

From: Carl Ernst mailto:[carl.ernst@ernstpublishing.com]

Sent: Friday, February 13, 2009 1:29 PM

To: Fry, Patricia B. (Emeritus)

Cc: 'Marc L. Aronson'

Subject: RE: ULONA distribution

Much as I hate to be a bother, in this age of computer databases, biometrics and use of old 20th technology (such as the camera for getting a picture of the signer to copying the identity documents), and the sophisticated logic for identification matching (see for example the Experian Knowledge ID product), I cannot see how legislating a weak identification provision does anything but make Notaries Public superfluous.

I wish I have time to tilt at this and other windmills. When there is a once-in-a-generation chance to save the honorable office of Notary Public, it is a shame that the participants are bound by their myopia.

Carl R. Ernst, CEO
Ernst Publishing Co., LLC
21950 N. 90th St.
Scottsdale, AZ 85255
480-563-6479
480-563-6480 (fax)
carl.ernst@ernstpublishing.com
www.ernstpublishing.com