of a registration procedure to the judgment creditor, 13 however, are the ability to provide notice by mail to the judgment debtor in lieu of more formal 14 service of process and to obtain the right to collect on the judgment simply by registering it.
15 Once the Committee determined that these two features must be removed in order to strike an 16 appropriate balance between the interests of the judgment creditor and the judgment debtor in 17 the foreign country judgment context, the Committee concluded that the resulting registration 18 procedure would not be likely to be much more efficient than simply filing an action on the 19 foreign country judgment.

20 21 Further, a registration procedure has at least one significant disadvantage for the 22 judgment creditor – because it does not involve the court, it does not allow the judgment creditor 23 to obtain prejudgment relief. Thus, if a judgment creditor is concerned about assets of the 24 judgment debtor disappearing or otherwise wishes to seek prejudgment relief, the judgment 25 creditor likely will opt for an action on the foreign country judgment even if a registration 26 procedure is available as an alternative.

27
28 For these reasons, the Committee decided at its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting 29 that a registration procedure was not an appropriate means for recognition of foreign country 30 judgments. This Draft thus deletes the provisions of the April Draft dealing with a registration 31 procedure.

32
33 The Committee also briefly considered whether the New York approach, which allows a 34 judgment creditor to bring an action on a foreign country judgment by filing a motion for 35 summary judgment in lieu of complaint, might be adopted. Because the New York approach 36 would involve a rule of civil procedure, it was suggested that this approach would run into 37 enactment difficulties in states in which rules of procedure are adopted by the State Supreme 38 Court rather than by the legislature. Therefore, the Committee decided not to pursue this 39 alternative.

40 41 SECTION 6. EFFECT OF RECOGNITION OF A FOREIGN COUNTRY

42 JUDGMENT UNDER THIS ACT. If the court in a proceeding under Section 5 of this Act

43 finds that the foreign country judgment is entitled to recognition under this Act, then the foreign

1 country judgment

2 (a) is conclusive between the parties to the extent that it grants or denies recovery 3 of a sum of money; and

4 (b) is enforceable in the same manner and to the same extent as the judgment of a 5 sister state of the United States that is entitled to full faith and credit.

6 Reporter's Notes

7 The substance of subsection (a) is the same as that in Section 3 of the current Act. The 8 material has been relocated as part of a reordering of the Act necessitated by the addition of 9 provisions dealing with the procedure for recognition of foreign country judgments.

10
11 The phrase “and to the same extent” has been added to subsection (b) to make it clear 12 that recognition of a foreign country judgment places that judgment on an equal footing with a 13 foreign judgment from a sister state of the United States with regard to its enforcement.
14 Recognition of a foreign country judgment thus still leaves enforcement of the foreign country 15 judgment open to challenge on any ground that would be available to challenge the enforcement 16 of a sister state judgment.

17
18 Former subsection (b) was deleted as unnecessary in light of the Committee’s decision at 19 its April, 2004 drafting committee meeting to delete the draft registration procedure.
20

21 SECTION 7. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS PENDING APPEAL OF FOREIGN 22 COUNTRY JUDGMENT. If a party establishes that an appeal from the foreign country 23 judgment is pending or will be taken, the court may stay any proceedings with regard to 24 recognition or enforcement of the foreign country judgment until the appeal is concluded, the 25 time for appeal expires, or the party appealing has had a sufficient period of time to prosecute 26 the appeal and has failed to do so.

27 Reporter's Notes

28
29 This section is the same substantively as section 6 of the current Act, except that it adds 30 as an additional measure for the duration of the stay “the time for appeal expires.” 31

32 The reference to “judgment debtor” has been changed to a reference to “a party,” as the 1 party seeking to stay the recognition proceedings may not necessarily be a judgment debtor. For 2 example, if the plaintiff in the foreign country proceedings were denied relief, that party might 3 seek to stay recognition of the foreign country judgment pending appeal of that denial.

4

5 Subsections (b) and (c) of the April Draft have been deleted as unnecessary in light of the 6 Committee's decision to delete the registration procedure.
7

8 SECTION 8. PERIOD OF TIME IN WHICH TO COMMENCE AN ACTION.

9 (a) An action to recognize a foreign country judgment for purposes of having that 10 foreign country judgment enforced by this State must be commenced within the earlier of the 11 time period during which the foreign country judgment may be enforced in the rendering state or 12 fifteen years from the date that the foreign country judgment was entered in the rendering state.

13 (b) This section does not apply to recognition of a foreign country judgment 14 solely for the purpose of giving the foreign country judgment preclusive effect or when 15 recognition of the foreign country judgment is sought solely to use the foreign country judgment 16 as a setoff of liability.

17 Reporter's Notes

18 19 The current Act does not contain a statute of limitations. Some courts have applied the 20 state's general statute of limitations, E.g., Vrozos v. Sarantopoulos, 552 N.E.2d 1053 (Ill. App.
21 1990) (as Recognition Act contains no statute of limitations, general five-year statute of 22 limitations applies), while others have applied the statute of limitations applicable with regard to 23 enforcement of a domestic judgment, E.g., La Societe Anonyme Goro v. Conveyor Accessories, 24 Inc., 677 N.E. 2d 30 (Ill. App. 1997). See Study Report, section III (F)(1).
25

26 The Recognition Act only applies to foreign country judgments that are enforceable 27 where rendered. Thus, if the period of limitations on enforcement has expired in the rendering 28 state, the foreign country judgment would not be subject to the Recognition Act. At its April, 29 2004 drafting committee meeting, the Committee decided that, while the period during which a 30 foreign country judgment may be recognized under this Act normally should be measured by the 31 period during which it is enforceable in the rendering state, when recognition is sought for 32 purposes of enforcement of the foreign country judgment in the forum state, an outer limit of 33 fifteen years should be placed on the ability to bring an action seeking recognition of the foreign 34 country judgment.
35

1 This section only applies to an action seeking recognition for purposes of enforcing the 2 foreign country judgment. It does not apply to recognition of the foreign country judgment for 3 the purpose of giving the foreign country judgment preclusive effect or for the purpose of 4 asserting the foreign country judgment as a setoff.
5

6 SECTION 9. SAVING CLAUSE. This Act does not prevent the recognition under 7 principles of comity or otherwise of a foreign country judgment not within the scope of this Act.

8 Reporter's Notes
9

10 This section is the same in substance as Section 7 of the current Act. The use of the 11 defined term "foreign country judgment" to mean any judgment of a foreign country, including 12 those not covered by this Act, rather than the defined term "foreign judgment" in Section 7 of 13 the current Act, which was defined as limited to foreign judgments covered by the Act, is 14 intended to resolve the ambiguity noted by courts and commentators as to the meaning of the 15 saving clause. See Study Report, section III (A)(3).
16

17 The section has been rewritten based on comments at the April, 2004 drafting committee 18 meeting.
19

20 SECTION 10. UNIFORMITY OF INTERPRETATION. This Act shall be construed 21 in a manner that will effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law of those states 22 which enact it.

23 Reporter's Notes
24

25 This section is the same as Section 8 of the current Act.
26

27 SECTION 11. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the Foreign Country Money 28 Judgments Recognition Act (200_).
