17 (c) In addition, Article 1 contains general definitions and principles of construction that apply to 18 SOURCES: Sales (July, 1996); Licenses (May, 1997).

19 Notes

20 1. Definitional sources are stated in brackets at the end of each definition.

21

22 2. Issues relating to specific definitions.

23

24 (a) Conspicuous. The last sentence in the July, 1996 definition of “conspicuous” has been
25 ground that the listed circumstances should be regarded as factors to be considered rather than as a
26 safe harbor. Unlike Section 1-201(10), the definition does not state that the decision is for a court
27 Depending on the circumstances, the decision is for the trier of fact. The definition does not conform

2B-102(a)(6) (May, 1997).

The policy questions are whether (1) compliance with any one of the “factors” in the last sentence constitute a “safe harbor” and (2) the court or jury should decide the question. What ever is agreed ultimately be in Article 1. See Section 1-201(11) (April, 1997).

(b) Court. Article 2B-102(a)(9a) defines “court” to include an “arbitrator or other dispute resolution official. A tighter definition would state an “arbitrator or other person authorized to adjudicate a dispute. The definition could include a mediator.

(c) Delivery. “Delivery” means the transfer of either “physical possession or control of goods. This Article, “control” includes goods that are delivered to an agent of the seller or buyer or are subject to a security interest in title.

(d) Electronic contracting. Article 2 follows Article 2B in the definition of terms relating to electronic contracting. See Section 2-102(a)(13-16).

(e) Good faith. The definition in Section 2-102(a)(20) was adopted at the July, 1996 meeting of the Conference and conforms to Article 2B but not to Article 5-102(a)(7), which states that good faith means the conduct or transaction concerned.

(f) Goods. Section 2-102(a)(21) states what “goods” are and what they are not. For purposes of this Article, goods include “future goods,” i.e., goods that at the time of contracting are “neither existing nor identified.” 2-102(a)(19). Excluded from the definition are the “subject of foreign exchange transactions,” see Section 5-102(a)(2), and certain types of Article 9 collateral, including new collateral types proposed in revised Article 9, such as “accounts” and “payment intangibles.”

Suppose Party A owns a deposit account in Bank and “sells” it for value to Party B. Under the revision of Article 9, this transaction is not treated as a secured transaction. See Section 9-112(a)(3). 2-102(a)(21), the interest transferred is not treated as goods. What law, then, governs this transfer?

(g) Standard forms and standard terms. The July, 1996 Draft contained four new, important definitions: Standard form, standard term, manifest assent and opportunity to review. These were deleted from the July, 1997 Draft of Article 2.

SECTION 2-103. SCOPE.

(a) This article applies to transactions in goods.

(b) If a transaction involves both information and goods, this article applies to the aspects of the transaction which involve the goods and their performance and rights in the goods other than the physical medium of the information, its packaging, and its documentation. However, this article applies to a sale of a computer program.

1 not developed specifically for a particular transaction and that is embedded in goods other than a co
2 information processing machine, if the program was not the subject of a separate license with the b

3 2B-103(c) and (d)(3)]

4 (c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), to the extent that another article of this
5 transaction in goods, this article does not apply to the part of the transaction governed by the other a

6 2B-103(b)]

7 (d) This article does not apply to a foreign exchange transaction.

8 Notes

9 1. Article 2 covers “transactions in goods.” The phrase “unless the context otherwise requi

20 3. Although not stated in Section 2-103, courts may extend Article 2 by analogy to transact
21 scope if the extension is relevant in principle and appropriate in the circumstances. See Barco Auto
22 Corp. v. PSI Cosmetics, Inc., 478 N.Y.S.2d 505 (N. Y. Civ. Ct. 1984) (explores theory of extension

24 not sales unless the particular sections that apply are limited to contracts for sale.

26 4. Embedded software. Subsection (b) deals with transactions where both goods and info

30 or lease of a copy of a computer program that was not developed specifically for a particular transac
31 “embedded in goods” is excluded by Section 2B-103(d)(3) and is governed by Article 2.

32
33 Further coordination with Article 2B is needed on embedded software.

34
35 5. Subsection (c), which is subject to subsection (b), delineates the line between Article 2 a 36 the UCC, without attempting to define it. It follows Section 2B-103(b).

38 More precision may be required. For example, a transaction may involve both a contract for

9 security agreement. If the buyer, who is also a debtor, is a consumer, to what part of the transaction
2 apply? Arguably, Section 2-206(a) covers terms in the record dealing with the sale but not terms relating to
3 agreement. But there may be overlaps in terms, particularly those involving payment.

5 6. Foreign exchange contracts, defined in Section 2-102(a)(17), are excluded from Article 2.
6 the exclusion are based upon a recommendation by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Except for 7 moneys exclusion where the contract requires the delivery of tangible forms of money, the transaction is governed by 8 general contract principles and Article 4A.

10 To illustrate:

12 (a) An agreement to exchange goods for a $1,000 bill is a contract for sale, but the $1,000 bill is not sold
13 because it is “money in which the price is to be paid.” Section 2-102(a)(20). However, if goods are sold for 14 rare coin worth $1,000, the coin should be treated as goods and, in effect, there is a swap of goods for money.
15 applies and both parties are a seller and a buyer of goods.

17 (b) An agreement to exchange $1,000 for 1,500 German marks, without more, is a swap of money for money.
18 Under the definition of “foreign exchange transaction,” however, Article 2 does not apply unless the transaction involves 19 “multiple moneys in which one or both of the parties is obligated to make physical delivery, at the time or 20 the future, of banknotes, coins, or other form of legal tender of specie. If, however, the exchange is effected by 21 transfer of credits through the banking system, Article 2 does not apply.

27 (a) A transaction subject to this article is also subject to:

19 2. Section 2-104(a)(1) states that a transaction covered by Article two is subject to any appl
20 title statute of this state. Thus, if the applicable CTA provided a different rule than Section 2-501
21 title, the CTA would apply. Given the complexity and un-uniformity of various CTAs, the policy q

There are exceptions based upon CISG's more limited scope. CISG would not apply if the consumer, Article 2(a), or the subject of the sales was an "aircraft" or "electricity." Article 2(d) and applies to these transactions. In addition, CISG does not apply to certain aspects of a sale otherwise "not concerned with: (a) the validity of the contract or of any of its provisions or of any usage; (b) the contract may have on the property in the goods sold", Article 4, and "does not apply to the liability for personal injury caused by the goods to any person." Article 5. Article 2 applies to "validity" disputes, unconscionability, Section 2-105, claims for personal injury resulting from a breach of warranty, Section 2-302, disputes over title. Finally, CISG applies only to disputes between the parties to a contract for sale. Privity is a defense in a suit under CISG. Under Article 2, however, a remote buyer may be able to sue for breach of warranty. Lack of contractual privity, in these cases, is not a defense. See Sections 2-404 and 2-302. CISG does not define "seller" to exclude a seller under CISG, to the extent that lack of privity is not a defense. A U.S. States buyer of imported goods presumably can sue a Canadian seller for breach of warranty under CISG.

4. Subsection (a)(2) was changed at the March, 1997 meeting of the Drafting Committee to read: "The law of final consumer protection laws, whether legislative, administrative or judicial, is not limited to the law of the state in which the revision is enacted."

5. Subsection (a)(3) gives a partial, illustrative list of representative statutes that regulate either the contract for sale or the subject matter. In farm states, for example, legislation may protect the farmer, regulate the control the quality of farm products and regulate the labeling of seeds and other products. Similarly, contracts that purport to sell or transfer blood or blood products are frequently treated as contracts for sale. Some of these laws are enacted as non-uniform provisions of Article 2 and others are contained in state legislation.

Digital signature statutes. Careful analysis is required to discover the extent to which these other statutes either supplement or preempt the uniform text of Article 2. For example, several states have enacted digital signature laws which are broader and more complex than the definition of "authenticate" in Section 2-104(b). CISG purports to preempt these statutes relying upon Article 2B's definition of authentication. See Section 2-104(b), by limiting the statutes to which Article 2 is subject to those listed in Section 2-104(a)(3). CISG cannot achieve the Article 2B preemption result. Some commentators disagree with Article 2B's preemption result.

The choices for Article 2 are: (1) Follow Article 2B; (2) Add digital signature statutes to the list in subsection (a)(3) to which Article 2 is subject; or (3) Prepare a legislative note which identifies the states that have made a choice. The latter choice will probably be made.

6. Although Article 2 assumes that a court will adjudicate the dispute, the parties may select an alternative dispute resolution agreement or agree that the dispute will be adjudicated in arbitration. Unless otherwise stated, the uniform law Article 2 includes alternative tribunals or persons which are empowered by agreement or otherwise to resolve the dispute. See the broader definition of "court" in Section 2B-102(a)(9b).

7 Notes

8 1. Except for the language “induced by unconscionable conduct”, Section 2-105 is essentially
9 Section 2-302 in the 1990 Official Text. Section 2-105 does not adopt the broader language of Sec
10 to conform original Section 2-302 to Section 2A-108(2) and (3) was rejected by the Drafting Comm
11 1993 meeting. The phrase “induced by unconscionable conduct”, taken from Section 2A-108(2), w

15 What is “unconscionable conduct” that induces a contract that is otherwise appears to be co

21 been entered into if unconscionable means had not been employed to induce the agreement to the c
22 5.108(1)(a), Comment 1.

24 2. The expanded treatment of consumer contracts in Article 2 is a particularized application
25 concepts. See, e.g., Sections 2-206 and 2-316. Nevertheless, Section 2-105 may still apply to a dis
26 requirements of those particular sections have been satisfied. Thus, a disclaimer of warranty that sa
27 of Section 2-316(b) or a standard form to which a commercial party has manifested assent, Section

30 or seller. These cases are few and far between. See, e.g., Martin v. Joseph Harris Co., Inc., 767 F.
31 (6th Cir. 1985).

33 3. The Drafting Committee limited unconscionability to the time of contracting and conclus
34 should be avoidance or limitation of the contract or clause rather than damages. Moreover, the cou

4 Notes

5 1. Section 2-107 implements a suggestion by the California State Bar Committee that there be
6 consistency in terminology. Thus, the phrase "real property" is substituted for the terms "realty" and "real estate,"
7 an assumption that all mean the same thing. Similarly, the undefined phrase "contract to sell" [found in
8 the former Section 2-107] was replaced by the defined phrase "contract for sale," which includes a contract for the sale of future
9 "contract for the sale of future goods" is proposed to replace "contract to sell."

11 2. After the 1996 Annual Meeting of the Conference, subsection (a) was revised to clarify that 12 gas, or similar things, are to be "extracted" from the real property and structures are to be "removed."
13 In some states, underground mineral deposits may be called structures. Also, it is clear that water is a 14 gas. Article 2 applies to the sale of water after it is extracted not to the sale of the right to extract.

16 3. Oil and gas. The phrase "oil and gas" was added to subsection (a) in 1972 to clarify that 17 things that were part of the real property if to be severed by the buyer to whom a working interest in the land had been conveyed 18 the owner. Article 2 does not apply in this case.

20 On the other hand, it is clear that if the seller is to extract the oil and sell it to the buyer for a
21 working interest (or if the buyer extracts the oil and then sells it to a third party, Article 2 applies).
22 This raises more complicated scope problems. For example, suppose the lessee is to extract the oil and pay a
23 royalty based upon a stated value of the oil. Real estate law applies here because a working interest in the land was 24 conveyed to the buyer and a cash royalty is paid. In cases where the lessee is to extract the oil and pay a cash
25 royalty, however, Article 2 may apply if the lessor conveys an interest in the oil to the lessee in kind or exercises an option to pay a cash
26 royalty. After extraction, the lessee is in possession of oil and the lessor is now in position to sell the oil to the lessee for either an in-kind
27 payment or cash. In this case, the lessor owns the oil extracted by the lessee. Since the extracted oil is now goods, the lessor is a seller subject to 28 the UCC.

31 4. What about long-term sale and leaseback of buildings and structures? In typical cases, a
32 seller of real property or unimproved land will convey it and then take a leaseback for a term of years. At some point in time,
33 the seller (formerly the owner) has a right to remove and, presumably, sell structures on the land. In general, this is covered by 34 Article 2 to this transaction even though the owner has a right to sever and sell. If, however, the owner actually conveys the land to 35 a third person and reserves the right to sever, that transaction is covered by Section 2-107.

Notes

1. History. Section 2-201(a) in the July, 1996 draft abolished the statute of frauds for Article 2. This change was strongly recommended by the PEB Study Group and was approved by the Drafting Committee. A motion to restore the statute of frauds was rejected by a voice vote of the Commissioners at the 1996 Meeting of NCCUSL.

However, at the November, 1996 meeting, the Drafting Committee decided to restore “some” of the statute of frauds. Section 2-201 of the November, 1996 Draft, based upon the able draft by Professor E. Allan Farnsworth, clarified the text without making it harder to satisfy the statute.

At the January, 1997 meeting of the Drafting Committee, a further revision that makes it easier to satisfy the statute was submitted by Curtis Reitz and was approved in principle and appeared in the March, 1997 draft. Changes were made at the March and May, 1997 meetings of the Drafting Committee.

At the May, 1997 meeting of the American Law Institute, a motion to retain the statute of frauds for Article 2 with a 1 margin. A motion to delete subsection (d), however, was defeated.

2. Subsection (a) follows original Section 2-201(1), with some differences:

The diminimus amount is $10,000 rather than $500. This amount was approved at the ALI meeting.

The statutes of frauds defense cannot be raised under subsection (a) unless the person against whom the defense is asserted denies that an agreement was made. Subsection (a) provides no procedures to test the truth of the defense.

A record is sufficient if it is authenticated.

A record is not insufficient because it omits a quantity term. Although there is no Article 2 “gap-filling” rule, the term may be established by relevant evidence, including trade usage and course of dealing. If the quantity term is included in the record the claim is not enforceable beyond the quantity stated. Note, however, that there is no longer a quantity limitation where there is conduct by both parties establishing an agreement or a record in court or under oath. See subsection (c).

3. Subsection (b) retains the confirmation principle in Section 2-201(2) with the following changes:

The text states that only the recipient of the confirmation must be a merchant. The text does not state that the sender may or may not include a farmer. The conclusion that farmers can never be a merchant, however, is retained. See Section 2-201 (1995), Comment 2, paragraph 2, which states that the merchant concept under Section 2-201(2) is “on normal business practices which are or ought to be typical of and familiar to any person in business.”

4. Subsection (c) states when a claim under an otherwise enforceable contract which is barred by the statute of frauds (a) or (b) is “nonetheless enforceable.”

Subsection (c)(1) is revised for clarity. The party seeking to avoid the statute of frauds, however, must show a lack of faith belief in the existence of a contract.

1 Subsection (c)(2) expands the “part performance” exception in Section 2-201(3)(c) (1995). Cor
2 including part performance, takes the case out of the statute. To illustrate, suppose S claims the
3 alleged oral contract to supply the buyer’s requirements over a 5 year period. After six months,
4 seller delivers and the buyer accepts requirements for that period. Later the buyer repudiates and
5 frauds defense. Assuming that the defense is proper under subsection (a), the conduct of both p
6 contract and the defense is no longer available. In short, the seller’s claim of a five year contract
7 fact.

9 Subsection (c)(3) recognizes that reliance on representations or an agreement by one party “may 10 raising the statute of frauds defense. Whether estoppel exists depends upon principles of law or 11 Section 1-102(b) (April, 1997). Presumably, the court will be guided by Restatement (Second)
12 factor of which is the extent to which the reliance “corroborates evidence of the making and term
13 the making and terms are otherwise established by clear and convincing evidence. See subsection
14

15 Subsection (c)(4) restores subsection 3(b) of former UCC Section 2-201, but clarifies that the a 16 court or “otherwise under oath” and must admit facts from which a contract may be found.

18 5. Subsection (d), which is new, survived a motion to delete at the ALI meeting in May, 1996.
19 2-201(a) (Nov. 1996). The phrase “any other applicable period” recognizes that some state statutes 20 than one year.

22 To illustrate, suppose S and B enter an oral contract on February 1, 1996 to deliver goods on 23 the price of $7,500. The oral agreement is not within the scope of Section 2-201(a) because the price
24 but, since it is not performable within a year from its making, the agreement would be subject to a s
25 under the so-called “one year” clause. Subsection (d) eliminates this defense.

27 6. Subsection (f) in the March, 1997 Draft (former Section 2-203 on sealed records) has been 28 2-204(b).

5 1. The operation of the so-called parol evidence rule depends upon the intention of the parties
6 to intend that the record be a final expression of their agreement with respect to some or all of the terms.
7 Otherwise, all evidence relevant to the terms of the agreement is admissible under the usual evidentiary rule.

9 2. If the court concludes that the parties intended a partially integrated writing (some terms
10 2-202 then states what terms allegedly agreed to in negotiations prior to or contemporaneously with the writing).
11 from a course of dealing, course of performance or usage of trade are admissible.

13 In a partial integration, terms allegedly agreed to prior to or contemporaneously with the record
14 they contradict terms in the record. However, the terms in the record may be supplemented by evidence of course of performance,
15 performance, course of dealing or usage of trade and noncontradictory additional terms, unless the record indicates that the parties
16 to “would certainly have been included” in the record. The “would certainly” language, taken from the original
17 original Section 2-202, replaces the phrase “consistent additional terms.”

19 In a total integration, normally manifested by a merger clause, noncontradictory additional terms are not
20 admissible. However, terms in the record may still be supplemented by evidence of course of performance and course of dealing
21 unless that evidence is specifically negated or excluded in the record. The position in the original Comment 2 to the original
22 Section 2-202, therefore, is followed, i.e., that the special status of this evidence (related to pre-contract negotiations) and the assumption
23 that the parties intended to include it unless excluded requires more than a general merger clause to exclude. See, e.g., Nanakuli Paving & Rock Co. v. Shell
24 Oil Co., Inc., 664 F.2d 772 (9th Cir. 1981).

27 The effect of a totally integrated record is that both contradictory and non-contradictory additional terms are 28 excluded. The best evidence of a total integration is a so-called “merger” clause. The last sentence of the May, 1994 Draft
29 stated that a merger clause does not create a conclusive presumption of a total integration. This sentence was consistent with the case law,
30 see, e.g., ARB, Inc. v. E-Systems, Inc., 663 F.2d 189 (D.C. Cir. 1980), it was removed at the March, 1995 meeting of the Drafting Committee. As a practical
31 matter, a merger clause creates a presumption that both parties intended a total integration and puts a difficult burden on the party
32 claiming the contrary. At the September, 1996 meeting, the Drafting Committee voted to include Section 2-202(1) to the effect of the 33 presumption to contracts other than consumer contracts. At the March, 1997 meeting of the Drafting Committee, subsection (b) of the 34 March, 1997 Draft was deleted. A motion to restore the second sentence of subsection (b) was defeated by a close vote.

37
38 3. Interpretation. In the case of either a partial or a total integration, terms in the record may be “explained” by relevant evidence
39 and by “course of dealing or usage of trade or by course of performance.” Section 2-202(1). Evidence intended to explain a term in a record
40 involves contract interpretation to which the parol evidence rule does not apply. Evidence intended to supplement a term in a record
41 poses a different language threshold question: Are the additional terms contradictory or not. But unless the record clearly excludes or contracts out of the 42 additional terms, they are admissible.

1 of dealing or performance, both Section 1-205(3) and Section 2-202(a)(1) support admissibility to s
2 it may also appear to vary or contradict that term.

4 Subsection (c) of the May, 1994 Draft, which stated that before extrinsic evidence was adm
5 contract the court must find that the contract was ambiguous, was deleted at the March, 1995 meeti
6 Committee. Subsection (c), which sparked controversy, was inconsistent with the policy of the 199

8 Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. G. W. Thomas Drayage & Rigging Co., 442 P.2d 641 (Cal.
9 1968) (Traynor, Chief Justice).

11 At the October, 1995 meeting of the Drafting Committee, the scope of the court's power to 12 integrated writing was discussed. Concern was expressed lest the phrase "terms may be explained
13 would be limited to the sources listed in (1) and (2) and that the dreaded "plain meaning rule" might
14 save the phrase passed, however, [9-8, 7-0] with the expectation that the Comments would state tha

24 25 26 SECTION 2-203. FORMATION IN GENERAL.

27 (a) A contract may be made in any manner sufficient to show agreement, including by offer
28 conduct of both parties which recognizes the existence of a contract.

29 (b) A contract may be found if the parties intend to form a contract, even if the time that the 31 establish a contract, or one party reserves the right to modify terms.

32 (c) Even if one or more terms are left open, a contract does not fail for indefiniteness if the

Notes

1. In transactions where terms in the records of one or both parties appear to prevent agreement, contract formation is treated in Sections 2-203(b) and 2-205(a)(1) rather than former Section 2-207 to determine whether a contract has been formed. If some contract is formed, the question of what terms are included in the agreement is treated in new Section 2-206 where consumer contracts are involved and

The last clause in Section 2-203(b) deals with contract formation where the parties intend to use different varying terms in their records do not otherwise establish (or might prevent the formation of) a contract. This is from the first sentence of the original Section 2-207(3). Thus, if there is conduct by both parties which indicates the existence of a contract but terms in their records do not agree, a contract is still made under Section 2-203(b).

2. Under basic contract law, either party can condition the formation of a contract upon agreement to terms proposed. See Section 2-207(1) (1995 Official Text). Subsection (d) deals with the situation where the offeror or the person purporting to accept an offer expresses that condition in a record: The condition must be in conspicuous language is used, see Section 2-102(a)(7). Suppose, for example, that the seller's offer states that notice of any breach of warranty must be given within 30 days of when the buyer "should have discovered that the seller "will not be bound unless the buyer agrees to the seller's terms. That language conditioning the offer on the buyer's agreement is not effective unless it is CONSPICUOUS. Whether it is conspicuous or not may depend on whether the language is in standard terms or "boilerplate.

3. Section 2B-202 omits subsection (d).

4. In November, 1996, the Drafting Committee decided to eliminate all references to "standard terms" or "standard terms" in Sections 2-203, 2-205, and 2-207. This approach was reaffirmed at the January 1997 Drafting Committee and all bracketed references to standard terms have been deleted.

SECTION 2-204. FIRM OFFERS; SEALED RECORDS.

(a) An offer by a merchant to enter into a contract made in an authenticated record that by its terms gives assurance that the offer will be held open is not revocable for lack of consideration during the time stated, the offer is irrevocable for a reasonable time not exceeding 90 days. A term of assurance in a record given to the offeree to the offeror is ineffective unless the term is conspicuous.

(b) Affixing a seal to a record evidencing a contract for sale or an offer does not make the record a sealed instrument. The law with respect to sealed instruments does not apply to the contract or offer.

Notes

1. The September 10, 1993 draft of Section 2-205 provided that if no time is stated in a written offer, the offer is irrevocable for a reasonable time not exceeding 90 days.

offer is irrevocable for a commercially reasonable time. A motion to restore the original language imposing a three month limit, was subsequently approved. See Section 2B-203.

2. At the September, 1996 meeting, the Drafting Committee voted to replace the word “conspicuous” in the 1996 Draft with “manifests assent. See Section 2B-303, last sentence. It protects an offeror against an offer that is in a record, frequently a standard form, prepared by the offeree to be used by the offeror. With the change in Section 2-103 and the concept of “manifests assent”, the word conspicuous has been restored.

3. Former Section 2-203 on Sealed Instruments now appears in Section 2-204(b).

SECTION 2-205. OFFER AND ACCEPTANCE.

(a) Unless otherwise unambiguously indicated by the language or circumstances, the following rules apply:

(1) An offer to make a contract invites acceptance in any manner and by any medium reasonable under the circumstances. Subject to Section 2-203(d), a definite expression of acceptance in a record that also complies with the requirements of Section 2-203(d) from the offer is an acceptance.

(2) An order or other offer to buy or acquire goods for prompt or current shipment invites acceptance by a prompt promise to ship or by a prompt or current shipment of goods. If the order or offer is construed as an offer to buy goods by shipment, and the shipment is made by the shipment of non-conforming goods, the non-conforming shipment is not an acceptance if the seller notifies the buyer that the shipment is offered only as an accommodation.

(b) If the beginning of a requested performance is a reasonable mode of acceptance, an offeror who receives notification of acceptance within a reasonable time may treat the offer as having lapsed before acceptance.

Notes

1. Section 2-204 and Section 2-205 [formerly Section 2-206] were revised to state that, in the absence of agreement, the terms of the contract are to be determined by the parties' conduct. Thus, revised Section 2-203(b) provides that the parties can intend to incorporate terms in the records of the parties do not otherwise establish a contract and revised Section 2-205(a) provides that an expression of acceptance in a record accepts an offer even though it contains terms varying the terms of the offer. These principles were previously found in Section 2-207(1) and (3) of the 1990 Official Text. Compare Section 2-207(1) and (3) of the 1990 Official Text.

Although the statute does not say so, it is unlikely that a definite acceptance with varying terms in a record will be found unless the varying terms are in the “boilerplate.”

2. The formation test in Section 2-205(a)(1) follows that in the original Section 2-206(1). Unless clearly provides otherwise, a definite acceptance creates a contract even though the acceptance contains terms that vary the offer. Unlike the Restatement, Second and Article 19 of CISG, a definite acceptance that materially varies the terms of the offer can create a contract. The offeree can avoid a contract by expressing in conspicuous language that no contract exists unless the offeror agrees to the offeree's standard terms. Presumably, if both parties state conspicuously that they will not be bound unless the other agrees to the same, no contract exists unless there is subsequent conduct by both recognizing the existence of a contract.

Language in an offer or purported acceptance which attempts to condition contract formation on the other to the terms proposed must be conspicuous when contained in a record. Section 2-203(d).

Here are some examples.

Example #1. After negotiations where no agreement was reached, B sent S an offer in a record to purchase 1,000 units of described goods at $500 per unit. The front of the purchase order contained the offer and the back contained several standard terms, including an arbitration clause. S sent an acknowledgment of which stated "we are pleased to accept your order for 1,000 units at $500 per unit. The back of the acknowledgment contained a standard term excluding all liability for consequential damages. After the acknowledgment, S changed its mind (the market price went up) and faxed a rejection to B. There is a contract under Section 2-203(a). B clearly accepted the offer and the seller's record did not contain any language or otherwise that there would be no contract unless S agreed to all of the terms proposed.

The case for a definite expression of acceptance is even clearer if S also shipped the goods before B could revoke. There would be no contract, however, if S had said "we are pleased to accept your order at $500 per unit, but we have conspicuously indicated that it did not intend to conclude a contract unless B agreed to all of S's terms. See Section 2-203(d). Whether B's arbitration clause or S's exclusion clause are part of the contract depends upon Section 2-207.

Example #2. Suppose, in Example #1, that Seller "accepted" Buyer's order for $600 per unit. The back of the acknowledgment contained a standard term that "seller reserves the right to litigate a dispute." Nevertheless, Seller shipped the goods with the acknowledgment and Buyer accepted them without objection. There is a contract under Section 2-203(b). Since the price term was negotiated, Seller's price of $600 constitutes a term which Buyer accepted by using the goods. [The usual principles of contract formation apply here.] The result is not an unfair surprise and B assented without objection by accepting the goods. Which if any of the conflicting records prepared by the parties become part of the contract is determined by Section 2-207.

Example #3. Suppose, in Example #2, that Seller accepted Buyer's order for $500 and shipped the goods which Buyer accepted. Later, there was a dispute, Buyer demanded arbitration and Seller insisted on the right to litigate. There is a contract under either Section 2-205(a)(1) or 2-203 despite the difference in dispute resolution. Unless the Buyer's arbitration clause becomes part of the agreement under Section 2-207, the rule is that the seller may litigate.

Example #4. Suppose that terms in the records of both parties conspicuously state that there is no contract unless their terms are agreed to by the other party. See Section 2-203(d). The seller ships the goods. There is a contract under Section 2-203(a) and (b). The agreement of the parties includes the requirement of Section 2-207.

1           3. Section 2-205 conforms to Section 2B-204 in that the phrase “invites acceptance” is subse
2       be construed as “language.” The response by an “electronic agent” is treated in Section 2B-204(c).

7           Two recent cases in the Seventh Circuit, ProCD, Inc. v. Zeidenberg, 86 F.3d 1447 (7th Cir.
8       and Hill v. Gateway 2000, Inc., ___ F.3d ___, 1997 WL 2809 (7th Cir. 1997), raise questions about 9       adequacy of the proposed contract formation provisions in Part 2 and the operation of the new “pass
10      provision in Section 2-404(a). Both were decided by Judge Easterbrook.

12          In ProCD the defendant, an individual, bought software with a “shrinkwrap” license from a
13      transaction that appears to satisfy the evolving definition of “mass market” in Section 2B-102(a)(25).
14      took possession of the disk he was told that there were terms on the inside. The key term was a license
15      both in the standard form record and on the computer disk, that he had an option to accept the license
16      the software for a refund. D used the software, violated the license and was sued by P, the producer.
17      the district court, enforced the license. Among other things, the court concluded: (1) The dispute in 18      a “battle of the forms” under Section 2-207; (2) Section 2-204(1), augmented by Section 2-606, sup
19      parties intended to conclude the contract when D accepted the terms of the license by using the prod
20      for and took delivery of the disk. The court rejected the argument that D was bound only by terms of 21      payment and possession; and (3) Article 2, which the court applied to the license of goods, did not r
22      dispute be conspicuous or be presented in any particular way. Section 2-302 was not discussed. No
23      to Section 2-207(1) and (2), which supports the view that a contract can be formed along with a pro
24      contract.

26          In Gateway, the defendant, responding to advertising, ordered a computer directly from Gat
27      manufacturer. D paid for the computer by credit card before it was shipped and was unaware, at the 28      the contract. The computer arrived in a box with no external message that there were terms inside.
29      contained, inter alia, a limited express warranty, a service commitment and an agreement to arbitrate
30      that the purchaser would be bound to the terms unless the computer was returned within 30 days. D
31      and, when warranty claims were made, Gateway demanded arbitration. The district court refused to 32      upon appeal, the decision was reversed: D had agreed in writing to arbitrate by failing to object in t
33      court rejected Section 2-207 as inapplicable and affirmed the approach of ProCD to formation unde
34      importantly, the court rejected any claim that D was surprised by the terms and imposed the primary

39
40          The following questions were discussed at the May, 1997 meeting of the Drafting Committee

41
42          1. Does Article 2 adequately support the court’s conclusion that the contract is not formed a

11           (a) This section is subject to Sections 2-202 and 2-206.

12           (b) If a contract is formed by offer and acceptance and the acceptance is by a record containing
13   from the offer or by conduct of the parties that recognizes the existence of a contract but the records
14   otherwise establish a contract for sale, the contract includes:

15               (1) terms in the records of the parties to the extent that the records agree;

16               (2) terms not in records to which the parties have agreed;

17               (3) terms supplied or incorporated under any provision of this [Act]; and

18               (4) terms in a record supplied by a party to which the other party has expressly agreed.

19           (c) if a contract is formed by any manner permitted under this article and either party or both 20   agreement by a record, the contract includes:

21               (1) terms agreed to prior to the confirmation;

22               (2) terms in a confirming record that do not materially vary the prior agreement and are 23   objected to;

24               (3) terms in confirming records to the extent that they agree; and

25               (4) terms supplied or incorporated under any provision of this [Act].

1. Drafting History. The original Section 2-207 was both an exception to the common law read principle and a particularized application in commercial cases of the unconscionability doctrine. It applied to determine if there was some contract for sale when the writings of the parties varied, so, what terms in the writings of the parties became part of the contract. One objective was to neutralize the advantage gained where standard terms were used (although Section 2-207 was not limited to standard terms). The risk of unfair surprise where one party apparently agreed (assented by conduct) to standard terms was read or understood. The assumption was that even in commercial transactions the risk of unfair surprise was not a rule where standard terms are involved. More particularly, it assumed that commercial parties in uniform [i.e., no record containing all the terms of the contract] do not have a realistic opportunity to review the other before apparently assenting by conduct.

Initially, two versions of Section 2-207 were drafted. The first followed Section 2-207 in the Restatement and attempted to amplify and clarify it in light of apparent objectives, academic commentary, and judicial decisions. The second developed a simplified structure that focused on the unfair surprise issue. Assuming that so long as the parties agreed under Sections 2-203 and 2-205, the sole question was whether “varying terms” became part of the contract. At the January 1-3, 1993 meeting, the Drafting Committee approved the approach of the second version of Section 2-207. To implement that objective was made in the May, 1994 draft, where the key concept, “varying terms,” was implemented in Section 2-207(a). Drawing on the September, 1994 Draft of the Licenses article, the December 20, 1994 Draft of the new section on “standard form agreements” and defined such terms as “standard form” and “standard terms.” These sections provided a direct response to recurring questions raised in standard form contracting. Section 2-206, covering “Standard Form Agreements,” and the new definitions to deal with most unfair surprise, advantage taking, the May, 1995 Draft of Section 2-207 was limited to “conflicting” standard terms and other terms by adding to or contradicting them.

In October, 1995 the Drafting Committee decided to limit Section 2-206 to cases where all the terms were contained in a standard form record. Section 2-207, therefore, was reworked to deal with the unconscionable negotiated transaction where standard terms are contained in the records [not standard forms] of one party.

At the November, 1996 meeting of the Drafting Committee, however, the decision was made to limit the rule responding to standard forms and standard terms in commercial transactions. Thus, Section 2-206(1) was redrafted of Section 2-207 that used the words “records” and “terms” rather than “standard forms” and “standard terms.” approved in principle. The January, 1997 Draft, however, retained [standard terms] bracketed for deletion. It contained a subsection (c) proposing a “clean up” rule where one party claims that standard terms in the record are incorporated by express agreement. At the January, 1997 meeting of the Drafting Committee, the Committee decided to delete all references to standard terms in and subsection (c) to Section 2-207.

The March, 1997 Draft of Section 2-207, dealt with two special cases where disputes over terms arise: (1) where both parties exchange records (herein of the “battle of the records”) and (2) where one party claims that a contract previously formed, and stated what terms are included in, and by necessary implication excluded from the contract. Thus, terms upon which the records agree in substance are included but terms upon which the records disagree are excluded, unless they are “otherwise” agreed to or become part of a modification under Section 2-207. The “otherwise” agreed to principle is subject to an exception: The court may find, after reviewing the terms of a record to which one party apparently assented should be excluded because that party would be under an undue hardship if the term were included. The “unfair surprise” exception was justified as follows:

1 A primary purpose of original Section 2-207 and the interpretive cases was to police against un
2 commercial transactions. The risk of unfair surprise is high when one party attempts to include
3 (“boilerplate”) drafted to serve its own interest in a contract where the other party appears to agree
4 otherwise but did not read and was not expected to read the term. These terms are frequently ex
5 unless the other party assented with express awareness of or expressly agreed to them. Although 6 Committee, because of definitional problems, has not relied upon the presence of “standard term
7 requirement of “expressly agreed” in the statute, the process of contract formation here is still su
8 unconscionability limitation in Section 2-106, which deals with unfair surprise and hardship. It
9 interpreting revised Section 2-207 will continue to find unfair surprise where the circumstances
10 terms not clearly exclude terms not clearly covered by Section 2-207 unless there is express agr
11 lesson from the case law is that it is much easier for a court to find unfair surprise or the presen
12 after the fact than it is to state those principles in the statute. Thus, Section 2-207(3) states the c 13 in broad terms and relies upon the courts to apply it.

15 At the March, 1997 meeting, the Drafting Committee voted to delete the “unfair surprise” p
16 2-207(3) and to treat the confirmation issue and the conflicting records problem in two subsections.

20 Revised Section 2-207 (July, 1997): A Road Map.

21 Assume that some contract has been formed under Article 2, Part 2. What are its terms? No
22 terms will be agreed at the time of contract formation and other terms may be included later. Even
23 later are modifications, Section 2-207 rather than Section 2-210(a) may provide the applicable princ
24 short, Sections 2-207 and 2-210(a) must be read together.

25 26 (a) All terms are expressed in one record.

27
28 Section 2-207 does not apply here. The single record is probably integrated and subject to 29 consumer contracts, see Section 2-206. For commercial contracts, the usual principles of agreement
30 Section 2-105.

31 32 (b) No terms are expressed in a record.

33
34 Section 2-207 does not apply here. Since the agreement is oral, the statute of frauds probab
35 Section 2-201. If not, the usual principles of agreement apply.

36 37 (c) Some Terms in the Record of only one party.

38
39 Section 2-207(b) applies where the contract is formed by offer and acceptance.

40
41 For example, suppose the buyer makes an oral offer and the seller makes a definite acceptan
42 contains terms that vary from the offer. A contract is formed, see Section 2-205(a)(1), and the vary 43 the agreement.

45 Suppose, further, that the seller ships and the buyer accepts the goods. Does the buyer’s con

1 goods equal agreement to the seller's varying terms? Under subsection (b)(4), the answer is no: The
2 agree to the term. As a practical matter, the courts have distinguished between negotiated and "boilerplate"
3 required a higher quality of assent to incorporate the boilerplate.

5 Suppose, further, that the seller's offer is made in a record and the buyer accepts orally or by
6 other terms that vary from the offer. This is a highly unlikely version of the "first shot" problem and 7 applies. Again, terms in the seller's record are not part of the contract unless the buyer has expressly

9 (d) Both parties exchange records.

10
11 Subsection (b) applies if the contract is created by offer and acceptance and both the offer and acceptance
12 in records. Both the "first" and "last" shot are neutralized and ambiguous conduct does not bring evidence into 13 the agreement. There must be express agreement.

15 Subsection (b) also applies if the contract is formed by conduct rather than by offer and acceptance. If
16 terms in the records are excluded because the records do not agree in substance, those excluded terms
17 the agreement by ambiguous conduct. Thus, if the seller seeks to include a term in its record and the buyer
18 record, the seller's term is out to the extent that the records do not agree. The buyer would not agree unless 19 on the same matter, e.g., notice time for breach of warranty, and the terms agreed in substance, e.g., price.
20 This is the "knock out" rule in current Section 2-207(3) and Article 2.22 of the UNIDROIT Principles.
21 "Knock out" does not depend upon standard terms. Hence, revised Section 2-207 deals with the "battle of the forms."
22 In these cases, the crucial question is how to treat the excluded terms. Can they still become part of the contract?
23 The answer is found in subsection (b)(4): The answer is yes if, after their initial exclusion, the parties expressly 24

25 (e) Confirmations.

26
27 Section 2-207(c) deals specifically with records that confirm a contract previously made. Compare this with 28 2-202(b), dealing with confirmations for purposes of the statute of frauds.

29
30 Suppose Seller and Buyer conclude an oral contract not subject to the statute of frauds or a contract confirmed
31 through "informal" correspondence. Later, Seller sends a record confirming the agreement and confirming the 32 the contract. What is the effect of the varying terms?

34 Original Section 2-207(1) provided that a "written confirmation which is sent within a reasonable time after the oral contract
35 as an acceptance even though it states terms additional to or different from those . . . agreed upon. . . . The confirmation
36 was treated as an acceptance rather than a proposal to modify the contract and the additional or different terms
37 of the contract only if Section 2-207(2) was satisfied. The problem was complicated where an earlier contract was 38 unenforceable under the statute of frauds and the writing both satisfied the statute between merchants and 39 and proposed additional or different terms. Furthermore, a confirmation proposing additional or different terms 40 expressly conditioning the contract upon agreement to them is probably a repudiation rather than an acceptance or 41 proposal for modification.

43 Under subsection (d), only terms in the confirmation that do not materially vary the contract are binding. If the buyer
44 seasonably objected to become part of the contract. Terms which materially vary the contract are excluded. A contract
45 modification in good faith which satisfies Section 2-210(a). This analysis applies if either or both records confirm 46 confirm the earlier agreement.

1 (f) “My way or no way.”

3 Section 2-203(d) recognizes that a party may condition its willingness to contract upon the c
4 agreement to terms proposed and states that states that conspicuous language in a record that will p
5 contract on the exchange of records with varying terms but will not prevent a contract if there is “co
6 recognizing the existence of a contract. Section 2-203(a). In cases of mutual conduct, what is the 7 no way provision? If the drafter cannot claim there is no contract, can it claim that the contract (b
8 the terms in its record?

10 The reporters believe that the default rule in Section 2-207(b) should prevail over the expres
11 “knockout rule eliminate terms upon which the writings do not agree and the requirement of expres
12 terms that were excluded from being incorporated simply because the parties have performed part o

14 How should this result be implemented in the statute? In principle a party who expressly co
15 willingness to contract on agreement to specific terms and then ships the goods or accepts the good 16 that agreement should be precluded from relying on the condition.

19 SECTION 2-208. COURSE OF PERFORMANCE OR PRACTICAL

20 CONSTRUCTION.

21 (a) A “course of performance” is a sequence of conduct between the parties to a particular t 22 if:

23 (1) the agreement of the parties with respect to the transaction involves repeated occasio
24 by a party;

25 (2) that party performs on one or more occasions; and

26 (3) the other party, with knowledge of the nature of the performance and opportunity for 27 accepts the performance or acquiesces in it without objection.

28 (b) A course of performance between the parties is relevant to ascertaining the meaning of t 29 agreement, may give particular meaning to specific terms of the agreement, and may supplement or 30 agreement.

31 (c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d), the express terms of an agreement and a
32 of performance, course of dealing, or usage of trade must be construed whenever reasonable as con

1 If such construction is unreasonable:

2 (1) express terms prevail over course of performance, course of dealing, and usage of trade;

3 (2) course of performance prevails over course of dealing and usage of trade; and

4 (3) course of dealing prevails over usage of trade.

5 (d) Subject to Section 2-210, course of performance is relevant to show a waiver or modification
6 inconsistent with the course of performance.

12 SECTION 2-209. MODIFICATION, RESCISSION, AND WAIVER.

13 (a) An agreement made in good faith which modifies a contract under this article is binding
14 consideration.

15 (b) Except in a consumer contract, a contract that contains a term that excludes modification
16 by an authenticated record may not be otherwise modified or rescinded. However, a party whose language
17 inconsistent with the term requiring an authenticated record may not assert that term if the language
18 other party to change its position reasonably and in good faith.

19 (c) Subject to subsection (b), a term in a contract may be waived by the party for whose benefit
20 Language, conduct or a course of performance between the parties may be relevant to show a waiver

25 Notes

1           1. There are several changes in revised Section 2-210 [formerly Section 2-209 of the 1990

3           First, the requirement that a modifying agreement must be made in good faith, previously found
4 is explicitly stated in subsection (a). This follows the cases, see, e.g., Roth Steel Products v. Sharon
5 Corp., 705 F.2d 134 (6th Cir. 1983), and avoids the argument that a contract modification is neither
6 enforcement of a contract under Section 1-203. This revision is rejected in Section 2B-303.

8           Second, subsection (b) in the May, 1997 Draft has been deleted. If the original contract satisfied
9 frauds there is no requirement that the modification also satisfy the statute. If, however, the original
10 original agreement coupled with the modification are within the statute and do not satisfy it, the modification
11 unenforceable. This deletion both protects oral modifications of agreements that comply with the statute
12 problem that has puzzled the commentators and the courts. See, e.g., Costco Wholesale Corp. v.
13 Worldwide Licensing, 898 P.2d 347 (Wash.App. 1995).

15           Third, except in a consumer contract the parties may agree in a contract that an authenticated
16 to modify or rescind the contract. In short, the parties create their own statute of frauds in the form of a
17 Short of compliance, the only way to avoid this limitation is by the estoppel test stated in subsection (c).
18 seeking to invoke the NOM clause may be estopped if language or conduct inconsistent with the NOM clause
19 reasonable, good faith reliance by the other party on an oral modification. See Brookside Farms v.
20 Rizzo's, Inc., 873 F. Supp. 1029 (S.D. Tex. 1995). This result is consistent with the estoppel exception in 21 revised Section 2-201(c)(3).

23           2. Subsection (c) recognizes the general principle of waiver where NOM clauses are not included in 24 benefit of one party may be waived by one party without agreement by the other. These terms will be subject to 25 conditions upon an agreed or promised performance, such as a condition of notice.

27           There are three types of waiver. In the first, called election waiver, the party for whose benefit a
28 included elects not to insist upon the condition after the time for its occurrence has passed. The condition is 29 a need to prove reliance by the other party. Election waiver is included in the first sentence of subsection (c).
30 called reliance waiver, the party for whose benefit a condition is included states that he will not insist upon
31 a condition in the future. Here, however, the waiver may be retracted unless the other party has changed his 32 "reasonably and good faith. Subsection (c), last sentence. In the third, the court simply excuses the condition
33 nonoccurrence would cause "disproportionate forfeiture" and the occurrence of the condition was not a 34 agreed exchange. Restatement, Second, Contracts § 229. See Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. v.
35 Murphy, 538 A.2d 219 (Conn. 1988) (burden on party seeking excuse to prove that condition was not a 36 exchange).

38           To illustrate, suppose the contract contains a NOM clause and a schedule for installment delivery.
39 The seller encounters production problems, misses a due date and requests an extension of delivery.
40 First, suppose the buyer states that it will not insist on the NOM condition and orally agrees to a time extension.
41 The buyer does not request a written modification and proceeds to deliver under the modified schedule. Later, the buyer
42 invokes the NOM clause and sues for damages caused by late delivery. Here, the NOM clause is waived under 43 language inconsistent with the term which induced reasonable, good faith reliance and the agreed modification.
44 delivery schedule, if in good faith, is enforceable under subsection (a). Second, suppose the buyer states that
45 delivery is excused and orally agrees to a time extension. The seller, without obtaining a written modification,
46 proceeds to deliver under the modified schedule. Later, the buyer invokes the NOM clause and sues the seller for damages.

1 delivery. Once again, the NOM clause was waived under subsection (b).

3 Although a party may waive one late installment, an agreement to modify the time of future
4 necessarily enforceable. It must be either a “good faith” agreement under subsection (a) or induce
5 reliance under subsection (d). The doctrine of waiver is not available to create or modify agreed

9 SECTION 2-210. ATTRIBUTION PROCEDURE.

10 (a) An attribution procedure is a procedure established by agreement or mutually adopted b
11 purpose of verifying that electronic records, messages, or performances are those of the respective p
12 errors in the transmission or informational content of an electronic message, record, or performance
13 commercially reasonable.

14 (b) The commercial reasonableness of an attribution procedure is a question of law to be de
15 in light of the purposes of the procedure and the commercial circumstances at the time of the agree
16 procedure may require the use of algorithms or other codes, identifying words or numbers, encrypti

20 SECTION 2-211. ATTRIBUTION OF ELECTRONIC RECORD,
21 MESSAGE, OR PERFORMANCE.

22 (a) As between the parties, an electronic message, record, or performance received by a par
23 the party indicated as the sender if:

24 (1) it was sent by that party, its agent, or its electronic agent;

25 (2) the receiving party, in good faith and in compliance with an attribution procedure co
26 sent by the other party; or

27 (3) subject to subsection (b), the message or performance:

1 (A) resulted from acts of a person that obtained access to access numbers, codes, con

4 (B) the access occurred under circumstances constituting a failure to exercise reason
5 alleged sender; and

6 (C) the receiving party reasonably relied to its detriment on the apparent source of th

8 (b) In a case governed by subsection (a)(3), the following rules apply:

9 (1) The receiving party has the burden of proving reasonable reliance, and the alleged s
10 burden of proving reasonable care.

11 (2) Reliance on an electronic record or performance that does not comply with an agree
12 procedure is not reasonable unless authorized by an individual representing the alleged sender.

13 (c) If an electronic message was transmitted pursuant to an attribution procedure for the det

18 (2) If the sender receives a notice required by the attribution procedure of the content of 19 performance as received, the sender has a duty to in a commercially reasonable manner review the

4 SECTION 2-212. AUTHENTICATION EFFECT AND PROOF;
5 ELECTRONIC AGENT AUTHENTICATION.

6 (a) An authentication is intended to establish the party's identity, its adoption and acceptance of the 7 term, and the authenticity of the record or term.

8 (b) Operations of an electronic agent constitute the authentication of a party if the party designs the system
9 or selected the electronic agent for the purpose of achieving results of that type.

10 (c) A record or message is authenticated as a matter of law if a party complied with an authentication protocol
11 authentication. Otherwise, authentication may be proven in any manner including by showing that the party

16 SECTION 2-213. ELECTRONIC TRANSACTIONS AND MESSAGES:
17 TIMING OF CONTRACT AND EFFECTIVENESS OF MESSAGE.

18 (a) If an electronic message initiated by a party or an electronic agent evokes an electronic response, and 19 messages reflect an intent to be bound, a contract exists when:

20 (1) the response signifying acceptance is received; or

21 (2) if the response consists of electronically furnishing the requested information or notice, and the response
22 information, when the information or notice is received unless the originating message prohibited the response.

23 (b) Subsection to Section 2-211, an electronic message is effective when received, even if not read.

2 (c) Subject to subsection (d), operations of one or more electronic agents which confirm the
3 agreement are effective to form an agreement even if no individual representing either party was aware of the 4 action or its results.

5 (d) In an electronic transaction, the following rules apply:

6 (1) An agreement is formed by the interaction of two electronic agents if the interaction involves
7 agents each engaging in operations that signify agreement, such as by engaging in performing the agreed
8 instructing performance, accepting performance, or making a record of the existence of an agreement.

9 (2) An agreement may be formed by the interaction of an electronic agent and an individual if the 10 agreement is formed if an individual has reason to know that the individual is dealing with an electronic agent
11 actions the person should know will cause the agent to perform or to permit further use, or that are 12 constituting acceptance regardless of other contemporaneous expressions by the individual to which the individual 13 cannot react.

14 (3) The terms of the contract include terms on which the parties have previously agreed to use the contract,
15 electronic agents could take into account, and, terms provided by this article or other law.

19 MESSAGE.

20 (a) If the originator of an electronic message requests or has agreed with the addressee of the message that 21 receipt of the message must be acknowledged electronically, the following rules apply:

22 (1) If the originator indicated in the message or otherwise that the message was conditional upon
23 acknowledgment, the message does not bind the originator until acknowledgment is received and [the originator

2 (2) If the originator requested acknowledgment but did not state the message was condi

PART 3

GENERAL OBLIGATION AND CONSTRUCTION OF CONTRACT

SECTION 2-301. HOW CONTRACT PRICE PAYABLE.

- (a) The contract price may be made payable in money or otherwise.
- (b) If the contract price is payable in whole or in part in goods, each transferor is a seller for the article with respect to the goods transferred.
- (c) If all or part of the contract price is payable in an interest in real property, this article applies to the goods but not to the transfer of the interest in real property.

SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-304.

Notes

There are no substantive changes in former Section 2-304.

SECTION 2-302. PERFORMANCE AT SINGLE TIME.

- (a) If all of a seller's performance can be rendered at one time, the performance is due at one time. The buyer's reciprocal performance is due only on tender of full performance.
- (b) If circumstances give either party the right to make or demand performance in parts or on installment payment, if it can be apportioned, may be demanded for each part performance.
- (c) If payment cannot be apportioned or the agreement or the circumstances indicate that payment cannot be demanded for part performance, payment is due on completion of full performance.

SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-307.

Notes

1. This is an elaboration of former Section 2-307 and clarifies when a party's performance is due and what the other party's duties are on full performance. Subsection (a) follows Section 2B-603. Subsections (b) and (c) which state when, in the absence of an agreed installment contract, a part performance is permitted to be apportioned, follow Section 2B-604. Except for covering the obligations of both seller and buyer, the substance are intended.

2. The factors justifying delivery in more than a single lot include the type of disruptive circumstances, the alternatives reasonably available and the understanding that the parties will make up any deficiencies in time. Thus, if the seller agreed to deliver 10 carloads and, because of a railroad strike, only three cars were delivered, the time of delivery and the cost of alternative transportation was high, the seller is probably obligated to deliver the balance. Assuming reasonable efforts, the balance is due as cars become available.

This section should be distinguished from Section 2-715, which deals with excuse and substitution when changed circumstances disrupt agreed methods of shipment, delivery or payment. Presumably, the purpose is to vary a “default” rule than to excuse an agreed performance.

3. The operation of Section 2-302 creates an installment contract, i.e., goods delivered “in installments” separately accepted. Section 2-710(1). But it is not a credit installment contract: payment for each lot is due upon tender. This makes sense if payment for the single lot was due upon tender. But suppose the contract said “10 carloads” quantity to be delivered and the parties agreed upon 30 days credit. If circumstances justify delivery in installments, each lot due 30 days after delivery or must payment be made upon tender? The answer should be that the contract survives and payment is not due until all of the goods are tendered. Only the “default” rule is altered.

4. Clearly, the installment contract created by Section 2-302 is by operation of law. It is not within the parties’ power to create by agreement an installment contract where payment is due after the goods are accepted.

SECTION 2-303. OPEN-PRICE TERM.

(a) The parties, if they so intend, may form a contract for sale even if the price is:

(1) not agreed to;

(2) left to be agreed by the parties and they fail to agree; or

(3) to be fixed in terms of some agreed market or other standard as set or recorded by a trade

agency and it is not so set or recorded.

(b) If a contract formed under subsection (a), the price is a reasonable price at the time that delivery is made by the contract to make delivery.

(c) A price to be fixed by the seller or the buyer must be fixed in good faith.

(d) If a price left to be fixed otherwise than by agreement of the parties fails to be fixed through no fault of either party, the other party at that party’s option may treat the contract as canceled or may fix a reasonable price.

1 (e) If the parties intend not to be bound unless the contract price is fixed or agreed to and it
2 to, a contract is not formed. In that case, the buyer shall return any goods already received or, if un-
3 reasonable value at the time of transfer, and the seller shall return any portion of the contract price p

9 SECTION 2-304. OUTPUT, REQUIREMENTS, AND EXCLUSIVE

10 DEALING.

11 (a) A contractual term that measures the quantity of goods by the output of the seller or the 12 buyer means the actual output or requirements that may occur in good faith. A party may not offer
13 unreasonably disproportionate to a stated estimate or, in the absence of a stated estimate, to any nor 14 comparable previous output or requirements unless there are no outputs or requirements in good fai

15 (b) An agreement for exclusive dealing in the kind of goods concerned imposes an obligatio
16 best efforts to supply the goods and by the buyer to use best efforts to promote their sale.

17 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-306.

18 Notes

19 1. Section 2-304(a), which conforms in substance to Section 2B-306(a), has several objecti
20

21 First, it states the meaning of “output” and “requirements” terms when used in a contract fo
22 not cause a contract to fail for indefiniteness. See Section 2-203(c). The parties may agree upon a
23 quantity or something in between. But unless the parties agree to measure all or part of the quantity
24 “requirements,” Section 2-304(a) does not apply. See Lenape Resources Corp. v. Tennessee Gas
25 Pipeline Co., 925 S.W. 2d 759 (Tex. 1996) (good faith increases in output subject to “take or pay”

26

27 Second, it imposes a duty of good faith on the exercise of discretion by either party to deter
28 output or requirements. Section 2-306(a), however, does not require that there must be an exclusiv
29 before an output or requirements term is enforceable. Although some states require exclusive deali
30 Geometric v. Harvard Industries, 46 F.3d 718 (8th Cir. 1995) (Missouri law), this extreme position
31 rejected. The term should be enforceable where the seller or buyer agrees to supply or demand all o
32 or requirements to or from the other. See Advent Systems Ltd. v. Unisys Corp., 925 F.2d 670 (3d C

1 1991) (non-exclusive requirements term satisfies statute of frauds); Restatement (Second) Contract
2 consideration requirement is met there is no additional requirement of mutuality of obligation). For
3 the buyer agrees to buy 10% of its actual requirements in good faith from the seller should be enforced
4 hand, the buyer would not have the additional obligation to use “best efforts” unless there was an exception.
5 Section 2-306(2). See Tigg Corp. v. Dow Corning Corp., 962 F.2d 1119 (3d Cir. 1992).

7 Third, it clarifies that if there are no actual output or requirements in good faith, the party has
8 even though there are estimates in the contract or there were prior output or requirements. The question
9 of output or requirements occurred in good faith, not whether the lack of actual output or requirements
10 disproportionate. This follows the interpretation of prior Section 2-306(1) in Empire Gas Corp. v. W. F. Bakeries Co., 840 F.2d 1333 (7th Cir. 1988), but rejects the court’s dictum that the unreasonably disproportionate 12 limitation is not applicable to any decrease in quantity or requirements. See also, Tigg Corp. v. Dow Corning Corp., 962 F.2d 1119 (3d Cir. 1992).

15 Fourth, the question when a party with no actual output or requirements has acted in good faith
16 to answer. Some courts have drawn the line between decisions made because the contract is simply 17 costly (bad faith) and those made because an event external to the contract has adversely affected the 18 enterprise (good faith). The traditional definitions of good faith, see Section 2-103(1)(b) of the 1991 Restatement
19 clearly respond to this problem. At least one court has held, however, that bad faith is established if the 20 actual requirements fails to offer a reason for that situation. See Empire Gas Corp., supra.

22 Fifth, in cases where there are some actual output or requirements in good faith, Section 2-306(2) requires
23 the exercise of discretion by requiring a reasonable proportion between agreed estimates or prior contracts
24 requirements and the goods actually supplied or ordered. Suppose, for example, that the buyer estimates
25 be 50,000 units per year. Over a five year period, the buyer’s orders averaged between 45,000 to 55,000 units per year.
26 6th year, buyer’s actual requirements in good faith were 80,000 per year. If 80,000 units were ordered, is the quantity
27 whether the quantity is “unreasonably disproportionate” to the stated estimate and this question is a matter of fact
28 of the variations and whether they were reasonably foreseeable at the time of the contract than the market.
29 seller. See Orange & Rockland v. Amerada Hess Corp., 397 N.Y.S.2d 814 (N.Y.A.D. 1977).

31 2. Section 2-304(b) deals with an exclusive dealing agreement in a contract where the requirements
32 depend upon the resale market demand for them. Unless otherwise agreed, the seller must use “best efforts” to meet
33 requirements. On the other hand, if the buyer has X requirements in good faith, the seller can insist on “best efforts”
34 efforts to promote their sale. Actual requirements in good faith are not enough. Unlike Section 2-306(2),
35 effort is made in this Draft to state a standard for “best efforts.”

38 SECTION 2-305. ABSENCE OF SPECIFICATION OF PLACE FOR 39 DELIVERY.

40 (a) The place for delivery of goods is the seller’s place of business or, if there is none, the seller’s residence.

41 (b) In a contract for sale of identified goods that to the knowledge of the parties at the time of contracting, the goods are to be delivered at 42 some place other than that described in subsection (a), that place is the place for their delivery.

1 (c) Documents of title may be delivered through customary banking channels.

7 SECTION 2-306. TIME FOR PERFORMANCE NOT SPECIFIED.

8 (a) Except as otherwise expressly provided in this article, the time for performance or any other
9 agreement in which a time for performance is not specified is a reasonable time.

10 (b) If an agreement provides for successive performances but is indefinite in duration, the duration of 11 agreement is a reasonable time. Subject to Section 2-311, either party may terminate the contract at any time.

12 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-309(1) and (2).

13 Notes

14 1. Section 2-306 adopts without change the provisions for time and duration of performance in 15 2-309(a) and (b) of the December, 1994 Draft. Termination of the contract, previously covered in Section
16 2-311. This conforms in substance to Section 2B-315.

27 SECTION 2-307. OPTIONS AND COOPERATION RESPECTING
28 PERFORMANCE.

29 (a) An agreement that is otherwise sufficiently definite to be a contract is enforceable even if the 30 time for performance is open, to be specified by one of the parties, or to be fixed by agreement.

31 (b) If one party is required to specify the particulars of performance, the specification must be made in 32 good faith and within limits of commercial reasonableness.

1 (c) An agreement providing that the performance of the seller be to the satisfaction of the buyer
2 specifying the standard of performance requires that the performance be such that a reasonable person
3 buyer would be satisfied.

4 (d) A specification relating to an assortment of goods is at the buyer's option. Except as otherwise provided in 5 subsection (e), a specification or arrangement relating to shipment is at the seller's option.

6 (e) If a specification by one party would materially affect the other party's performance but the seller
7 made or one party's cooperation is necessary to the agreed performance of the other but is not seasonably
8 other party, in addition to all other remedies:

9 (1) is excused for any resulting delay in the party's own performance; and

10 (2) may proceed to perform in any reasonable manner or, after the time for a material part of the 11 own performance, treat the failure to specify or cooperate as a breach of contract.

14 SECTION 2-308. FAILURE TO PAY BY AGREED CREDIT.

15 (a) In this section, "agreed letter of credit" means a letter of credit that carries the direct obligation of the 16 confirmer or financing agency.

17 (b) Failure of a party seasonably to furnish an agreed letter of credit is a breach of a contract for sale.

18 (c) Delivery to a seller of an agreed letter of credit intended as the primary method of payment is a breach of the 19 buyer's obligation to pay. If the letter of credit is dishonored, the seller on reasonable notification may

Notes

Section 2-308, formerly Section 2-325 of the 1990 Official Text, states the effect of supplying an agreed letter of credit. Letter of credit is defined with reference to Section 5-102(a)(10) of the UCC. All other aspects of the letter of credit transaction are covered by revised Article 5.

SECTION 2-309. SHIPMENT TERMS; SOURCE OF MEANING. The effect of a party's use of shipment terms such as "FOB", "CIF", or the like, must be interpreted in light of the relevant trade and any course of performance or course of dealing between the parties.

SOURCE: Sales, Sections 2-319, 2-320, 2-321, 2-322, 2-324.

Notes

1. In the May, 1994 Draft, Sections 2-319 through 2-324, dealing with shipment and delivery terms, were deleted. The conclusion was that these terms were out of date with current practice.

2. Section 2-309 is a first step toward filling the gap on delivery terms. If the meaning of a delivery term cannot be found in the agreement or an applicable usage of trade, the meaning may be found by reference to the Incoterms of the International Chamber of Commerce. Thus, if any applicable usage of trade, course of performance, or course of dealing is not shown, the meaning of shipment terms used in an agreement must be determined by reference to the Incoterms published by the International Chamber of Commerce.

3. There are many new commercial terms which have come into use, especially in international trade, since the drafting of the original Article 2. Their terms evolve over time, and a statutory definition cannot keep pace adequately to changes in commercial practice.

Under the original Article 2, "FOB" could be used to refer either to "FOB place of shipment" or "FOB destination", so that it could be used in either a shipment or a destination contract. Where it was used in a destination contract, the norm has been for the seller to arrange transportation and insurance. It could be used with reference to land, sea, or air.

The I.C.C.'s Incoterms are often used in international transactions and have a more restricted application so that it should be used only with water-borne contracts of carriage. Under Incoterms FOB (Free on Board), the seller is obligated to deliver the goods on board a ship arranged for and named by the buyer at a named port of shipment. The seller must bear the costs and risks of both inland transportation to the named port of shipment and loading on the ship. The seller has no obligation to arrange transportation or insurance, but does have a duty to load the goods on the ship. The risk of loss transfers to the buyer at the time the goods are loaded on the ship. The seller must provide a commercial invoice, or its equivalent electronic message, and usually a transport document that will allow the buyer to take delivery – or an equivalent electronic message. For a broader treatment, see John A. Spanogle, Incoterms and UCC Article 2 – Conflicts and Confusions, 31 The International Lawyer 111(1997).

SECTION 2-310. TERMINATION; SURVIVAL OF OBLIGATIONS AND TERMS.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b), on termination of a contract, all obligations executory on both sides are discharged.

(b) The following survive termination of a contract:

- (1) a right based on a previous breach or performance of the contract;
- (2) a term limiting the scope, manner, method, or location of the exercise of rights in the contract;
- (3) an obligation of confidentiality, nondisclosure, or noncompetition;
- (4) an obligation to return or dispose of goods;
- (5) a choice of law or forum ;
- (6) an obligation to arbitrate or otherwise resolve disputes through alternative dispute resolution;
- (7) a term limiting the time for commencing an action or for providing notice;
- (8) an indemnity term;
- (9) a limitation of remedy or modification or disclaimer of warranty;
- (10) any term limiting disclosure of information; and
- (11) other rights, remedies, or limitations if in the circumstances such survival is necessary.

(c) The obligation under subsection (b)(3) must be promptly performed.

PART 4
WARRANTIES

SECTION 2-401. DEFINITIONS. In this part:

- (1) “Damage” means all loss resulting in the ordinary course from a breach of warranty, in person or property as permitted in Section 2-806.
- (2) “Goods” includes a component incorporated in substantially the same condition into other goods.
- (3) “Immediate buyer” means a buyer in a contractual relationship with the seller.
- (4) “Remote buyer” means a buyer or lessee from a person other than the seller against whom a claim of warranty breach is asserted.
- (5) “Representation” means a description, demonstration or depiction of the goods, an affirmation of quality relating to the goods, or a sample or model of the goods.
- (6) “Seller” includes an auctioneer or liquidator that fails to disclose that it is acting on behalf of another person.

SECTION 2-402. WARRANTY OF TITLE AND AGAINST INFRINGEMENT; BUYER’S OBLIGATION AGAINST INFRINGEMENT.

- (a) A seller in a contract for sale warrants that:
  - (1) the title conveyed is good and its transfer is rightful and does not, because of any claim or interest in the goods, unreasonably expose the buyer to litigation; and
  - (2) the goods will be received free from any security interest or other lien or encumbrance of which the buyer at the time of contracting does not have knowledge.
- (b) A warranty under subsection (a) may be disclaimed or modified only by express language in the contract or circumstances giving the immediate buyer reason to know that the seller does not claim title or purport to have right or title as the seller or a third party may have. In an electronic transaction that does not involve a tangible good, the warranty is made only if the seller or a third party has a right or title in the good at the time of contracting.

1 an individual, language is sufficient if it is conspicuous and related to the warranty of title against in
2 language in a record is sufficient to disclaim warranties under this section if it is conspicuous and s

4 (c) A seller who is a merchant that regularly deals in goods of the kind sold warrants that th
5 delivered free of the rightful claim of a third party by way of infringement or the like. However, a b
6 specifications to the seller holds the seller harmless against any claim of infringement or the like th

8 (d) A seller's warranty under this section, made to an immediate buyer, extends to any rem
9 transferee that may reasonably be expected to buy the goods and that suffers damage from breach o
10 rights and remedies of a remote buyer or transferee against the seller for breach of warranty are det

12 (e) A right of action for breach of warranty under this section accrues under Section 2-814(
13 transferee discovers or should have discovered the breach.

14 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-312.

15 Notes

16 1. "Seller" in subsection (a) includes an "auctioneer or liquidator who fails to disclose before
17 is acting on behalf of a principal. Section 2-401(6). See Jones v. Ballard, 573 So.2d 783 (Miss. 1

19 auction. An auctioneer who does not disclose its principal may, however, disclaim the warranty of 20 (b). See Section 2-312 on auctions.

22 2. A warranty that the "title conveyed is good and its transfer rightful," see Sumner v. Fel-A
23 680 P.2d 1109 (Alaska 1984), covers cases where the title is contested and protects the buyer again
24 an otherwise good title that affect the value of the goods. See, e.g., Frank Arnold KRS, Inc. v. L.S.
25 Auction Co., Inc., 806 F.2d 462 (3d Cir. 1986) (two law suits contest title); Jeanneret v. Vichey, 69
26 259 (2d Cir. 1982) (export restrictions in country from which painting was taken affect value); Col
27 540 N.W.2d 172 (S.D. 1995) (conflicting vehicle identification numbers). As one court put it, there
28 encumbrance of the purchaser's title or actual disturbance of possession to permit a purchaser to rec
29 warranty of title when he demonstrates the existence of a cloud on his title, regardless of whether it
30 a third party's title is superior. The policy is that a purchaser "should not be required to engage in 31 validity of his ownership. Maroone Chevrolet, Inc. v. Nordstrom, 587 So.2d 514, 518 (Fla.App. 1

(conflicting vehicle identification numbers).

As such, the language “and uncontested” in subsection (a) of the March, 1997 Draft was deleted.

3. Without more, the statute of limitations for breach of warranty under subsection (a) runs from the time of action accrues under Section 2-814(a). Cf. Foxley v. Sotheby's, Inc., 893 F. Supp. 1224 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (action against auctioneer claiming fraud in sale of forged art work). Under the Uniform Sales Act the statute of limitations runs from delivery or when quiet possession was disturbed. See Menzel v. List, 246 N.E.2d 742 (N.Y. 1969). Whether in warranty of title disputes the statute should run from when the breach was or should have been discovered. Arguably, the latter time, capped by an appropriate tolling limitation, is proper. See Balog v. Centennial Gallery-Hawaii, Inc., 745 F. Supp. 1556 (D.Haw. 1990) (warranty that art work “genuine” explicitly included “future performance”). At the March, 1996 meeting, the Drafting Committee agreed upon a “discovery” rule with a four year period to bring suit after the cause of action accrues. That decision is implemented in Section 2-814, however, still governs all other statute of limitations issues. There is no overall time bar provision that no action can be brought ten years after the goods were delivered to the immediate buyer or when the nonconformity was discovered.

4. The Drafting Committee deleted the phrase “in writing” from an earlier draft of subsection (a). The requirement of disclaimer need not be in a record. If the disclaimer is in a record, however, the language, if combined with the suggested wording in the second sentence, secures a “safe harbor” for the disclaimer.

5. In March, 1995 meeting, the Drafting Committee concluded that (1) the disclaimer provisions in subsections (b) and (c) should be retained in Section 2-402 rather than moved to Section 2-406, and (2) no special rule for consumer buyers was needed in light of Section 2-206. At the September, 1996 meeting, it was agreed that “notice” should be substituted for “knowledge” in subsection (a)(2). Since notice is a broader concept than knowledge, the scope of the warranty against liens or encumbrances. No action was taken.

6. Subsection (e) is new: Lack of privity is no defense between the seller and a remote buyer. This principle is expressed in Section 2-408(b), where the same principle is expressed. A remote buyer's remedies against the seller are determined by the contract between that seller and its immediate buyer and Article 2. In short, the remote buyer's claim against the seller is governed by Section 2-401 (definitions) and Section 2-408(b). Moreover, a remote buyer's claim against the seller must be brought within four years after the cause of action is should be discovered. The cases are divided on whether lack of privity is a defense in warranty of title suits. See Note, 45 Bus. Lawyer 2289 at 2300 (1995); Mitchell v. Webb, 547 (Tex.Civ.App. 1979) (lack of privity no defense).

SECTION 2-403. EXPRESS WARRANTY TO IMMEDIATE BUYER.

(a) If a seller makes a representation or promise relating to the goods to an immediate buyer, the representation or the promise becomes part of the agreement unless a reasonable person in the position of the immediate buyer would believe that the representation or promise became part of the agreement or would believe that the representation or promise was of the value of the goods or purported to be merely the seller's opinion or commendation of the goods.

1 be created under this section even though the seller does not use formal words, such as “warranty”

2 (b) A representation or a promise that becomes part of the agreement is an express warranty
3 obligation to the immediate buyer that the goods will conform to the representation or, if a sample is
4 whole of the goods will conform to the sample, or that the promise will be performed. The obligation
5 goods do not conform to any representation at the time when the tender of delivery was completed
6 performed when due.

7 (c) A seller’s obligation under this section may be created by representations and promises
8 for communication to the public, including advertising, if the immediate buyer had knowledge of the 9 agreement.

10 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-313.

11 Notes

12 1. Section 2-403 deals with express warranties in a direct contractual relationship between 13 buyer. The question is whether descriptions, affirmations, demonstrations, depictions, samples, etc.
14 [see Section 2-401(5)] and promises become part of or terms of the agreement between the parties.
15 This section does not supplant other provisions dealing with contract formation and the scope of an agreement.
16 If a contract between the parties and an express warranty made during negotiations may be excluded by 17 integrated writing, see Section 2-202.

19 2. Subsection (a) states the general principles applicable where an “immediate” buyer claims
20 warranty by the seller. It follows Section 2-313(1) of the 1990 Official Text, except that the phrase
21 “agreement” is substituted for “becomes part of the basis of the bargain.” The change clarifies that a
22 term is treated like any other term of the agreement and that the buyer need not initially prove reliance to 23 enforce the agreement.

25 Subsection (a) also states when a claimed affirmation of fact, promise, description or sample
26 becomes part of the agreement. If the “immediate” buyer alleges and proves what the seller represented or promised
27 about the goods, the usual assumption is that they become part of the agreement unless the seller establishes that
28 a reasonable person would not believe that the representations or promises became part of the agreement
29 if the representations were puffing. This is consistent with the Comments to Section 2-313 of the 1990
30 Official Text and the interpretive case law. This “presumption,” however, is not stated in the statute.

32 One question is whether a reasonable person in the position of the buyer would believe that 33 a fact or promise became part of the agreement. Thus, even if the particular buyer knew of the affirmation
34 there would be no express warranty if a reasonable person in the position of the buyer would not believe 35 that it was puffing.

1 A second question is whether what was affirmed or said about the goods was puffing. Put d
2 language used or conduct an opinion, commendation or a general valuation rather than an affirmation
3 so there is a probable “puffing” defense which the seller can raise in a motion for summary judgment
4 jury.

6 There are a number of factors relevant to whether a buyer is reasonable in believing that an
7 rather than “puffing” is involved. For example, the buyer might be unreasonable if the seller’s representations
8 context (1) were verbal rather than written, (2) were general rather than specific, (3) related to the contract
9 rather than the goods themselves, (4) were “hedged” in some way, (5) related to experimental rather than 10 concerned some aspects of the goods but not a hidden or unexpected non-conformity, (7) were phrased
11 rather than fact, or (8) were not capable of objective measurement. See Federal Signal Corp. v. Sanyo
12 Factors, Inc., 886 P.2d 172 (Wash. 1994), where the court held that the trial court erred in not making
13 where the seller stated that a new product was “better than” an earlier, comparable model. See also 14 Paccar, Inc., 37 F.3d 1181 (6th Cir. 1994) (representations about strength of fiberglass roof which 15 caused personal injury when the truck rolled over were “puffing” as a matter of law).

17 3. Subsection (c)(1) clarifies that an express warranty in a direct contractual relationship made
18 communications to the public, including advertising, if the buyer had knowledge at the time of the advertisement
19 subsection (a), where there is no explicit knowledge requirement.

21 Subsection (b)(2) is taken without change from the first clause in Section 2-313(2) of the 1994

22
23 4. A warranty, express or implied, is breached if the goods do not conform when the seller’s
24 completed. See Section 2-814(c)(1). Thus, if the seller expressly warranted that the goods were new 25 standard to which the goods must conform) and used goods were tendered, there is a breach of warranty.
26 suppose that the seller tendered by notifying the buyer that the goods were available for pick-up. The 27 the contract at that time and the risk of loss did not pass to the buyer. When buyer appeared the next 28 goods had deteriorated. Since the tender was not completed until receipt, the obligation was breached.

29
30 CISG Article 36(1), however, provides that the seller is liable for any “lack of conformity with the contract”
31 risk passes to the buyer, even though the lack of conformity becomes apparent after that time.

32 33 34 SECTION 2-404. IMPLIED WARRANTY OF MERCHANTABILITY;

35 USAGE OF TRADE.

36 (a) Subject to Sections 2-406 and 2-407, a seller that is a merchant with respect to goods of the kind
37 contract for sale an implied warranty that the goods are merchantable. The serving for value of food or drink
38 consumed on the premises or elsewhere is a sale under this section.

39 (b) To be merchantable, goods, at a minimum, must:

40 (1) pass without objection in the trade under the agreed description;

- 1 (2) in the case of fungible goods, be of fair, average quality within the description;
- 2 (3) be fit for the ordinary purposes for which goods of that description are used;
- 3 (4) run, within the variations permitted by the agreement, of even kind, quality, and quantity;
- 4 unit and among all units involved;
- 5 (5) be adequately contained, packaged, and labeled as the agreement or circumstances may require;
- 6 (6) conform to the promise or affirmations of fact made on the container or label.
- 7 (c) Subject to Section 2-408, implied warranties other than those described in this section must be made in writing.
- 8 of dealing or usage of trade.

10 Notes

11 1. Section 2-404(b)(3) has been revised to state that merchantable goods must be fit for the purposes for which 12 which “goods of that description” are used. This is more accurate historically and gives sharper guidance
13 with the standard. It also follows CISG Article 35(2), which states that “Except where the parties have agreed
14 the goods do not conform to the contract unless they: (a) are fit for the purposes for which such goods
15 description would ordinarily be used.

17 Note the overlaps between Section 2-404 on the implied warranty of merchantability and Section
18 2-408 on express warranties. For example, in Section 2-404(a) the description of the goods plays a role
19 “description” is within the definition of “representation” used in Section 2-403. Moreover, subject to 20 labels and affirmations of fact made on the container. Again, these are within the broad definition of 21 important in assessing liability under Section 2-408, dealing with express warranties in other than consumer
22 relationships.

24 2. Subsection (b)(7) in the May, 1995 Draft, dealing with the merchantability of goods to be used
25 to the human body, was deleted at the October, 1995 meeting of the Drafting Committee. The problem
26 catch in a single sentence and are best left for the courts to resolve under the more general standard
27 Section 2-314(b) or the evolving law of products liability. See Restatement of the Law Torts: Products
28 comment (g).

30 3. Privity. Under revised Article 2, an implied warranty of merchantability is made only to the 31 buyer unless three exceptions are satisfied: (1) An implied warranty made to an immediate buyer is made to a
32 foreseeable remote purchaser under Section 2-409(a); (2) The warranty is assigned by the immediate buyer
33 or transferred by operation of law, see Section 2-409(b)(1); or (3) A court, relying on other state law,
34 transfers the warranty to a remote purchaser or user. See Section 2-409(b)(2). The same analysis applies to the implied warranty
35 arises under Section 2-405

1 Under this analysis, it is possible for a manufacturer-seller to make an implied warranty of r
2 remote purchaser. Without more, the manufacturer-seller could be liable to a remote purchaser or t
3 consequential damages, including injury to person or property. The likelihood of this is reduced in 4 because the remote purchaser is bound by disclaimers and limitations in the contract between the se
5 buyer. See Section 2-409(a). There is no such limitation if a court acts under Section 2-409(b)(2)

7 4. Personal injury. 8

9 Without more, a seller who makes and breaches an implied warranty of merchantability can

18 This stance does not resolve the tension between warranty law and tort law where goods cau

21 merchantable under warranty law can they still be defective under tort law and if goods are not defe
22 they be unmerchantable under warranty law. The answer to both questions is yes if the contract sta

24 different standards will be the same in most cases, i.e., unmerchantable goods are frequently defecti

27 The consensus is that the tension should be resolved in a Comment to Section 2-404 rather t

31 When recovery is sought for injury to person or property that allegedly resulted from manufactu
32 in goods sold or inadequate instructions or warnings, the applicable state law of products liability

32 WARRANTY.

33       (a) Language or conduct relevant to the creation of an express warranty and language or con
34 disclaim or modify an express warranty must be construed wherever reasonable as consistent with e
35 Section 2-202 with regard to parol or extrinsic evidence, language or conduct disclaiming or modifi

1 is ineffective to the extent that this construction is unreasonable.

2 (b) Except as otherwise provided in Section 2-402(b) and (e), an implied warranty is disclaimed by the use of language or an expression that, under the circumstances, makes it clear that the implied warranty has been modified. An implied warranty may also be disclaimed or modified by course of performance, course of dealing, or trade usage.

6 (c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (e), language in a record is sufficient to disclaim an implied warranty if the language is conspicuous and:

8 (1) in the case of the implied warranty of merchantability, mentions merchantability;

9 (2) in the case of the implied warranty of fitness, states that “the goods are not warranted for any particular purpose”, or words of similar import;

11 (3) Unless the circumstances indicate otherwise, states that the goods are sold “as is” or words of similar import.

13 (d) If, before entering into a contract, a buyer has examined the goods, sample, or model as to which the seller has declined to examine them, there is no implied warranty with regard to conditions that an examination of the goods under the circumstances would have revealed to the buyer.

16 (e) Except in a sale by auction under Section 2-312, language in a consumer contract is sufficient to modify an implied warranty only if:

18 (1) At the time of contracting, a seller in good faith passes through to a buyer an express warranty obligation created by another seller under Section 2-408(b) that is reasonable in scope, duration and terms; or conspicuous language in a record stating, for example, “You are receiving an express warranty obligation from [manufacturer] instead of any implied warranty of merchantability or fitness from us; or

5 Notes

6 1. Subsection (a) preserves the policy that when language creating and language disclaiming
7 express warranty are inconsistent, the disclaimer is inoperative, subject to Section 2-202 (the “parol
8 if the agreement contained both an express warranty that a car’s mileage was 25,000 and a disclaimer
9 warranties, the express warranty would prevail. If, however, the seller, in contract negotiations, stated
10 been driven more than 25,000 and a subsequent integrated record stated “This car is sold without 11 evidence of the oral express warranty should be excluded under the parol evidence rule. Section 2-
12 contracts, however, the disclaimer in a record would be excluded from the contract if a reasonable person
13 circumstances would not expect to find it in the contract. See Section 2-206(a)

15 2. Subsection (b), which is subject to subsection (e), provides the general rule governing the 16 modification of implied warranties in commercial contracts. After the October, 1995 meeting of the 17 subsections (b), (c), and (d) of the October, 1995 Draft were integrated into a single, new subsection
18 1996 meeting of the Drafting Committee, the decision was made to delete all “regulatory” and “mandatory”
19 subsection (b). The key question is whether under the circumstances, the language, whether or not 20 clear that implied warranties have been disclaimed or modified.

22 The disclaimer or modification of implied warranties by course of performance, course of dealing,
23 trade is now covered in subsection (b).

25 3. Subsection (c), which is also subject to subsection (e), by stating what language contained in a
26 sufficient to disclaim or modify an implied warranty, implements a decision of the Drafting Committee
27 “safeharbor” for commercial contracts. The Drafting Committee rejected the complex “safeharbor”
28 Draft and requested a redraft to comply in substance with Section 2-316(c) of the 1995 Official Text.

30 Under subsection (c), if language of disclaimer or modification is contained in a record and is 31 conspicuous, a valid disclaimer or modification is achieved when the sufficient language for the two 32 for used goods is provided.

34 Note that a failure to satisfy the “safe harbor” of subsection (c) does not mean that the disclaimer is 35 invalid. Rather, the seller must now meet the more open ended standard in subsection (b).

37 4. Subsection (d), which states the effect of a pre-contract examination of the goods, applies to 38 and consumer contracts. A seller who attempts to disclaim or modify implied warranties in consumer 39 contracts must comply with subsection (e).

41 5. Subsection (e) of the March, 1997 Draft stated three alternative ways for a seller to disclaim

1 implied warranties in consumer contracts. The May, 1997 Draft, however, made several major changes to 2 the text.

4 Note that the revised subsection is mandatory: In a consumer contract, one or more of the stated warranties
5 satisfied.

7 Note also that auction sales to consumers are excepted from subsection (e). A disclaimer or modification
8 warranty at an auction is sufficient if subsections (c) is satisfied. In most auctions, the “as is” disclaimer
9 (c)(3) will be involved.

11 Here is a brief comparison of the two drafts.

12
13 (a) Subsection (e)(1) of the January, 1997 draft validated disclaimers where the language conformed to 14 applicable federal law. This subsection has been deleted in the July, 1997 Draft.

16 (b) Subsection (e)(2) of the January, 1997 draft stated that where the seller, in good faith, makes a
17 warranty in lieu of an implied warranty of quality, the language is sufficient if it complies with subsection
18 language must be conspicuous, in a record and satisfy the content requirements. The July, 1997 Draft
19 (e)(1)] now makes it clearer that a dealer or retailer in a consumer contract may disclaim or modify
20 conspicuous language of prescribed content if, at the time of contracting, that seller has passed through 21 warranty from a manufacturer or producer.

23 (c) Subsection (e)(3) [now e(2)] provided a safe harbor through conspicuous language in a record or 24 language the consumer has separately authenticated. The required content of the language was stated in

26 Alternative A was taken from a Ford Motor Company consumer lease, provided by Mike Green. This 27 this language is rated “very hard” on three of the accepted readability scales and “average” on the fourth.
28 to Mike Ferry of the Legal Services of Eastern Missouri, Inc., “very hard” means that it is comparable to 29 year college level.

30
31 Alternative B was suggested by Mike Ferry and rates “very easy” on three of the four scales and “average” on the fourth.
32 The first sentence says you get no promises unless they are in the contract. The second says “no implied warranty.”
33 second says “no fitness” and the third says “you assume the risk.”

34
35 After extensive discussion, the Drafting Committee approved the language now contained in the July, 1997 Draft, subject to further tests of its comprehensibility.

36
39 SECTION 2-407. CUMULATION AND CONFLICT OF WARRANTIES.

40 Warranties, whether express or implied, must be construed as consistent with each other and as cumulative unless 41 that construction is unreasonable, the intent of the parties determines which warranty prevails. In a contract
42 the following rules apply:

1           (1) Exact or technical specifications prevail over an inconsistent sample or model or general
2 description.

3           (2) A sample, model or demonstration prevails over inconsistent general language of description.

4           (3) Except in a consumer contract, an express warranty prevails over an inconsistent implied
5 an implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose.

6 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-317.

7 Notes

8           1. One change was made in Section 2-409. An implied warranty of merchantability in a contract
9 is inconsistent with an express warranty is not displaced under Section 2-409(3). Rather, the requirement
10 2-406(b) must be satisfied.

25 from a person the seller has an obligation to the remote buyer and its transferee and, in the case of a

26 buyer, to any member of the family or household of that consumer buyer, that the goods will conform

1 or that the promise will be performed, unless a reasonable person in the position of the remote buyer
2 representation or promise or would believe that the representation was merely of the value of the goods
3 merely the seller's opinion or commendation of the goods.

4 (d) An obligation may be created under this section even though the seller does not use formal
5 "warranty" or "guaranty".

6 (e) An obligation arising under this section is breached when the goods are received by the buyer

9 (f) The following rules apply to the remedies for breach of an obligation created under this section:

10 (1) A seller under subsections (b) and (c) may modify or limit the remedies available to the buyer
11 breach, but a modification or limitation is not effective unless it is communicated to the remote buyer
12 representation or promise.

13 (2) Damages may be proved in any manner that is reasonable. Unless special circumstances require,
14 proximate damages of a different amount;

15 (A) a measure of damages if the goods do not conform to a representation is the value of the goods as 16 represented less the value of the goods as delivered; and

17 (B) a measure of damages for breach of a promise is the value of the promised performance less the 18 value of any performance made.

19 (3) A seller in breach under this section is liable for incidental or consequential damages under

5 Section 2-408, dealing with express warranties to remote purchasers and transferees, combin
6 and 2-405 in the November, 1996 Draft. It is in addition to the warranties extended under Section 2
7 intended to limit the judicial development of broader grounds for imposing liability on a seller to a
8 Section 2-409(b)(2).

10 1. Section 2-408(b) “Pass through” warranties.

11
12 (a) New Section 2-408(b) deals specifically with the “pass through” warranty, including the 13 box, made by a seller (usually a manufacturer) to remote purchasers and their transferees through a 14 intermediary (usually a retailer in the chain of distribution) who is not an agent of the seller.

16 If the intermediary is an agent of the seller, Section 2-403 applies. Other cases where Section 2
17 include those where there is direct dealing between the seller and buyer through an intermediary
18 manufacturer makes an offer to the public (if you buy and use this product, the following will o 19 individuals accept the offer by purchasing the goods from a retailer.

21 The warranty is made to a remote purchaser, defined in Section 2-401(4), and the household and
22 consumer buyer and is extended to a transferee from the remote buyer, who is sheltered. The tr
23 dependent upon the rights of the remote purchaser.

25 The obligation created is independent of any contract between the remote purchaser and the inte
26 terms of that contract may differ from the obligation created under subsection (b).

27
28 (b) Subsection (b) states when the seller’s obligation to the remote purchaser is created. Th
29 when the goods are delivered to the remote purchaser. Nevertheless, the alleged affirmations or pro
30 obligation if the remote buyer, upon learning of the representation or promise, would not believe it,
31 the position of the remote purchase would not believe it or would believe that a promise or represen
32 follows the exclusionary language of Section 2-403(b).

34 Common situations where subsection (b) applies include warranties made on goods or in a r
35 box (including “shrink wrapped” products), warranties made on the goods or on labels or records a
36 and warranties in literature delivered before, at or after delivery of the goods. Since a direct obligat
37 seller, it is irrelevant that the representations or promises were made after the remote purchaser paid
38 the goods from the retailer. The phrase “otherwise packaged with the product” signals an expansiv
39 subsection.

41 (c) The assumption underlying subsection (b) is that the seller has no other warranty (or cor
42 to the remote purchaser. Thus, the seller should be able to define what affirmations or promises are

1 understanding that no implied warranties are created. In short, there is no need to disclaim that whi

3 Suppose, however, that the representation or promise attempts to disclaim or limit the time
4 may be asserted or to limit a remedy for breach. Should these limitations be part of the obligation c
5 yes under subsection (f)(1).

7 Should the remote purchaser be bound by the limitations simply because he elected to enforce
8 created under subsection (a)? The answer is yes if the limitation was delivered at the time the repre
9 made. This accord with two recent cases, Olathe Mfg. v. Browning Mfg., 915 P.2d 86 (Kan. 1996)
10 Hornberger v. GMC, 929 F. Supp. 884 (E.D. Pa. 1996), where the courts concluded that a buyer wh
11 “pass through” warranty was not bound by limitations on that warranty or remedies that were not co
12 of contracting.

13 14 2. Section 2-408(c). Express warranties to the public.

16 New Section 2-408(b) deals with warranty obligations arising from communications to the p
17 when a remote purchaser with knowledge of a representation or promise made by the seller to the p
18 goods from an immediate seller or lessor in the chain of distribution, the seller making the represen
19 obligation to the remote buyer if the goods fail to conform unless the stated limitations are establish

13 March, 1997 meeting, the Drafting Committee voted for a limited horizontal extension in the case o
14 buyers and this was not limited to economic loss.

16 The protected remote person's rights against the seller are defined and limited by the terms
17 between the seller and the immediate buyer and the terms of this Act. It is, in short, a derivative wa
18 beneficiary stands in the shoes of the immediate buyer. Express warranties under Section 2-408, ho
19 limited. They create direct obligations to the remote purchaser. Thus, limitations in the contract be 20 immediate buyer would not bind the remote purchaser.

22 Moreover, where there is no exclusion in the contract with the immediate buyer the seller is 23 remote purchaser or transferee for "consequential lost profits. See Section 2-806. Thus, a remote
24 purchaser could not recover lost profits resulting from the breach but could recover other consequ
25 including injury to person or property.

26
27 Although protected persons may be called beneficiaries, the warranty extension is based m
28 intention of the parties. The seller should be responsible to foreseeable buyers and transferees for t
29 goods warranted to the immediate buyer. But since the warranty is derivative, the protected purcha

33
34 Subsection (b).

35
36 Subsection (b) states two things that are not diminished or displaced by Section 2-409.

37
38 Subsection (b)(1) clarifies that Section 2-409 supplements rights and remedies of third party
39 assignees under contract law and transferees by operation of law. For example, subsection (a) shou
40 cases where an immediate buyer to whom a warranty has been made by the seller assigns the warran
41 remote purchaser under Section 2-503. In these cases, the remote purchaser's rights against the sell
42 assignment rather than subsection (a) and are subject to the contract and relevant defenses between 44 Co. v. Carbonline Co., 864 F.2d 560 (7th Cir. 1989).

46 Subsection (b)(2), taken from Section 2A-316, states that neither Section 2-408 nor 2-409 d

1 law and equity that a court might use to extend a warranty beyond the immediate buyer. Thus, a c

6 2-409 does not state the remote purchaser's rights and remedies, they would be those under Article
7 particular case. See Section 2-408(f), which might be applied by analogy.

9 2. Subsection (c) states that the "operation of this section cannot be varied by agreement, u

12 does not limit the power of the seller and immediate buyer to shape the terms of the contract. Rath
13 warranty and remedy terms have been agreed.

15 3. The definition of "the seller" in Section 2-401 is broad enough to include a seller whose

27 (a) Identification of goods as goods to which a contract refers may be made at any time and

17 (b) A party may delegate to another person its performance under a contract for sale unless

31
32 5. If a contract contains warranties and the buyer either transfers the contract or assigns the

1 purported true owner must give up possession and control of the goods in that transaction, but not r

7 See Johnson & Johnson Prod. v. Dal Intern. Trading Co., 798 F.2d 100 (3d Cir. 1986) (good faith
8 purchaser of voidable title protected).

10 2. Section 2-504(d) protects a BIOCB from a merchant to whom goods have been entrusted
11 2-504(e): The BIOCB takes free of “all rights and title” of the entruster. See Prenger v. Baker, 542
12 (Iowa 1995). The phrase “transfer the rights free of” the security interest is clearer in this context th
13 BIOCB takes the rights under the security interest.

14
15 Normally, a BIOCB will take free of a security interest “created by his seller” under Section
16 though the secured was not an entruster under Section 2-504(e). See Key Bank v. Maine v. Estes, 6
17 162 (Maine 1995) (consumer debtor purchases boat and, without secured party’s consent, purchases
18 boat to himself, and sells to BIOCB). Occasionally, a secured party will gain control of goods in w 19 interest and entrust them to a merchant who did not create the security interest, see Section 9-307(1
20 2-504(d), the entrusting secured party will lose the security interest to a buyer in the ordinary course
21 Sears Consumer Fin. Corp. v. Thunderbird Prods., 802 P.2d 1032 (Ariz. 1990).

23 3. The “shelter” principle operates, see subsection (d). Thus, if goods are entrusted to a me
24 the merchant sells them to a non-merchant, the non-merchant purchaser from the merchant also has 25 title to a BIOCB.

26
27 4. Except as to the rights of a buyer in the ordinary course of business who buys out of inve

31 32 33 SECTION 2-505. RIGHTS OF SELLER’S CREDITORS AGAINST

34 GOODS SOLD.

35 (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (b) and (c), the rights of creditors of the sel
36 goods identified to a contract for sale and retained by the seller are subject to the buyer’s rights und
37 and 2-824(b) if the buyer’s rights vest before a creditor’s claim in rem attaches to the goods.

38 (b) A creditor of a seller which has retained possession of goods subject to a sale or identifi
39 contract as void or voidable if, as against the creditor, retention of possession by the seller is fraudu

1 under any statute or rule of law. However, it is not fraudulent for a seller, for a commercially reasonable
2 contract becomes enforceable, to retain possession in good faith and in current course of trade.

3 (c) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (a) or Section 2-504(d), this article does not prevent a
4 creditor of the seller under Article 9 or in a case in which an identification to the contract or delivery is made
5 current course of trade but in satisfaction of or as security for a preexisting claim for money, securities, or other property
6 circumstances that the transaction would constitute a fraudulent transfer or voidable preference under 7 law other than this article.

8 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-402.

9 Notes

10 1. Under revised subsection (a), the rights of “creditors of the seller” not just “unsecured creditors”
11 subject to the buyer’s right to possession of the goods under Section 2-824 (formerly Section 2-502) and 12 (formerly Section 2-716), and Section 2-822(b) (formerly Section 2-709(2)). This change expands the 13 oriented remedies against creditors of the seller, including secured and lien creditors. The right to possession
14 however, does not determine priorities over those creditors in the goods or the proceeds. The language
15 (proposed by the ABA Task Force) states the priority rule: The buyer’s rights must vest before the security interest 16 attaches.

18 2. The rights of an Article 9 secured creditor of the seller against a buyer are preserved under this article
19 unless stated otherwise in Sections 2-824 and 2-807 or Section 2-504(c) is involved. Revised subsection (a)
20 provides a priority rule if the buyer’s right vests before the security interest attaches. If the security interest
21 the buyer’s right to possession from the seller is preserved subject to the security interest unless the security interest
22 course of business.

24 A few illustrations reveal the broad operation of this provision. In all, assume that the buyer has not taken
25 possession of goods retained by the seller under either Section 2-824 or 2-807.

26
27 #1. C becomes an unsecured creditor of S either before or after the contract for sale. C loses priority over S’s
28 case unless S’s retention is fraudulent under Section 2-505(b) or (c)(2) applies.

29
30 #2. LC obtains a judicial lien on the goods either before or after S retained possession. After the lien
31 a special property interest by virtue of identification, Section 2-502, and a right to possession of the goods
32 2-824 (i.e., B’s right vests). If LC’s lien attaches before B’s rights vest, B takes subject to the judicial lien.
33 attaches after B’s rights vest, B takes free of the lien under subsection (a).

35 #3. SP creates a security interest in the goods which attaches either before or after the buyer takes possession.
36 before, a buyer in the ordinary course of business may take free of that security interest under Section 2-403.
37 B’s status as a BIOC should arise upon identification of the goods not when possession is transferred.

1 take subject to buyer's rights in the collateral, even though the buyer has not perfected a security interest in the collateral.

3 Since December, 1995 representatives of the Article 2 and Article 9 Drafting Committees have
4 discuss this and other overlap problems between sales and secured transactions. Moreover, the problem
5 the 1996 Annual Meeting and discussion continued at the September, 1996 meeting of the Drafting
6 motion to give the buyer a "super" priority under Article 2 was narrowly defeated). Although a general
7 emerged on some issues, others remain for decision. More specifically, when does the buyer protect 8 become a BIOCB? The right to possession (which protects the buyer's need for the goods) is under 9 status arises when the buyer has a right to possession against the seller, not when possession is actually
10 right arises when the buyer has a special property interest in the goods and the right to possession arises

14 SECTION 2-506. SALE ON APPROVAL AND SALE OR RETURN;

15 SPECIAL INCIDENTS.

16 (a) If delivered goods conform to the contract and may be returned by the buyer, the transaction is

17 (1) a sale on approval, if the goods are delivered primarily for use; or 18 (2) a sale or return, if the goods are delivered primarily for resale.

19 (b) Under a sale on approval:

20 (1) the risk of loss and the title to goods identified by the contract do not pass to the buyer until

21 (2) use of the goods consistent with the purpose of trial is not an acceptance, but a failure to

26 (c) Under a sale or return:

27 (1) the option to return extends to the whole or any commercial unit of the goods while in the

28 original condition but must be exercised seasonably; and 29 (2) the return is at the buyer's risk and expense.

30 (d) An "or return" term of a contract for sale negates the sale aspect of a contract within the meaning of

2 (e) Goods held on approval are not subject to claims of a buyer's creditors until acceptance
3 held on sale or return are subject to those claims while in the [if delivered to a merchant buyer and 4 possession.

6 Notes

7 1. Section 2-506 has been revised to include all material on the nature and the special incident
8 return and "sale on approval" in one section. Thus, old Section 2-327 has been rolled into Section
9 on consignments and creditor's rights, previously in Section 2-326, was contained in a new Section
10 that the Drafting Committee, at the March, 1996 meeting, voted to move the rights of a consignor and 11 consignee from Section 2-407 to Article 9. Thus, except for Section 2-504(c) on entrusting, Article 12 about either a bailment or a consignment transaction, whether or not creditor's rights are involved.

14 2. New Section 2-506(e) preserves the traditional creditor's rights distinction between "approval"
15 With the deletion of Section 2-407 in an earlier draft,[see below], Article 2 says nothing about what 16 and what the seller can do trump them. A possible solution, included in revised subsection (e), makes
17 (whatever they are) depend upon whether the seller in a sale or return delivered them to a merchant
18 suggested, however, limiting protection to cases where the buyer is a merchant is unsound.

20 To illustrate, suppose a brewery sells beer to a retailer to be "returned" if the beer is not sold

29 tentative proposals, revised Article 9 now: (1) Defines consignment and defines security interest to 30 whether or not for security; (2) Applies to "any consignment"; (3) Requires perfection of a consignment
31 prescribes how a consignor may file a financing statement; (4) Defines the rights of creditors of a
32 consignee; and (5) Defers consideration of the duties and remedial rights of the consignor upon default.

34 4. Assuming that revised Article 9 will ultimately cover most aspects of a consignment for 35 code provisions covering a "pure" consignment, i.e., a bailment with the bailee acting as an agent with

PART 6
PERFORMANCE

SECTION 2-601. GENERAL OBLIGATIONS. Parties are obligated to perform in accordance with the contract.
SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-301.

Notes

1. Section 2-601 is derived from former Section 2-301 which provided that the seller’s obligation to deliver and the buyer’s obligation was to accept and pay in accordance with the contract. Compare Article 53. The phrasing of the parties’ obligations is broader than that stated in former Section 2-301. The phrasing is intended to encompass all of the obligations of the parties’ contract, not merely those relating to payment for the goods. “Contract” as defined in Section 1-201(11) means the total legal obligation determined from their agreement (Section 1-201(3)), the provisions of the U.C.C. or any other applicable provision makes explicit what is implicit throughout Article 2, that each party has to perform its obligations by the contract.
2. The July 1996 draft (Section 2-501(b)) stated that each party’s obligation to perform was subject to the other party’s substantial performance of its obligation it that other party was to perform first under the substantial performance rule was derived from general principles of contract law. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 237. The July 1996 draft (Section 2-501(c)) also provided that a nonmaterial breach entitled the aggrieved party to remedies but did not entitle the aggrieved party to withhold its own performance. Those two subsections were as inconsistent with the decision to retain the perfect tender rule in Section 2-703 and not necessary to include service contracts connected with the sale of goods within the scope of Article 2. (November 1996 Committee meeting). To reflect the decision to not cover service contracts, the provisions contained in service contracts have been deleted (Sections 2-502, 2-503, 2-504). Even though service contracts are within the scope of Article 2, service obligations may arise as part of a limited remedy such as a promise to repair. The issues presented by that service promise is the level of the repair obligation required and the remedy if repair is not provided as promised. Those issues are addressed in Section 2-810 on limited remedies.
3. Section 2-505 from the July 1996 draft has been consolidated with Section 2-604 of the July 1996 draft to Section 2-702 of this draft in order to deal with waiver of breach concepts all in one section.

SECTION 2-602. MANNER OF SELLER’S TENDER OF DELIVERY.

- (a) Tender of delivery requires that the seller put and hold conforming goods at the buyer’s disposal and any notification reasonably necessary for the buyer to take delivery. A tender of delivery includes tender of goods to be installed or assembled in accordance with the agreement to install or assemble the goods. Tender must be at a reasonable hour. A tender of goods is not effective if the goods are not available for inspection by the buyer at a reasonable hour.

1 for the period reasonably necessary to enable the buyer to take possession or control of the goods.
2 facilities reasonably suited to receive the goods.

3 (b) If the seller is required or authorized to send the goods to the buyer but the agreement calls for 4 delivery at a particular destination, tender requires that the seller deliver conforming goods to the carrier.
5 Section 2-603.

6 (c) If the agreement requires the seller to deliver at a particular destination, tender requires that the seller
7 subsection (a) and, in an appropriate case, the tender of documents [of title] pursuant to subsections (b) and (c).
8 need not deliver at a particular destination unless required by a specific agreement or by the commercial
9 the terms used by the parties.

10 (d) If conforming goods of a seller are in the possession of a bailee and are to be delivered to the buyer
11 being moved, the following rules apply:

12 (1) Tender requires the seller to tender a negotiable document of title covering the goods and the 13 acknowledgment by the bailee to the buyer of the buyer's right to possession of the goods.

14 (2) Tender to the buyer of a nonnegotiable document of title or of a record directing the bailee to deliver the goods
15 sufficient unless the buyer seasonably objects. However, risk of loss of the goods and of any failure of the 16 the document [of title] or to obey the direction remains on the seller until the buyer has had a reasonable time to 17 document [of title] or direction. A refusal by the bailee to honor the document [of title] or to obey the direction
18 tender. Receipt by the bailee of notification of the buyer's rights fixes those rights as against the bailee.

19 (e) If an agreement requires a seller to deliver a document [of title], the following rules apply:

20 (1) All required documents [of title] must be tendered in correct form, except as provided in subsection (2).
21 with respect to bills of lading in a set.

22 (2) Tender through customary banking channels is sufficient, and dishonor of a draft or other payment
23 payment accompanying the documents constitutes nonacceptance or rejection.

5 In any case, the tender “rules, in the absence of contrary agreement, must be clear and adapt

7 or the goods are in the possession of a bailee. Interpretation of these requirements will be more difficult
8 terms in former Sections 2-319 through 2-324 have been deleted.

10 4. The bracketed language in subsections (c), (d), and (e) is designed to highlight a difference
11 words “document” and “draft” are used in Article 5 that is broader than used throughout the other articles.
12 Compare Section 1-201(a)(15) defining “document of title” with Section 5-102(a)(6) defining “document of title.”
13 3-104(e) defining “draft” and Comment 11 to Section 5-102 stating “draft” in Article 5 is different from “document.”
14

15 5. It should be noted that draft Section 9-311(c) proposes a change from current Sections 9-311(a) and (b) to
16 provide that a secured party may perfect its security interest in the goods in the hands of a bailee who holds a
17 negotiable document of title for the goods by mere notification to the bailee. Draft Section 9-311(c) provides that 18 a secured party does not perfect its security interest in goods in the hands of the bailee who has not issued a
19 document for those goods until the bailee acknowledges in writing that it holds the goods for the secured party.
20 This policy issues different in this context that mere notification should fix rights as against third parties.

23 6. CISGA. Under Article 30, the seller must “deliver the goods, hand over any documents relating to the goods,
24 and transfer the property in the goods, as required by the contract and this Convention. Articles 31 and 32 deal with 25 how this is to be done, with Article 31 the counterpart of Section 2-602 and Article 32 the counterpart of Section 2-602(d)(2).
26

27 Article 31(b) deals with the case where no carriage of the goods is involved and the “contract” is for the sale of
28 goods, or unidentified goods to be drawn from a specific stock or to be manufactured or produced, or for the sale of
29 goods, or unidentified goods to be drawn from a specific stock or to be manufactured or produced, or for the sale of

36 SECTION 2-603. SHIPMENT BY SELLER.

38 (a) If a seller is required or authorized to send the goods to the buyer and the contract does not specify a particular
39 at a particular destination, the following rules apply:

40 (1) The seller shall put the goods in the possession of a carrier. However, unless required by usage of trade, the seller need not make a contract for their transportation or obtain and 41

1 of title necessary to enable the buyer to obtain possession or control of the goods.

2 (2) The seller shall promptly notify the buyer of the shipment if the goods are not clearly

3 contract by markings on the goods, shipping documents, or otherwise.

4 (b) A seller's failure to notify the buyer of the shipment or to make a proper contract for transportation

5 required by subsection (a), is a ground for rejection only if material delay or loss results.

6 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-504.

7 Notes

8 1. Section 2-603 changes former Section 2-504 by not obligating the seller to make a contract for transportation
9 or to obtain and deliver documents unless the buyer requests the seller to do so or the seller is required by 10 the trade. This change is designed to bring Article 2 more in line with commercial practice. See Journal of 11 Incoterms and UCC Article 2 – Conflicts and Confusions, 31 The International Lawyer 111,
12 129-30 (1997). In accord with international practice as reflected in CISG Article 32, the seller need not 13 when the goods are not clearly identified to the contract by markings on the goods, documents or other 14 the rule from former Section 2-504 which required the seller to notify the buyer in all cases.

16 Section 2-603 states the rules for tender when the seller is not obligated to deliver at a particular place.
17 Section 2-602(b). The rules for tender in destination contracts are stated in Section 2-602(c) and address
18 the cost and risk of making an appropriate contract for shipment with the carrier.

20 2. CISGA. Many international contracts for sale involve "carriage of the goods. In the absence of 21 delivery terms, such as the Incoterms 1990 of the International Chamber of Commerce, Articles 31 and 32
22 what the seller must do to deliver the goods. In the absence of agreement to deliver at "any other place, 23 consists of "handing the goods over to the first carrier for transmission to the buyer. Article 31(a).
24 "clearly identified to the contract the seller need not notify the buyer of the "consignment. Article 32(1).
25 point, unless the seller is "bound to arrange for carriage of the goods it need not make any contract for 26 32(2). Even if the seller is not bound to obtain insurance on the carriage, it must "at the buyer's request
27 available information necessary to enable [the buyer] to effect such insurance. Article 32(3).

30 SECTION 2-604. SELLER'S SHIPMENT UNDER RESERVATION.

31 (a) If a seller has identified goods to the contract by or before shipment, the following rules apply:

32 (1) Procurement of a negotiable bill of lading reserves in the seller a security interest in the goods.

33 Procurement of the bill to the order of a financing agency or the buyer indicates in addition only the seller's

34 transferring that interest to the person named.

Notes

There is one change in former Section 2-506. Because a presentation under a letter of credit accompanied by a draft as defined in Article 3, Section 5-102 Comment 11, but the rights obtained presentation under a letter of credit should be comparable, the phrasing of this section has been broadened to include presentations under a letter of credit.

SECTION 2-606. EFFECT OF SELLER'S TENDER; DELIVERY ON CONDITION.

(a) Tender of delivery is a condition to a buyer's duty to accept and pay for the goods. Tender of delivery is not a condition to acceptance of the goods and payment according to the agreement. The seller shall tender first but not deliver until the buyer has tendered payment.

(b) Subject to Section 2-816, if payment is due and demanded on the delivery of goods or documents, the buyer's right against the seller to retain or dispose of them is conditional upon the buyer's making tender of payment.

SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-507.

Notes

1. Section 2-606 makes two substantive changes from former Section 2-507. First, subsection (a) changes the default rule that the seller shall tender delivery first, but need not complete delivery unless the buyer tenders payment. This change is consistent with the PEB study report. Second, subsection (b) retains the concept of seller's right to reclaim upon a conditional delivery in a cash sale transaction subject to the requirements found in Section 2-816 which explicitly governs cash sale reclamations and transactions governed by former Section 2-702. Section 2-816 is consistent with PEB Commentary on Section 2-816. Although the PEB study report recommended that subsection (b) be eliminated and the right to reclaim be integrated with Section 2-702, the Drafting Committee decided that it was better to retain the right to reclaim in subsection (b) and make the right to reclaim in a conditional delivery subject to Section 2-816 for cash and credit sale reclamations.

2. CISGA. Article 58(1), in accord, provides that if the buyer is "not bound to pay the price at a specific time, he must pay it when the seller places either the goods or documents controlling their disposal in accordance with the contract and this Convention. If, however, the buyer must pay "or the price is determinable from the contract and this Convention, it must pay "without the need for any request or formality on the part of the seller. Thus, if no time is fixed to pay the seller must tender first. But if a time is fixed, the buyer must pay at that time whether the seller tenders or not.

16 (a) If goods are tendered, delivered or identified to a contract for sale, the buyer has a right
17 acceptance to inspect them at any reasonable place and time and in any reasonable manner. If the s
18 authorized to send the goods to the buyer, the inspection may be after their arrival.

19 (b) Expenses of inspection must be borne by the buyer.

20 (c) A buyer is not entitled to inspect the goods before payment of the price if the contract p

2 failure of which avoids the contract.

4 Notes

5 1. Section 2-609 continues the rules from former Section 2-513 with two changes. The first change is 6 given the deletion of the shipment terms provisions from revised Article 2. Subsection (c) states a rule for
7 determining when the buyer does not have a right to inspect before payment. Former Section 2-319(4)
8 and Section 2-321(1), Article 2 stated presumptions regarding when inspection was not allowed prior to payment.
9 subsection (c)(1), whether payment is required before inspection will depend upon the commercial
10 terms employed. The catch all language added to subsection (c)(1) is designed to dovetail with Section 2-319(4)
11 terms. In subsection (c)(2), the phrase “payment against documents” has been changed to “payment against 12 documents” because of uncertainty about the meaning of “payment against documents” given that the phrase
13 appears in the Incoterms of the International Chamber of Commerce and the deletion of shipment terms from 14 defined which terms required payment against documents. See Sections 2-319(4), 2-320(4), and 2-321(1). The 15 change is to bracket language at the end of subsection (b) to conform to the change in the definition of 16 Section 2-805 which no longer confines expenses to goods rightfully rejected, but rather to expenses incurred
17 the goods which are the subject matter of the contract.

19 2. CISGA. Unless otherwise agreed, the buyer has a right to examine the goods upon tendering
20 payment. Article 58(3). If carriage of the goods is involved, examination “may be deferred until after the goods
21 arrived at their destination. Article 38(2). A special rule applies when the goods are redirected or reshipped.
22 Article 38(2).

24 The buyer must act fast to examine the goods, Article 38(1), and may lose the right to rely upon the 25 non-conformity if timely notice, as defined in Article 39, is not given. The buyer, however, is protected by 26 Articles 38 and 39 if the seller knew “or could not have been aware of” the non-conformity and delivered the goods
27 40, and is entitled to damages if “he has a reasonable excuse for his failure to give the required notice.”

28
30 SECTION 2-610. WHEN DOCUMENTS DELIVERABLE ON

31 ACCEPTANCE OR PAYMENT. Documents of title against which a draft is drawn must be delivered to the 32 the drawee or to the issuer of a letter of credit that honors the draft on acceptance of the draft if the 33 than [a reasonable time] [three days] after presentment. Otherwise, delivery of the documents [of title] is required
34 payment.

35 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-514.

36 Notes

1           1. Section 2-610 states a default rule for determining when the person holding documents o
2 those documents when presenting a draft to the buyer (drawee) or to an issuer of a letter of credit. 7
3 when the draft is accepted by the buyer or issuer under Section 3-409 or when the draft is paid by th
4 Section 4-503, if the presenter is a bank, the presumption is that if the draft is payable more than th
5 presentment, acceptance of the draft is sufficient to entitle the drawee or issuer to delivery of the do
6 payable within 3 days of presentment, then the drawee or issuer are not entitled to the documents un
7 The 3 day time period is not a rule that determines when the draft must be honored but rather what 8 determine when documents must be delivered. Compare Section 5-108(b). Some have argued that 9 should be lengthened to a “reasonable time. That debate is preserved for further decision by the br
10 end of the first sentence.

12           2. Section 2-610 continues the rule from former Section 2-514 with one change, to broaden 13 include an issuer who honors a letter of credit given that a letter of credit may be drawn on without 14 defined in Article 3. See Section 5-102, Comment 11. The bracketed language at the beginning of 15 a need to decide which definition of documents should be employed here, the Article 1 definition o
16 Section 1-201(15), or the Article 5 definition of “document, Section 5-102(a)(6) which is broader 17 “document of title.

1. Section 2-611 makes no changes of substance from former Section 2-310.

SECTION 2-612. RISK OF LOSS.

(a) This section is subject to Section 2-506(b) and (c).

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), risk of loss passes to the buyer regardless of the goods to the contract as follows:

(1) Subject to this subsection, the risk of loss passes to a buyer upon receipt of the goods if the buyer does not intend to take possession, risk of loss passes when the buyer receives control of the goods.

(2) If a contract requires or authorizes the seller to ship goods by carrier, the following rules apply:

(A) If the contract does not require delivery at a particular destination, the risk of loss passes to the buyer when the goods are delivered to the carrier as required by Sections 2-602 and 2-603, even if the seller reserves the right of disposal.

(B) If the contract requires delivery at a particular destination and the goods arrive there without being tendered in possession of the carrier, the risk of loss passes to the buyer when the goods are tendered in the manner provided in Section 2-602.

(3) If goods are held by a bailee to be delivered without being moved, the risk of loss passes to the buyer:

(A) on the buyer's receipt of a negotiable document of title covering the goods with the document duly indorsed;

(B) on acknowledgment by the bailee to the buyer of the buyer's right to possession of the goods;

(C) after the buyer's receipt of a nonnegotiable document of title or record directing delivery to the buyer as provided in Section 2-602(d)(2).

(c) A breach of contract by either party affects risk of loss only in the following cases:

(1) If the buyer rightfully and effectively rejects the goods or revokes acceptance of the goods;

1 has the risk of loss from the time when the rejection or revocation is effective.

2 (2) If the seller has tendered nonconforming goods, the risk of loss has passed to the buyer.
3 are damaged or lost before the buyer effectively rejects or revokes acceptance, the seller has the risk of loss.
4 nonconformity of the goods caused the damage or loss.

5 (3) If conforming goods are identified to the contract when the buyer repudiates or is otherwise
6 and the risk of loss has not otherwise passed to the buyer, the buyer has the risk of loss for those goods
7 reasonable time after the breach or repudiation.

8 Notes

9 1. Former Sections 2-509 and 2-510 provided for passage of the risk of loss depending upon 10 the goods, whether there was a breach of contract, and whether the loss was insured rather than 11 to the buyer. If no breach of contract existed, then Section 2-509 determined when the risk had passed
12 report recommended that Section 2-510 be deleted as an unwise attempt to reallocate loss in the event
13 breach was not causally connected with the loss. In addition, the attempt to reallocate the loss based 14 insurance coverage was unclear in application. See note 5 infra. Section 2-612 accords with the PE
15 adopting the perspective that opportunity to control the goods and prevent the loss is the primary point
16 has the risk of loss as a default rule. Thus, breach of contract and insurance coverage have been rejected
17 relevant to the passage of risk of loss. Subsection (c) provides three exceptions to govern three particular
18 of loss issues depend on whether there is a breach of contract. See note 6, infra. Of course, the parties
19 allocate the risk of loss in a manner different than provided in Section 2-612.

21 2. The PEB study report also recommended that the distinction between a merchant and a non-merchant
22 former Section 2-509(3) be eliminated and that risk of loss pass upon receipt of the goods. Under former 23 if the seller was a merchant, the risk of loss passed to the buyer upon receipt of the goods, otherwise
24 to the buyer upon tender of delivery. Subsection (b)(1) implements this recommendation, providing 25 passes to the buyer when the buyer receives receipt or control of the goods. Receipt is defined in Section
26 taking delivery of the goods. Delivery is defined as taking physical possession of the goods. Section
27 illustrate, suppose that S contracts to sell B a haystack located in a field and controlled by S's agent
28 independent bailee. The goods are identified to the contract but B never expects to take possession
29 resell the hay to a third person, who will then take possession. In this case, when S tenders delivery
30 B, although not in possession, has control of the goods and the risk of loss has passed. The fact that 31 contract after tender but before possession is taken is irrelevant. Except as provided in subsection (c), 32 tendered conforming goods is also irrelevant to the passage of risk of loss to buyer.

34 3. Subsection (a) continues the rule from former Section 2-509(4) that the rules of Section 2-506
35 the contrary provisions of sale on approval and sale or return found in Section 2-506.

37 4. Subsections (b)(2) and (b)(3) restate the provisions from former Section 2-509(1) and (2)
38 changes. First, as stated above, the conformity of the goods is not relevant to passage of the risk of loss.

1 the principles of these subsections apply even if there is a breach by the seller. Second, consistent v
2 Section 2-602(d)(1), the acknowledgment sufficient to pass the risk of loss to the buyer is the bailee
3 the buyer under Section 2-612(b)(3)(B). See Jason's Foods, Inc. v. Peter Eckrich & Sons, Inc.,
4 774 F. 2d 214 (7th Cir. 1985). These changes are consistent with the PEB study report recommend
5 report also recommended that the meaning of a destination contract be clarified. That recommenda
6 Section 2-602(c). The PEB study report recommended that the meaning of "carrier" be clarified in
7 of loss purposes, the term "carrier" in Section 2-612(b)(2) does not include transportation facilities
8 the parties to the contract. Rather, the term "carrier" refers to independent methods of transportation
9 water, including private express mail, United Postal Service and the United States Postal Service. C
10 could shift to the buyer while the seller still has possession and control of the goods. Finally, the P
11 recommended that bailee be defined. See Note 2 to Section 2-602. For risk of loss purposes, the te
12 refers to a third person (neither seller nor buyer) who is in possession of the goods sold at the time o
13 person may be a warehouse or a carrier who has issued a document of title, see Section 7-102(1)(a).
14 satisfies the requirements of a bailment. It is clear that a seller, after the contract for sale, may beco
15 either before or after the buyer takes possession. For example, suppose that S sells B a horse. B pa
16 of taking delivery, B contracts with S to board the horse for an agreed price. S is now a bailee. Wh
17 loss, however, should not be determined by Section 2-612(b)(3). Instead, the question is whether B
18 under either Section 2-612(b)(1) or 2-612(b)(2) before S becomes a bailee. Since no shipment was 19 never received the goods, risk remains on S unless S has obtained a contrary agreement.

21 5. Except as stated in subsection (c), risk of loss principles do not affect the parties' obligat
22 contract. The seller must tender and the buyer must pay as agreed. Thus, a buyer with the risk who 23 may be liable for the price or for damages for breach of contract. Similarly, a seller with the risk is 24 the goods as agreed or answer in damages for breach of contract. Former Section 2-510, dealing wi
25 on risk of loss, has been repealed. The assumption that a breach by either the seller or the buyer sh
26 deficiency in insurance coverage, reallocate the risk of loss otherwise assigned by Section 2-612 is 27 where there is no causal connection between the breach and the loss itself. Absent a causal connect 28 the risk has passed at the times stated in subsection (b) is still in the best position, cost considered, 29 the loss.

30
31 Moreover, application of the "breach" standard in old Section 2-510 produced unexpected d
32 example, under Section 2-510(2), suppose the buyer in possession discovers a nonconformity in the 33 revokes acceptance before the loss occurs. Assuming that the buyer exercised ordinary care and dic
34 operation of Section 2-510(2) was unclear. Suppose that the fair market value of the goods was $1,
35 either (a) fully insured, or (b) half insured or (c) not insured at all. Since B, after revocation, must r
36 fair market value to the seller, the practical solution is that buyer pays seller $1,000 in (a), $500 in (c)
37 But there is nothing in the text of or Comments to Section 2-510(2) that dictated this result.

38
39 Similarly, under Section 2-510(3), suppose the buyer breaches while the goods are in the sel
40 possession and before the risk of loss has passed. It is unlikely that the buyer owes the price of the 41 market value of the goods is $1,000, the seller is not insured at all, and wants to recover that deficie
42 insurance coverage from the buyer. Does Section 2-510(3) support an action against the buyer for 43 what theory? Again, neither the text nor the Comments are helpful.

45 Finally, Section 2-510 was an anti-subrogation provision, since insurance "deficiency" was 46 regard to subrogation rights. Once the chips have fallen in the reallocation process, the insurance c

1 with the outcome. But there is little evidence that insurance companies were aware of Section 2-511
2 calculated premiums with the availability of subrogation in mind.

4 6. Subsection (c) recognizes that there are three situations where breach should influence w
5 loss. Subsection (c)(1) is designed to bring the risk of loss rules into conformity with the buyer's o
6 goods upon rightful rejection or revocation of acceptance. Subsection (c)(2) is based upon the princ
7 nonconformity causes the loss or damage to the goods, the seller should have the risk of loss. Subs
8 upon the idea that a repudiation or failure to take delivery could surprise the seller who is expecting
9 the buyer at a particular point and gives the seller a reasonable opportunity to decide what to do wit
10 the application of Section 2-612, consider the following hypotheticals.

12 (a) S tenders nonconforming goods. Under subsection (b)(1), S has the risk of loss until B
13 control of the goods. If the goods are lost or damaged while in S's possession or control, S has the 14 current law].

16 (b) S tenders nonconforming goods. B takes possession of the goods. Under subsection (b
17 risk of loss even though B has not accepted the goods under Section 2-706. If the goods are destroy
18 acceptance, B is not liable for the price under Section 2-822 but would be liable for damages for br
19 failing to perform its obligation under the contract. B would have a cause of action for the seller's
20 conforming goods. [Change from the current law, see Section 2-510(1)]. However, if the nonconfo
21 then, the risk of loss is on S to the extent the nonconformity caused the loss under subsection (c)(2)

23 (c) S tenders nonconforming goods. B takes possession of the goods. Under subsection (b
24 loss. Assume B rejects the goods or accepts the goods and then revokes acceptance. The risk of lo
25 the time the rejection or revocation is effective. Subsection (c)(1). This conforms the risk of loss r
26 under Section 2-704 as a bailee to take reasonable care of the goods. Thus, if the goods are lost or 27 rejection or revocation becomes effective, S has the risk of loss for those goods. B is only liable fo
28 exercise ordinary care for the goods under Section 2-704. Rights to insurance proceeds is governed 29 from current law, Section 2-510(2)].

31 (d) S tenders nonconforming goods. B takes possession of the goods. Under subsection (b
32 loss. B accepts the goods and does not revoke acceptance. B has the risk of loss for those goods an 33 liable for the price. [same as current law, Section 2-510(1)].

34
35 (e) S tenders conforming goods. B takes possession of the goods. The risk of loss is on B
36 (b)(1). B wrongfully rejects the goods. The goods are destroyed after rejection. Under Section 2-8
37 the price or may sue for breach of contract for B's wrongful rejection. If S regains possession of th
38 goods are destroyed, S can recover the price only if the destruction was within a reasonable time aft
39 to B. Even if S cannot recover the price because the goods are destroyed beyond the reasonable tim
40 the buyer, S has a remedy for breach of contract against B for wrongfully rejecting the goods. [Sam
41 2-709]

43 (f) S tenders conforming goods. B takes possession of the goods. The risk of loss is on B u
44 (b)(1). B accepts the goods but then attempts to wrongfully revoke acceptance. The goods are then
45 recover the price under Section 2-822 as the wrongful revocation does not undo the acceptance. [S
46 Section 2-709]

1 (g) S identifies conforming goods to the contract. B repudiates. Risk of loss under subsection
2 on seller. Subsection (c)(3) advances the principle that if the goods are destroyed within a reasonable
3 time that S can treat the risk of loss as resting on B. The primary effect of that shifting of the risk of loss
4 is the price under Section 2-822(a)(2). If subsection (c)(3) did not exist, S would still have its remedy for 5 repudiation, but would not have the action for the price under Section 2-822. [Principle derived from 6 not dependant upon “deficiency in insurance coverage].

8 7. CISGA. “Passing of Risk” is treated in Articles 66-70.

10 Article 67(1), dealing with “carriage of the goods,” is comparable to Section 2-612(b)(2). The difference
11 between “origin” and “destination” contracts, however, is not made. The question is whether the seller
12 carries the goods to a “particular” place. The answer may come from Incoterms used by the parties.

14 Article 68, dealing with goods sold in transit, has no exact counterpart in Section 2-612, the closest
15 being Section 2-612(b)(2). Furthermore, there is no provision like Section 2-612(b)(3), which treats
16 the case of a bailee.

18 Cases not otherwise covered are picked up in Article 69, which is CISG’s equivalent to old UCC § 2-510.
19 Even between commercial parties, the buyer, in some cases, may have the risk of loss before taking 20 delivery. See Article 69(2). Article 69 presumably covers the “haystack” hypo and bailment cases.

22 Breach of contract is relevant to passage of risk under CISGA. For example, if risk has passed to the buyer
23 and the goods are lost or damaged thereafter, the obligation to pay the price is discharged if “the loss or
24 damage is due to the act or omission of the seller.” Article 66. Also, under Article 69(1) risk passes to the buyer before passage 25 of title regardless of any deficiency in insurance coverage if the buyer “commits a breach of contract by failing to 26 take delivery.” But a breach by the seller apparently does not prevent or reallocate the passage of risk. Rather, risk passes if the 27 conditions of Articles 67-69 are satisfied but the “remedies available to the buyer on account of the breach” are not
28 available under Article 70.

PART 7

BREACH, REPUDIATION, AND EXCUSE

SECTION 2-701. BREACH OF CONTRACT GENERALLY; SUBSTANTIAL IMPAIRMENT.

(a) Whether a party is in breach of contract is determined by the terms of the contract.

(b) A breach of contract occurs in the following circumstances, among others:

(1) A seller is in breach if it fails to deliver or to perform an obligation, makes a nonconforming performance, or repudiates the contract.

(2) A buyer is in breach if it wrongfully rejects a tender of delivery, wrongfully revokes or repudiates the contract, or fails to make a required payment or to perform an obligation.

(c) To determine whether the value of an installment or the whole contract has been substantially impaired by a breach of contract under Section 2-708, 2-710, or 2-712, the court may consider whether:

(1) the extent to which the aggrieved party has been deprived of the benefit that it reasonably expected under the contract;

(2) cure of the breach is permitted and likely;

(3) adequate assurance of due performance has been given; and

(4) the party in breach acted in good faith.

(d) The cumulative effect of individual, insubstantial breaches of contract may substantially impair the whole contract to the other party .

Notes

1. Section 2-701 is a new section that is derived, in part, from former Sections 2-703 and 2-711 as breach as part of the index to the remedies sections. The PEB study report identified some ambiguity in Sections 2-703 and 2-711 which is solved by separating the types of breaches from the entitlement to remedies.

1 Section 2-815 (seller's remedies) and Section 2-823 (buyer's remedies) merely index the remedies
2 buyer is entitled to exercise if there is a breach. Section 2-701(b) identifies those events that are us
3 and correspond to those breaches identified in former Section 2-703 and Section 2-711. As recom
4 report, the buyer's breach includes failure to pay after delivery as well as "payment due on or before
5 in former Section 2-703. If the failure after acceptance is a default under a security agreement, Arti
6 enforcement of the security interest. In addition, subsection (b) identifies that the failure to perform
7 contract is a breach. Neither Section 2-703 nor 2-711 contained that definition of breach.

9 2. Subsection (a) is a statement of breach that corresponds to the statement of obligation for 10 Section 2-601 states that the parties are obligated to perform in accordance with the contract. Secti
11 breach of contract is determined by the terms of the contract. Terms of the contract is determined f
12 obligation of the parties, Section 1-201(11), which includes the parties' agreement, Section 1-201(3
13 applicable law including the types of breach identified in subsection (b).

14
15 3. Subsection (c) is a new section based upon Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 241 wh
16 breach. Instead of using the material breach terminology, subsection (c) uses the terminology alrea
17 whether the value of the installment or the contract is substantially impaired by a breach. Given the 18 perfect tender rule and the decision to not explicitly cover service contracts within the scope of Arti
19 impairment concept is relevant only to installment contract situation (Section 2-712), the anticipato
20 (Section 2-710) and the revocation of acceptance situation (Section 2-708). Those three sections ar
21 (c). The four factors listed in subsection (c) are taken from the Restatement (Second) of Contracts
22 the Restatement which are not reflected above are (i) the extent to which the injured party can be co
23 deprived benefit and (ii) the extent that the party to perform will suffer a forfeiture. Should those fa

24
25 4. Whether the conduct of the seller or the buyer is a breach depends upon whether the sell
26 to perform is excused (Sections 2-714 through 2-717), whether the seller cures the breach as provid
27 whether the performance obligation is waived, Section 2-702.

28
30 SECTION 2-702. WAIVER OF BREACH; PARTICULARIZATION OF
31 NONCONFORMITY.

32 (a) Except as provided in subsection (c), a party that knows that the other party's performan
33 breach of contract but accepts that performance and fails within a reasonable time to object is precl
34 breach to cancel the contract. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), acceptance of that p
35 object do not preclude a claim for damages unless the party in breach has changed its position reaso
36 in reliance on the aggrieved party's inaction.

37 (b) Failure to object to a nonconforming performance under subsection (a) does not foreclo
38 same or similar breach of contract in future performances of like kind unless the party foreclosed ex

1 statement waiving future performance may be retracted by seasonable notification received by the other party.
2 performance will be required unless the waiver has induced the other party to change its position re
3 faith.

4 (c) A party is precluded from relying on a nonconforming performance as follows :

5 (1) Payment upon tender of documents [of title] made without reservation of rights waives the right to 6 recover the payment for defects apparent on the face of the document [of title].

7 (2) A buyer's failure to state, in connection with a rejection under Section 2-703, a particular nonconformity
8 nonconformity that is ascertainable by reasonable inspection precludes reliance on the unstated defect
9 to establish a breach of contract if:

10 (A) the seller, upon a seasonable particularization, had a right to cure under Section 2-705 and the seller
11 [would] [could] have cured the [nonconformity] [breach]; or

12 (B) between merchants, the seller after rejection has made a request in a record for a statement of the 13 statement in a record of all nonconformities on which the buyer proposes to rely.

14 (3) A buyer's failure to state, in connection with a revocation of acceptance under Section 2-608, a particular 15 nonconformity that justifies the revocation precludes the buyer from relying on the nonconformity to 16 or to establish breach of contract if the seller had a right to cure the breach under Section 2-709 and the seller
17 cured the breach.

19 Notes

20 1. This section has not been reviewed by the Drafting Committee. It is an attempt to collect and clarify
21 rules regarding waivers of breach. Former Section 2-209 has been criticized as an unclear attempt to 22 control waiver in the context of Article 2. The PEB study report recommended that waiver be more
23 its application be clarified. This section and Section 2-210(d) is an attempt to do so.

25 2. Both this section and Section 2-210(d) do not operate on a clean slate in terms of determining the effect of 26 waiver and what the effect of a waiver is on the parties' rights and obligations. Under Section 1-103, common law
27 developed at common law operate to supplement Article 2 provisions. It is unrealistic to preclude common law

1 principles of waiver by attempting a complete and full statement of waiver principles within Article
2 taken in this section and Section 2-210(d) is to clarify particular effects of application of the waiver
3 defining what is a waiver for all cases.

5 3. Section 2-210(d) is an attempt to clarify that a party may waive an express condition to a
6 obligation. The effect of that waiver of an express condition is that the performance obligation arises
7 does not come to pass. If that condition is not also a performance obligation of the party, the failure to
8 breach of contract. Restatement (Second) Contracts § 225. Often it is difficult to tell whether the condition
9 condition to performance of the other party or whether it is also a performance obligation of that first party.

11 For example, S agrees to sell goods to B for $5,000 with delivery on May 1. Is delivery May 1 a 12 duty to pay or is delivery May 1 a promise that S will deliver on May 1? If the term is a condition,
13 on May 1, B has no duty to perform its obligation to pay. S, however, has not breached the contract.
14 However, may have indicated that B waived the condition of delivery May 1. In that case, because 15 B's obligation to pay arises, even if delivery is not by May 1. B has no cause of action for breach of 16 condition was not a performance obligation of S.

18 Assume, however, that the delivery term is a promise to perform by delivering on May 1. S
19 is assumed to be dependent upon B's promise to perform and vis versa, Restatement (Second) Contracts § 225.
20 If S does not deliver on May 1, S has breached the contract. B would be able to pursue its remedies for breach,
21 canceling the contract and damages for breach. If B, by B's conduct or words, waives performance
22 on May 1, at common law, the effect of the waiver is that B could not cancel the contract, but could 23 breach by failing to deliver on May 1. See Restatement (Second) Contracts § 246.

25 Unless it is very clear that a term is only an express condition to performance and not a performance obligation,
26 courts should employ the presumption that terms in a contract are performance obligations and not conditions.
27 Restatement (Second) Contracts § 227.

29 4. With that background, this section operates as follows. Subsection (a) implements the common law rule that 30 party may waive a performance obligation and by doing so loses the right to cancel the contract but is not liable for 31 damages unless the other party detrimentally relies on the failure to object. Subsection (b) addresses the effect of 32 under subsection (a) of a previous performance obligation on future performance obligations. The first sentence of 33 subsection (b) and the last sentence of Section 2-210(d) state the same rule. (Arguably, one of the sentences was 34 eliminated). Subsection (c) states three situations where failure to object does waive the right to rescind or 35 the particular nonconforming performance. Subsections (c)(1) and (c)(2) are from former Section 2-210(d).
36 Subsection (c)(3) is a new section included to dovetail with the expansion of the right to rescind or 37 revocation situation under Section 2-709. Not listed in subsection (c) is the effect of the failure to object to the 38 of breach in the case of the accepted goods under Section 2-707(c)(1). That omission is intentional because 39 that needs to be answered in the accepted goods case is what is the purpose of any particularization requirement
40 be imposed. A particularization requirement would not facilitate a statutory cure as the seller has no right to 41 Section 2-709 when the goods are accepted and acceptance is not revoked. A deemed waiver by failure to object
42 would be inconsistent with the prejudice standard in Section 2-707 where notice itself is excused upon 43 failure to notify.

45 To illustrate the operation of this section, assume that S agrees to sell goods to B, with delivery on May 1. S
46 communicates to B that S can deliver the goods on May 5, but cannot make the delivery on May 1.

1 include a no oral modification or an anti-waiver clause. B accepts delivery on May 5 and does not
2 1 should be presumed to be a promise, not a mere condition to B's performance, unless the contract
3 otherwise. S's failure to deliver on May 1 is a breach of S's performance obligation. B's acceptance
4 and failure to object to S's late delivery means that B cannot cancel the contract, but may pursue B's
5 caused by S's late delivery, unless S has detrimentally relied on B's silence. Subsection (a).

7 Assume that in the contract above, S agreed to deliver goods the first of every month for 6 months.
8 delivery is late and not delivered until May 5. B accepts the delivery and does not object to its late
9 deliver the next month's installment on time on the first of June is intact. B's failure to object to the 10 a waiver of future timely deliveries. Subsection (b), first sentence. Assume, however, that B accepted
11 May 5 and tells S that as long as the deliveries are made before the 5th of every month, B will take
12 be a statement waiving future performance of timely deliveries. In order to retract that waiver of future
13 would have to give seasonable notice to S before S relied on the waiver to S's detriment.

14
15 Assume that S agreed to deliver goods that conformed to an express warranty on May 1. S delivered
16 on May 1 but the goods did not conform to the warranty. B timely rejects the goods under Section 2-708
17 (a), B has objected by its rejection to the nonconforming performance. Under subsection (c)(2), if the 18 ascertainable by reasonable inspection and the seller had the right to cure the breach under Section 2-709,
19 would have cured, then B has to particularize the nonconformity or is barred from asserting the nonconformity
20 breach or justify the revocation. If the nonconformity is not ascertainable by reasonable inspection,
21 the defect and will not suffer any adverse consequences from failing to particularize unless B knows of 22 accepts S's performance. In that case, subsection (a) will operate to preclude a cancellation and perfect tender
23 second sentence of subsection (a) applies.

25 Assume the same facts but that B did not reject, but accepted. B then timely and properly revokes
26 under Section 2-708(a)(2). B's timely and proper revocation should satisfy the objection required under 27 has a right to cure under Section 2-709 and would or could have cured, then B must particularize the defect in 28 revocation or not be allowed to assert those defects to justify revocation or establish breach. As to the defects
29 sufficient to justify revocation that B knows about, subsection (a) would operate to determine B's right to 30

31 5. CISG. Article 39(1) provides that the buyer "loses the right to rely on a lack of conformity if
32 he does not give notice to the seller specifying the nature of the lack of conformity within a reasonable time
33 discovered it or ought to have discovered it. Presumably, this failure to specify bars the use of that notice
34 for all remedial purposes. Other related Articles include Articles 39(2), 40, and 44.

36 The Drafting Committee rejected a motion to incorporate the provisions of Article 40, which provides that 37 seller is "not entitled to rely on the provisions of articles 38 and 39 if the lack of conformity relates to defects
38 knew or could not have been unaware and which he did not disclose to the buyer.

2 (1) reject the whole;

3 (2) accept the whole; or

4 (3) accept any commercial units and reject the rest.

5 (b) A rejection under subsection (a) is not effective unless the buyer notifies the seller with

8 Notes

9 1. Section 2-703 carries forward the perfect tender rule from former Section 2-601. Although 10 question, the PEB study report recommended that the perfect tender rule be retained. Subsection (a)
11 may reject a non-conforming tender and subsection (b), previously found in former Section 2-602(1), 12 for an effective rejection. Subsection (a) contains one new cross reference to the ability to reject for 13 shipment contract if loss or delay ensues, Section 2-603(b) (former Section 2-504), and carries forward
14 to installment contracts, Section 2-710, liquidated remedies, Section 2-809, and limited remedies, Section 2-709,
15 contained in former Section 2-601. As under current law, the buyer's ability to reject is circumscribed by 16 rejection in the installment contract context and by any agreed contractual limitations on the buyer's 17 2-810.

19 2. Subsection (b) carries forward the notice requirement from former Section 2-602(1). The 20 highlight an issue of when the reasonable time for rejection should start to run. Former Section 2-602(1)
21 reasonable time runs from the time of "tender or delivery. A concern with starting the reasonable
22 the time the nonconformity should have been discovered is the uncertainty in each case of when that time
23 been. If a discovery time is implemented, then some limits must be placed on the right to reject conforming
24 goods similar to the limitation in Section 2-708(b) that rejection must occur before any substantial cure
25 caused by their own defects.

27 3. The buyer's right to reject is determined by whether the goods or delivery fail to conform to the 28 parties' total legal obligation, which includes the parties' bargain in fact, applicable course of performance,
29 dealing and usage of trade, as well as terms incorporated from the U.C.C. and other applicable law. The 30 right to reject is also subject to the obligation of good faith. Section 1-203. Even if the buyer's right to reject
31 ability to cancel the contract or pursue other remedies is tempered by the seller's right to cure in Section 2-709,
32 has the right to cure under Section 2-709, the buyer has an obligation to allow the seller to make the proper
33 properly cures, the buyer's ability to force the goods back on the seller through rejection is defeated.

35 4. A rejection not permitted under subsection (a) is wrongful and a breach by the buyer even if the buyer gives
36 prompt notice under subsection (b). The rejection maybe effective but wrongful. Section 2-701(b). A rejection
37 rightful under the standard of subsection (a) but ineffective under subsection (b). A rightful but ineffectual

5 AS TO SALVAGE.

6 (a) Subject to a buyer's security interest under Section 2-829(b), if the seller does not have

2           objectively signify to the seller that they will be taken or retained. The buyer may or may not have
3           nonconformity.

5           Under subsection (a)(3), the buyer must first have a reasonable opportunity to inspect the goods
6           make an effective rejection under Section 2-703(b). The classic case is where the buyer discovers a defect
7           to notify the seller of rejection within a reasonable time after delivery. The rejection was rightful unless
8           not effective under Section 2-703(b). Conversely, it is not an acceptance where the buyer effectively
9           permitted under Section 2-703(a). Unless the buyer does an act of unreasonable ownership or control
10          subsection (a)(4), a wrongful but effective rejection is a breach under Section 2-701 but not an acceptance
11          2-706.

13          Does this make sense? Why not state simply and clearly that a wrongful rejection under Section 2-703(b)
14          though effectively communicated under Section 2-703(b), is an acceptance. An effective but wrongful
15          the seller's action for breach of contract damages. If an effective but wrongful rejection is treated as an acceptance, 16          seller would have an action for the price.

18          Subsection (a)(4) gives the seller an option to treat certain unreasonable acts by the buyer as an acceptance
19          whether they occur before or after rejection or revocation and whether the rejection was rightful or not
20          justified. Thus, unreasonable use of goods during inspection could be an acceptance even though a rejection was 21          otherwise proper. Similarly, an unreasonable use after a wrongful but effective rejection could also be an acceptance.
22          This section must be read in conjunction with Section 2-704(b) which provides in effect that reasonable use
23          inconsistent with the seller's ownership may not be an acceptance although the buyer will have to pay the 24          the reasonable value of the buyer's use of the goods.

1           2. Subsection (c)(1) is based on former Section 2-607(3)(a) but makes the following two changes:
2 substitutes the language “party claimed against” for “seller” in former Section 2-607(3)(a) in order to
3 the non-privity claim for breach of warranty. Second, it provides that a failure to give notice bars a claim
4 entitled to notice is prejudiced by the failure to give notice. Since neither cure nor the remedies of law
5 are available when the third type of notice is given, the task of determining the impact on the seller
6 is complicated. The requirement that the party claimed against establish prejudice is a middle position
7 bar and requiring proof of material prejudice. See Restatement (Second) Contracts § 229, excusing performance
8 where the failure is not material and implementation would result in “disproportionate forfeiture.” This was
9 again at the October, 1995 meeting of the Drafting Committee but no changes were adopted. The PEBC
10 recommended that the text or the Comments indicate that the content of the notice need only indicate a
11 arisen regarding accepted goods and that either the text or Comments should reject cases that provide a 12 standard for the content of the notice. A notice sufficient under this section is also sufficient under the 13 waiving any remedies for breach.

15           3. Subsection (e) is the same in substance as former Section 2-607(5) with the following changes:
16 broadens the ability to use the vouching in procedure to explicitly cover indemnity actions. Second, it
17 the notice to be given to any person who is answerable over, rather than just the seller. Third, subsection
18 explicitly allows the person who is given the notice to similarly notify others who are answerable over.
19 notice given under subsection (e)(1) is the same as the effect of the notice under former Section 2-607(5)
20 (e)(2) is the same in substance as former Section 2-607(5)(b). The PEBC study report recommended that the 21 Committee consider whether the vouching in procedure was constitutional and whether it was still needed.
22 improvements in third party practice. The Drafting Committee rejected the suggestion that the vouching be 23 eliminated.

25           4. CISG. Although the buyer is obligated to take delivery and pay the price “as required by 26 this Convention, Article 53, the concept of acceptance is irrelevant to the obligations of either party

Notes

1. Section 2-708 has no changes of substance from former Section 2-608.

2. The PEB study report recommended that the Comments should clarify that a wrongful re-acceptance is a breach of contract but does not undo the acceptance. Thus the buyer is still liable for 2-822 and the seller is entitled to exercise its remedies for breach of contract. Section 2-815. The report recommended that the obligations of the buyer as to the goods after a justifiable revocation of acceptance. Those rights are now clearly governed by Sections 2-704 and 2-705.

3. The buyer's ability to revoke acceptance under Section 2-708(a)(2) is subject to the seller's right to cure under Section 2-709. The PEB study report recommended that the seller's right to cure after revocation of acceptance if the time for performance had not expired be expressly provided for. See notes after Section 2-709 for a discussion of the right to cure. The right to revoke acceptance under Section 2-708(a)(1) is not subject to the seller's right to cure under Section 2-709 as the seller will have already had an opportunity to cure which the seller has not fully utilized. The seller should not have two opportunities to cure.

4. The PEB study report recommended that a Comment should clarify the effect of a failure remedy on the buyer's right to revoke acceptance. The interrelationship between the right to revoke and exclusive limited remedies is addressed in Section 2-810.

5. CISG. The buyer may declare the contract avoided for a fundamental breach. Article 49 cannot declare the contract avoided unless he can make restitution of the goods in substantially the same condition in which he received them unless restitution is rendered impossible not due to an act or omission of the buyer, but due to the goods having deteriorated due to the inspection allowed by Article 38, or the goods are sold, consumed or transformed in the normal course before he discovered or should have discovered the nonconformity. Article 82.

SECTION 2-709. CURE.

(a) If a buyer effectively and rightfully rejects goods or a tender of delivery under Section 2-708(a)(1) or 2-709, the seller may, after giving the buyer reasonable notice to the buyer and at its own expense, may cure any breach of contract by making a new tender of delivery within the agreed time and by compensating the buyer for all of the buyer's reasonable and

9 Notes

10 1. Section 2-709 is significantly changed from former Section 2-508 and is based in part on 11 Principles, Article 7.1.4. Cure under this section means curing the breach of contract that the seller
12 non-conforming tender. If the seller cures under this section, there is no breach of contract. The buyer's right to cure under this section (which assumes the seller is able and willing to comply completely with the

17 scenario, the seller would be entitled to pursue remedies for breach of contract. This section can be 18 the seller a checklist of the actions it must take to avoid being in breach of contract once nonconformity
19 has been made. With those basic points in mind, the specific subsections work as follows.

21 2. Former Section 2-508(1) provided for cure after rejection when the time for contract performance
22 expired if the breaching seller notified the buyer and then made a conforming delivery within the contract time. Under Section 2-709(a), Section 2-709(a) applies when the agreed time for performance has not yet expired.
23 Section 2-508(1), Section 2-709(a) applies when the agreed time for performance has not yet expired.
24 expands the seller's right to cure in this situation by expressly providing the seller a right to cure after 25 acceptance under Section 2-708(a)(2) (when the goods are accepted without knowledge of the defect or 26 difficulty of discovery or the seller's assurances). This expansion to allow cure when the time for cure
27 not expired and when the buyer has revoked acceptance follows the PEB study report recommendation.
28 Committee decided to limit cure to the revocation situation covered in Section 2-708(a)(2) in order
29 a double opportunity to cure. Under Section 2-708(a)(1) revocation, the goods have been accepted and 30 the non-conformity would be cured and the cure was not forthcoming or ineffective. In that situation,
31 another opportunity to cure after revocation of acceptance would have given the seller two opportunities to cure.
32 2-709(a) also circumscribes the seller's right to cure in both the rejection and revocation context by 33 seller to (i) give seasonable notice of intent to cure to the buyer, (ii) cure at the seller's own expense, 34 buyer's reasonable expenses and (iv) make a conforming tender within the time for contract performance.

35
36 To illustrate the operation of subsection (a), consider the following example: S and B agree to sell
37 goods according to contract specifications on Jan. 15. S actually delivers the goods on Jan. 10 and

1 to contract specifications. B effectively and rightfully rejects the goods under Section 2-703. For S
2 2-709(a), the S must give seasonable notice to B, must compensate B for any of the B's reasonable
3 non-conforming tender and attempted cure, must bear S's own expenses, and must make a complete
4 later than Jan. 15. The concept of seasonable notice under subsection (a) incorporates the idea of d
5 seasonable from the buyer's perspective, focusing on whether the buyer has reasonably changed po
6 reliance on the non-conforming tender. See Hawkland, § 2:508:2. Assume instead that B accepts t
7 goods, and then subsequently effectively and justifiably revokes acceptance under Section 2-708(a)
8 cure the breach by making a conforming tender within the contract time if the cure satisfied all of th 9 above.

11 3. Former Section 2-508(2) allowed the seller to cure when the buyer rejected a non-confor
12 seller had reasonable grounds to believe the non-conforming tender was acceptable if the seller gav
13 buyer and substituted a conforming tender within a reasonable time. The PEB study report express
14 imprecision of the "reasonable grounds to believe" test and disagreement about whether cure shoul
15 revocation of acceptance context when the time for contract performance had expired. Early on, th
16 decided that cure should be allowed in the revocation of acceptance situation covered by Section 2-
17 reasons as stated above. The Drafting Committee has extensively discussed the right to cure at its r
18 bulk of its attention on what test should be employed for allowing cure when the time for performan
19 Section 2-508(2) was directed towards preventing surprise rejections. Former Section 2-508, Com
20 Section 2-508(2), the cases had addressed rejection for minor defects or unknown defects as well as 21 notes after Section 2-703 regarding the limits on the buyer's right to reject. At the March 1997 mee
22 Committee selected the test found in subsection (b) as suggested by Professor Richard Hyland and 23 Principles.

25 Under subsection (b), if the buyer effectively and rightfully rejects the nonconforming tende
26 acceptance under Section 2-708(a)(2), the seller must give a seasonable notice to the buyer, must be 27 expenses in making the cure, must tender conforming goods, the tender of conforming goods must 28 reasonable time, the cure must be appropriate under the circumstances, the buyer must have no reas
29 refusing the cure, and the seller must compensate the buyer for all of the buyer's reasonable and nec
30 by the nonconforming tender and the proffered cure. Again whether the notice is given seasonably
31 the cure has been made within a reasonable time must be judged from the buyer's perspective.

32
33 The time of the attempted cure relative to the agreed time for performance under the contra
34 whether subsection (a) or subsection (b) applies. To illustrate, assume Seller agrees to tender goods
35 contract specifications on Jan. 15. Seller tenders non-conforming goods on Jan. 14. Buyer effectively
36 on Jan. 15. If Seller's attempted cure takes place on Jan. 15, Seller's actions are judged under subs
37 the attempted cure in fact is sufficient to cure the breach. If Seller's attempted cure takes place on J
38 are judged under subsection (b). Assume instead that Seller tenders non-conforming goods on Jan.
39 and rightfully rejects on Jan. 17. Seller's attempted cure will be judged under subsection (b).

40
41 Assume that the Seller tendered goods on Jan. 16 and the only reason for Buyer's rejection v
42 was late. Subsection (b) would apply. In that situation, if the cure was not timely and appropriate u
43 and the buyer had reasonable grounds for refusing the cure, the seller could not cure. If the buyer h
44 grounds to refuse the cure and the cure was otherwise appropriate and timely, then the seller's tend 45 and if all of the other conditions stated were satisfied, would cure the breach caused by the original
46 subsection (b) part of the inquiry of appropriate under the circumstances and the buyer's reasonable

1 would include the idea of shaken faith. The Committee expressed some concern with what “appropriate”
2 context of a cure under subsection (b). The words are bracketed to highlight that issue for further discussion.
3 of subsection (b) is adopted, the Comments would have to give examples or explanations of “appropriate”
4 circumstances.

6 4. The PEB study report recommended that the effect of a timely notice to cure when the seller
7 cures under the section should suspend the buyer’s ability to pursue its remedies for breach. Section 2-709
8 attempts to make clear that the seller’s exercise of its right to cure under Section 2-709 prevents the 9 termination of the contract.

10
11 5. Under this approach, the following questions remain:

12
13 (a) Does the concept of conforming goods in subsection (b) pick up a cure related to quantity or 14 quality aspects of the contract requirements?

16 (b) Under former Section 2-508, there is some controversy about whether the goods may be cured
17 by repair. The PEB study report recommended that the Drafting Committee decide in what circumstances 18 a cure may be made conforming by repair.

20 6. CISG. Under CISG, the buyer has no remedy of rejection for a nonconforming tender and 21 the contract unless the seller has committed a “fundamental breach,” see Article 49(1)(a) and Article 25.

23 Article 37 deals with Seller’s cure where nonconforming goods are delivered “before the date for delivery.”
24 Seller may cure “up to that date” if the “exercise of this right does not cause the buyer unreasonable
25 expense or loss.” Buyer retains any right to claim damages.

26
27 Article 48(1), which does not apply if the contract is avoided for fundamental breach under Article 25,
28 gives the seller a right to cure “even after the date for delivery.” Seller may “remedy at his own expense any failure to 29 fulfill his obligations, if he can do so without unreasonable delay and without causing the buyer unreasonable
30 uncertainty or reimbursement by the seller of expenses advanced by the buyer.” Again, Buyer retains the right to 31 claim damages.

32
33 7. UNIDROIT PRINCIPLES. Article 7.1.4 provides:

34
35 (1) The non-performing party may, at its own expense, cure any non-performance, provided that:

36
37 (a) without due delay, it gives notice indicating the proposed manner and timing of the cure;

38
39 (b) cure is appropriate in the circumstances;

40
41 (c) the aggrieved party has no legitimate interest in refusing cure; and

42

44
45 (2) The right to cure is not precluded by notice of termination.

1 (3) Upon effective notice of cure, rights of the aggrieved party that are inconsistent with the
2 party's performance are suspended until the time for cure has expired.

4 (4) The aggrieved party may withhold performance pending cure.

6 (5) Notwithstanding cure, the aggrieved party retains the right to claim damages for delay and 7 harm caused or not prevented by the cure.

10 SECTION 2-710. INSTALLMENT CONTRACT: BREACH.

11 (a) In this section, "installment contract" means a contract in which the terms require or the 12 permit the delivery of goods in lots to be separately accepted, even if the agreement requires payment
13 in installments or contains a term stating "Each delivery is a separate contract" or words of similar import.

14 (b) A buyer may reject any nonconforming installment of delivery of goods [or documents] under 15 this contract if the nonconformity substantially impairs the value of that installment to the buyer [or if there is a
16 defect in the required documents]. [However, if a nonconforming tender by the seller is not a breach
17 under subsection (c) and the seller gives adequate assurance of its cure, the buyer shall accept that installment.]

18 (c) If a nonconformity with respect to one or more installments in an installment contract is a
19 substantial impairment of the value of the whole contract, there is a breach of the whole contract and the aggrieved party may
20 cancel the contract. However, the power to cancel the contract for breach is waived, or a canceled contract is treated as a contract, if the 21 aggrieved party accepts a nonconforming installment without seasonably giving notice of cancellation. The power to cancel the contract for breach is waived, or a canceled contract is treated as a contract, if the 26 1. Section 2-710 makes a few changes to former Section 2-612.

27 2. Section 2-710(a) makes two changes from former Section 2-612(1). First, it arguably broadens the definition of an installment contract by providing that a contract in which the "the terms require or the circumstances give either party the right to make or demand delivery of goods in separate lots to be separately accepted is an installment contract. Former Section 2-612(1) provided that a contract "requires or authorizes the delivery of goods in separate lots to be separately accepted was an installment contract. The definition now includes cases where "circumstances give either party the right to make or demand delivery of goods in separate lots to be separately accepted is an installment contract.

1 or over a period of time. Section 2-302. The key, however, to the difference between a contract w
2 permit delivery in separate deliveries that is not an installment contract and one which is an installm
3 each delivery is subject to separate acceptance. If not, then the contract is not an installment contra
4 seller is to delivery a million tons of grain, it might not be feasible to delivery all of the tonnage at o
5 circumstances would permit the delivery of the grain in separate deliveries. Those circumstances w
6 indicate that each delivery was to be separately accepted, the key requirement to the application of t
7 section. The second change in the definition of installment contract is to clarify that a contract may 8 contract even if payment is called for in other than installments. Although not a change in the statu
9 should clarify that a contract where delivery of the goods is made in one lot, but payment is made in 10 installment contract.

11
12 3. Section 2-710(b) makes no changes in substance from former Section 2-612(2). The bra
13 subsection (b) is designed to raise the issue of whether a defect in documents should be tested unde
14 impairment test. Former Section 2-612(2) provided that a defect in documents was not tested unde
15 impairment test, but rather under the test of former Section 2-601 (perfect tender). See Hawkland,
16

17 The PEB study report suggested that the Drafting Committee consider applying Section 2-6
18 and sellers. The Drafting Committee rejected an attempt to provide for a seller's right to reject the 19 performance. Although a nonconforming installment payment is a breach, see Section 2-701(b)(2), 20 power to reject it under subsection (b). The seller can, however, demand adequate assurance of due
21 Section 2-711 and withhold future deliveries under Section 2-815(a)(1). The seller can also cancel
22 subsection (c) if the failure to pay one or more installments substantially impairs the value of the w
23 2-701(c). Unlike breach by the seller, the buyer has no statutory right to cure a breach in payment.
24 will probably accept a late or deficient payment and reserve rights to damages or cancellation under 25 Section 2-702 regarding waiver of breach. Allowing delays or deficiencies to cumulate may result
26 contract under Section 2-710(c).

28 The last sentence of subsection (b) is bracketed to highlight its interrelationship with the de
29 impairment in Section 2-701(c). Assume the seller delivers the first installment of goods under the

35 In that situation, the buyer can reject that nonconforming installment. Conversely, if the seller give 36 cure and cure is likely, the nonconformity does not substantially impair the value of that installmen
37 reject it. Prior to substantial impairment being defined in the Code, the last sentence of Section 2-7
38 get the court to focus on the key elements of finding substantial impairment. The definition in Sect
39 substantial impairment might make the last sentence of Section 2-710(b) unnecessary. The utility o
40 sentence of Section 2-710(b) is to isolate two of the substantial impairment factors in the installmen
41 important than the other factors in finding no substantial impairment has occurred.

12 substantial impairment of the value of the whole contract be a subjective test as it is in determining
13 of the value of the installment under subsection (b). The Drafting Committee decided to leave the s
14 the same as the standard in former Section 2-612(3).

Notes

1. Section 2-711 has no revisions of substance from former Section 2-609. The PEB study recommend any changes to this section. Subsection (c) provides that accepting past failure to perform party's right to obtain adequate assurance of future performance. Section 2-702(b) provides that failure to breach does not preclude objecting to future breaches. These two different sections address two different accepting non-conforming performance.

2. CISG. See Article 71(a), which recognizes a more limited principle of performance in suspension of performance under Article 71(a) must notify the other party “immediately and must continue to perform unless it receives from the other party notice that it has suspended or that it has terminated the contract.” Article 71(3).

14 SECTION 2-712. ANTICIPATORY REPUDIATION.

(a) If either party to a contract repudiates a performance not yet due and the loss of performance substantially impairs the value of the contract to the other party, the aggrieved party may:

(1) await performance by the repudiating party for a commercially reasonable time or re for breach of contract, even if it has urged the repudiating party to retract the repudiation or has not party that it would await the agreed performance; and

20 (2) in either case, suspend its own performance or, if a seller, proceed in accordance with

(b) Repudiation includes language that one party will not or cannot make a performance still contract or voluntary affirmative conduct that reasonably appears to the other party to make a future impossible.

24 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-610.

Notes

1. Section 2-712 makes two changes from former Section 2-610. First, a working but not a repudiation, taken from § 250 of the Restatement, Second of Contracts, is provided in subsection (b) that provided in Section 2-711(d) and would include an unqualified statement that one party will not perform unless the other agrees to an unjustified modification of the contract. Less clear are qualified statements that one party will not perform the next installment of the contract until a good faith dispute over contract interpretation is resolved. If such qualified statements are repudiations which do not substantially impair the value of the contract, then some definition of repudiation in the statute follows the PEB study report recommendation to that effect.

1 Second, it is now clearer that repudiation of a part performance (an installment) may constitute
2 impairment of the whole contract to the other. Previously, the language of Section 2-610 stated that
3 repudiation of the contract with respect to a performance not yet due the loss of which will substantially
4 impair the contract to the other, the aggrieved party could take remedial action. Under the revision, repudiation
5 of "performance not yet due" can constitute a substantial impairment of the entire contract. Such a substantial
6 breach of the whole contract. See 2-710(c).

8 2. The PEB study report recommended that the section clarify the relationship between this
9 remedies of the aggrieved party, including when the aggrieved party awaits the repudiating party's performance
10 more than a commercially reasonable time. The remedies sections in Part 8 have clarified the relationship
11 between repudiation and measurement of market price. See Sections 2-821 and 2-826. In addition, the general rule
12 in Section 2-803(b) would operate to prevent the aggrieved party from recovering damages for harm that
13 the party should have mitigated. Presumably, harm occurring because the aggrieved party awaited more than a
14 commercially reasonable time under Section 2-712, if the aggrieved party could have mitigated that harm, could not be recovered.
15 The PEB study report also recommended that the right of cancellation be clarified. That has been done in 16 Section 2-713. Finally, the PEB study report recommended that this section address when the aggrieved party's contract is 17 terminated to waive the right to cancel. Section 2-702(a) addresses the waiver issue.

19 3. CISG. Article 72(1) states that if "prior to the date for performance of the contract it is clear that 20 the parties will commit a fundamental breach of contract, the other party may declare the contract avoided."
21 If a party has "declared that he will not perform his obligations," Article 72(3), however, the other must show
22 evidence of an intention to avoid the contract in order to permit that party "to provide adequate assurance of performance."
23 Article 72(3). Adequate assurance presumably requires more than just a simple retraction of the repudiation.
24

25 26 SECTION 2-713. RETRACTION OF ANTICIPATORY REPUDIATION.

27 (a) A repudiating party may retract a repudiation until its next performance is due unless the party
28 after the repudiation, has canceled the contract, materially changed its position, or otherwise indicated that the contract
29 is considered to be final.

30 (b) A retraction may be by any method that clearly indicates to the aggrieved party that the repudiating
31 party intends to perform the contract. However, a retraction must contain any assurance demanded under the contract.

32 (c) Retraction reinstates a repudiating party's rights under the contract with due excuse and mitigation by the 33 aggrieved party for any delay caused by the repudiation.

3           2. CISG. There is no comparable provision in CISG. Under Articles 71 and 72, however,
4 suspending performance for an apparent inability of the other to perform a substantial part of the co
5 intending to declare the contract avoided for a repudiation, Article 72(2), must give immediate noti

6 2. The PEB study report recommended either that this section be revised to allow the section to apply
7 where the goods were destroyed prior to the risk of loss being put on the buyer when the goods destroyed

30 Notes

31 1. Section 2-715 makes only one change in former Section 2-614. It makes clear in a case where a
32 subsection (a) that excuse from performance is governed by Section 2-716 when no commercially reasonable
33 substitute is available. Under former Section 2-614, the relationship between former Section 2-615 and former

(a) Subject to Section 2-715 and subsection (b), delay in performance or nonperformance b breach of contract if the seller's performance as agreed has been made impracticable by:

(1) the occurrence of a contingency whose nonoccurrence was a basic assumption on which the financial statements were made; or

(2) compliance in good faith with any applicable foreign or domestic governmental regulation, order, whether or not it later proves to be invalid.

(b) A party claiming excuse under subsection (a) shall seasonably notify the other party that it is claiming an excuse under this section and the nature and effect of the excuse and its effect on the contract or nonperformance. If the claimed excuse affects only a part of the seller's capacity to perform, the seller shall allocate its production and deliveries among its customers in a manner that is fair and reasonable and notify the other party of the allocation. The seller shall allocate its production and deliveries in proportion to the quota made available. In allocating production and deliveries, the seller may include regular customer requirements under the contract as well as its own requirements for further manufacture.

1. Section 2-715 makes only one substantive change from former Section 2-615. Subsection provides “Except so far as a seller may have assumed a greater obligation. 2. Although the PEB study report recommended that provisions regarding the buyer's excuse to accept and pay for goods be incorporated in this section, the Drafting Committee decided to leave the law which grants excuse due to frustration of purpose in a narrow category of cases. See Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 336. The new Comments to Section 2-716 will summarize the interpretative case law under the "frustration doctrine. In sum, neither seller nor buyer can expect much sympathy when the claimed contingency was a shift in market conditions or an increase in the cost of performance. 12 EXCUSE.

13 (a) A party that receives notification of a material or indefinite delay in performance or an anticipatory breach
14 under Section 2-714 or 2-716 as to any delivery concerned, or if there is a breach of the whole contract
15 2-710(c), then as to the whole, by notification in a record, may:

Notes

25 1. Section 2-717 changes former Section 2-616 as follows. First, the notice requirement and the 27 (a)(2) and (c) are designed to complete the integration of this section with the rights provided in Section 2-716.

28 subsection (c) has been revised to accord with the deletion of the first phrase of former Section 2-616.
29 2-716. If the seller agrees to a lesser obligation or a greater obligation than that provided under Section 2-716,
30 parties can also agree that the buyer will have rights different than those provided in Section 2-717.
31 under the provisions of Section 2-716 or 2-714, however, the parties can not have agreed prior to the breach
32 that the buyer would have different rights than under Section 2-717.

2. CISG. There is no comparable provision in CISG. Article 79(4), however, requires that a party who fails to perform “must give notice to the other party of the impediment and its effect on his ability to perform.” Article 79(5) provides that the party who fails to perform “is liable for failure to notify is damages. Also, Article 79(3) provides that the excuse or exemption provided in Article 79(2) has no effect for the period during which the impediment exists. These requirements provide a framework within which parties can negotiate over allocations and adjustments.

SECTION 2-718. PRESERVING EVIDENCE OF GOODS IN DISPUTE.

To further the adjustment of a claim or dispute, the following rules apply:

(1) Either party to a [contract] [sale], on reasonable notification to the other party, has a right to inspect and sample the goods for the purpose of ascertaining the facts and preserving evidence. This right includes the right to take possession or control of the other party.

(2) Parties to a [contract ] [sale] may agree to an inspection or survey by a third party to determine conformity or condition of the goods and may agree that the findings will be binding upon them in the event of adjustment.

Seller’s remedies upon breach by the buyer provided in Articles 62-65, which are unique to the seller, and “damages” claimed under Articles 74-77, which are common to both parties. Notes

1. This section is new with no counterpart in former Article 2. It is modeled on Section 2A summary of the aggrieved party's general remedial rights upon a breach of contract. Whether a party's contract depends upon application of the principles in Part 7.

SECTION 2-803. REMEDIES IN GENERAL.

(a) In accordance with Section 1-106, the remedies provided in this article must be liberally construed for the purpose of placing the aggrieved party in as good a position as if the other party had fully performed.

(b) Unless the contract provides for liquidated damages under Section 2-809 or a limited remedy under Section 2-810, an aggrieved party may not recover that part of a loss resulting from a breach that could have been avoided by reasonable measures under the circumstances. The burden of establishing a failure to take such measures under the circumstances is on the party in breach.

(c) The rights granted by and remedies available under this article are cumulative, but a party may not recover more than once for the same injury. [Unless the contract provides for liquidated damages or a limited remedy under Section 2-809 or 2-810, a court may deny or limit a remedy if, under the circumstances, it would place the aggrieved party in a substantially better position than if the party in breach had fully performed.]

(d) This article does not impair a remedy for breach of any obligation or promise collateral to the contract for sale.

Notes

1. This section has no counterpart in former Article 2. The PEB study report recommended that Article 2 begin with a statement of general remedial policy that (i) the expectation interest was the primary interest the aggrieved party should be able to recover, (ii) the aggrieved party's remedy is subject to mitigation, (iii) the aggrieved party's remedies are cumulative without exceeding the expectation interest or foreclosing a remedy that is fundamentally inconsistent or the breaching party's reliance on the choice of remedy. Section 2-803 is based on the study report recommendations.

2. Subsection (a) contains the basic statement of the aggrieved party's expectation interest. Subsection (b) states the expectation principle from Section 1-106(1) and references the other limitations found in Section 1-106, including consequential damages. Although it repeats the general principle of Section 1-106, it provides

36 relates this section to the other remedies sections and explains how the principles should be applied

37 38 Proposed Comment to Section 2-803

39 1. The purpose of this section is to set forth the remedial policies of this Article in order to 40 application of the specific remedies found in Subparts B and C of Part 8. When a contract is br
41 application of the remedial provisions is to provide the aggrieved party the benefit of the bargai
42 aggrieved party in as good a position as if the breaching party had performed the contract. Subs 43 general principle.

45 2. When a contract is breached, the aggrieved party is deprived of the breaching party's pro

1 If the seller fails to provide goods that conform to the contract, the buyer is harmed by not receiving
2 conforming goods. If the buyer breaches, the seller is deprived of the value that seller was to receive
3 the goods. One way of starting to put an aggrieved party in such a position is to award the very
4 Thus the seller as aggrieved party could seek the price under Section 2-822 or specific performance
5 2-807. Likewise, the buyer could seek specific performance under Section 2-807 or have a specific
6 goods from the seller under Section 2-824. Specific performance is traditionally an equitable remedy
7 available in a particular case or the aggrieved party may not seek specific performance. Similarly
8 may not be entitled to the price or the aggrieved buyer may not be entitled to get the goods. In the case of 9 the diminution in value to the aggrieved party must be measured. This diminution in value is usually 10 general or direct damages.

11
12 3. General damages can be measured in several ways as provided in Subparts B and C.

13
14 If the seller breaches the contract, the buyer's general damages can be measured in one of three ways:
15 accepted goods, and not revoked acceptance, the buyer is entitled to the difference in value between 16 goods accepted and the value the goods would have had if the goods had conformed to the contract.
17 If the buyer has not accepted the goods or revoked acceptance as to the goods, the buyer has two choices
18 measurement of general damages. First, the buyer can cover, obtain substitute goods for those not received
19 recover the difference in value between the cover cost and the contract price. Section 2-825. Second, if the buyer
20 does not cover the buyer's general damages for seller's breach of contract will be measured by the difference
21 the contract price and the market price for the goods. Section 2-826.

23 If the buyer breaches the contract, the seller's general damages can be measured in several ways:
24 resell the goods under Section 2-819 and recover the difference between resell price and contract price,
25 could, alternatively, recover the difference between the market price and the contract price. Section 2-820.
26 the seller could seek to recover the seller's lost profit and expenditures in reliance on the contract.
27 Section 2-821(b).

29 All of these general damage measurements are designed to compensate the aggrieved party for the loss of 30 breaching party's promised performance. If for some reason, these general damage measures do not 31 the aggrieved party in that position, then Section 2-804 can be used as a general damage measurement.

32
33 4. In addition to that lost value of the promised performance, many times the aggrieved party seeks 34 consequence of failing to receive the breaching party's performance. Compensating these consequential
35 of placing the aggrieved party in the position it would have occupied but for the breach of contract.
36 consequential damages is in addition to the recovery for general damages. Traditionally the recovery for 37 damages were scrutinized to make sure that the breach in fact caused the consequential harm, that the 38 reasonably certain in amount, the damages were not reasonably subject to mitigation by the aggrieved party.
39 harm was a risk that was allocated to the breaching party as a foreseeable consequence of the breach.
40 continues that traditional view of consequential damage recovery in Section 2-806.

42 5. Finally, in addition to making the aggrieved party whole through recovery of general damages and 43 consequential damages, the aggrieved party may have incurred incidental expenses in dealing with the 44 breach that do not easily fall into either of the other two categories. Section 2-805. An aggrieved party
45 these amounts rounds out the aggrieved party's recovery of the full performance position.

1           6. The subsection (a) principle is subject to Section 1-106 in order to make clear that punitive damages are generally provided for in breach of contract cases under this Article.

4           7. In many contracts, the parties will have altered the default remedies set out in this Article. For example, a liquidated damages clause, enforceable under Section 2-809. Another example is a limited remedy under Section 2-810 or an exclusion of liability for consequential or incidental damages enforceable under Section 2-810. If such a clause is part of a contract under Sections 2-206 and 2-207 and is enforceable under Section 2-810, the principle of this section does not override those contractual agreements regarding the allocation of the risk of breach. This preference for contractual agreements regarding the allocation of the risk of breach applies to the principles in subsections (b) and (c).
11

12           8. The ability of the aggrieved party to choose any of these various general damage remedies is subject to the general principle that a party cannot recover more than once for the same loss. Subsection (c) provides that an aggrieved buyer covers, under Section 2-825, the aggrieved buyer cannot get both cover price–contract price differential and market price–contract price differential. Similarly an aggrieved seller who resells under Section 2-819 may not get both the resell price–contract price differential and the market price–contract price differential.
13
15

18           9. Subsection (b) provides that an aggrieved party cannot recover for losses that could have been mitigated. Although the mitigation principle is most often associated with reduction of consequential damages under Section 2-806, there may be instances where the general damages of the aggrieved party should be reduced. Under Sections 2-821 and 2-826, the aggrieved party can seek to measure their general damages by the difference between the contract price and the market price at the time of performance. If the breaching party could have realistically mitigated its general damages by reselling or covering, the aggrieved party's general damages should be reduced accordingly. However, if the aggrieved party resells as the case may be and has complied with the requirements of Section 2-825 or 2-819, the aggrieved party need not do anything else to mitigate its general damages. Similarly, if the breaching seller can cure that is not sufficient to cure the breach under Section 2-709 would have minimized the aggrieved party's general damages, the breaching seller can seek to have the buyer's general damages reduced accordingly. If the buyer who is exercising rights under Section 2-817 may take that action to mitigate the harm from the breach, the buyer may not take that action if it is designed to increase the amount of damages due to the buyer's breach.

32           10. Finally, subsection (c) also provides a controlling principle on remedial choice: A court should award the remedy if it provides an aggrieved party substantially more than its full performance position. How do these principles operate in practice?
35

36           (a) This principle should not be used to limit or deny the aggrieved party's cover or resale. For example, if the aggrieved buyer covers under Section 2-825 and seeks the cover price–contract price difference, and the seller resells under Section 2-819 and seeks the resell price–contract price difference, the market price–contract price differential is not relevant to determine if the seller or buyer are over compensated. The requirements of the resale contain enough protections against overcompensation and no additional protection is afforded to the aggrieved party by the principle of subsection (c). For example, assume an aggrieved buyer who covers at a contract price is $15 per unit. The cover complies with all of the requirements of Section 2-825 and the market price is $18 per unit so that the market price measure would yield general damages of $3 per unit. The buyer is entitled to recover $5 per unit and is not overcompensated. Similarly, assume the aggrieved seller resells under Section 2-819, complying with all of its requirements, for $15 per unit when the contract price is $20 per unit. The seller is entitled to recover the $5 per unit even if the market price per unit is $18 so that the market price measure would yield general damages of $3 per unit. The seller is entitled to recover $5 per unit and is not overcompensated.

43
45
46

1 $2 per unit. The aggrieved seller is not overcompensated by its recovery of the $5 per unit.

3 (b) Assume, however, that the buyer covers as provided in Section 2-825 or the seller resells under
4 Section 2-819 and then seeks the market price–contract price difference as it provides for more
5 price–contract price differential or the resell price–contract price differential. This is possible if the market price
6 fluctuating to bring about disparities between the cover or resell price and the market price. Consider the example
7 above, the aggrieved buyer covers at $20 per unit when the contract price is $15 per unit. The market price at the
8 relevant time for measuring market, however, is $25 per unit. The buyer is overcompensated if it recovers
9 the $10 per unit under Section 2-826 instead of the cover price–contract price differential of $5 per unit under
10 2-825. Similarly, if the aggrieved seller resells under Section 2-819 at $15 per unit when the contract price is $20
11 per unit, and the market price at the relevant time for measuring market is $10 per unit, the aggrieved seller is
12 overcompensated if it attempts to recover the $10 per unit market price–contract price differential instead of the 13 $5 per unit resale price–contract price differential under Section 2-819. In these circumstances, if the aggrieved
14 party seeks its market price based damages, the breaching party has the ability to show that the aggrieved
15 party really engaged in a substitute transaction such as cover or resale and that if general damages were based on 16 the difference between cover or resale and contract price, the aggrieved party’s choice of market price measure
17 overcompensates the aggrieved party. Part of the breaching party’s burden in this situation is to show that the 18 aggrieved party really engaged in a substitute transaction, that is that an aggrieved buyer really covered or the 19 aggrieved seller really resold the goods that were the subject of the breached contract.

22 (c) If the seller seeks to recover lost profits and reasonable expenditures made in reliance on the contract, the 23 breaching buyer could seek to demonstrate that the seller really resold the goods and the resale price–contract price
24 differential is less than the seller’s attempted proof of lost profits and reliance expenditures. If the seller can show
25 the resale does not place the seller in the position it would have been in if the contract with the buyer had been
26 performed, then the seller’s choice of the lost profit and reliance expenditure as the measure of damages should 27 not be disturbed.

28
29 If the seller has not resold the goods and seeks recovery of lost profits and reliance expenditures, the principle of 30 Section 2-821(b) and the market price–contract price measure of general damages is less than the seller’s proof of 31 reliance expenditures, the seller is not overcompensated by its choice of the lost profit and reliance expenditure as
32 general damages. In the situations where seller seeks to prove lost profit and reliance expenditures, the market
33 price–contract price differential is under compensatory. If the seller seeks to recover the market price–contract price
34 differential when it is more than the lost profit and reliance expenditures, the principle of subsection (c) to argue that 35 the seller is overcompensated by its choice of the market price measure of damages.

37 (d) The principle of not overcompensating the aggrieved party could be used to control the measure of damages
38 to contend that a repair of an accepted good is the proper measurement of the loss in value because of 39 nonconformity if that amount is substantially more than the difference between the market value of the good
40 warranted and the value of the good accepted. This is consistent with the remedial policy of avoiding overcompensation.

41
42 (e) Finally, the concept of not overcompensating the aggrieved party could be used to control the measure of damages
43 party’s use of non-expectancy measures of harm, such as the reliance or the restitution interest. This is consistent with 44 the remedial policy of avoiding overcompensation following Section 2-804.

45
46 11. Because measurement of damages is not an exact science, the court should not be concerned with the possibility of overcompensation.

1 differences between the different measurements of general damages. For example, assume the
2 has not resold proves that the market price–contract price differential is $100 per unit. The buy
3 the seller’s lost profit and reliance damages range from $90-105 per unit. In that situation, the s
4 the market price measure of $100 per unit may be overcompensated if the buyer’s proof of low
5 range is correct and under compensated if the higher end of the range is accurate. The seller’s c
6 price measure does not substantially overcompensate the seller.

8 In sum, Part 8 does not favor the market damages when the seller properly resells or the buyer p
9 substitutional remedies are preferred, because they best approximate the position the plaintiff w
10 performance. Market price, at best, is a surrogate for resale or cover. Thus, in these cases, neith
11 defendant can insist on the market damages. Similarly, if there has been no qualifying resale an 12 chooses a lost profits remedy, i.e., a remedy that measures lost profits without regard to market
13 cannot object. Market price is, at best, an imprecise, artificial way of measuring the value of a p
14 and will under compensated in most cases. Finally, if there is no qualifying resale and the plaint
15 price remedy, the defendant may be able to show that market damages exceed the lost profits th
16 made upon full performance. In these cases, a court may be persuaded to require the plaintiff to 17 remedy.

3 undelivered goods for at most $20,000. Seller made a bad deal by underestimating the cost of Seller
4 on each delivery that Buyer accepts, Seller is losing $5,000. Buyer breaches. Seller's general damage
5 market or resell formula is $0. Under a restitution theory, Seller could argue that it should get the value
6 conferred on Buyer by its part performance. If the value of the benefit conferred on Buyer is measured
7 of the goods, the restitution recovery is identical to the expectancy recovery. If the value of the benefit
8 is measured by the contract price Buyer agreed to pay, then as to any installments accepted, the Buyer gets
9 the price under Section 2-822, and Seller gets no benefit from asserting restitution. If the value of the benefit
10 Buyer is measured by the cost of performance, then Seller will get the $25,000 per delivery as to the installments
11 Buyer. See Boomer v. Muir, 24 P.2d 570 (Cal. App. 1933) (a construction contract situation where the benefit 12 benefit conferred on the buyer was measured by the cost of performance of the builder); U.S. v. West 13 Mechanical Contractors, 834 F.2d, 1533 (10th Cir. 1987) (subcontractor's contract price was $295,000, the 14 reasonable value of work under the subcontract as determined at trial was $475,000, subcontractor in breach,
15 contractor in breach, 40% of the work was done by subcontractor prior to firing, subcontractor received
16 restitution for the value of the work performed). See also Restatement (Second) Contracts § 371. The 17 2-803(c) should prevent restitution or reliance recovery when the aggrieved party enters into a losing contract.
18 Restatement (2d) Contracts § 349 comment a. If the party completely performs the contract and the contract
19 the Restatement (Second) Contracts § 373(2) provides that restitution is not allowed, thus the seller gets the 20 price.

23 SECTION 2-805. INCIDENTAL DAMAGES. Incidental damages resulting from breach of contract

24 contract include compensation for any commercially reasonable charges, expenses, or commissions in connection with

25 (1) inspection, receipt, transportation, care, and custody of identified goods which are the subject of the contract;

26 contract;
27 (2) stopping delivery or shipment;

28 (3) effecting cover, return, or resale of the goods;

29 (4) reasonable efforts otherwise to minimize or avoid the consequences of breach; and 30 (5) otherwise dealing with the goods or effectuating other remedies.

31 SOURCE: Sales, Sections 2-715(1), 2-710.

32 Notes

33 1. Section 2-805 combines the incidental damages of seller, former Section 2-710, and buyer, former 34 2-715(1), into one section. The PEB study report did not recommend any changes to the definition of incidental damages.
35 The only substantive change has been to not limit incidental damages for inspection of the goods to cases of rightfully rejected goods.
36 Compare former Section 2-513(2) and former Section 2-710.

1 limitation had received some criticism as being more restrictive than the common law and by encour
2 marginal case. See Hawkland, § 2-513:03.

4 2. Incidental damages are reasonable expenses incurred in anticipation of or after a breach t
5 perform duties with regard to the goods and to effect other remedies. They should be distinguished
6 damages which result from expenditures or commitments made before the breach to enable the agg
7 other party's performance. This distinction was observed in Fertico Belgium S.A. v. Phosphate
8 Chemicals Export Association, Inc., 510 N.E.2d 334 (N.Y. 1987), where the buyer recovered "incid
9 damages for arranging a "cover" after the seller's delay in delivery and was entitled to consequentia
10 costs incurred in getting the goods to resale buyer after the time for performance had passed.

13 SECTION 2-806. CONSEQUENTIAL DAMAGES.

14 (a) Consequential damages resulting from a breach of contract include compensation for:

15 (1) any loss, including loss to property other than the goods sold, the party in breach at t
16 contracting had reason to know would probably result from the aggrieved party's general or particu
17 needs and which could not have been avoided by reasonable measures under the circumstances; and 18 (2) injury to person proximately resulting from any breach of warranty.

19 (b) The aggrieved party may not recover any consequential damages pursuant to subsection
20 disproportionate compensation to the aggrieved party. The breaching party has the burden of establ
21 damages under subsection (a)(1) result in disproportionate compensation.

23 2B-102(a)(5).

24 Notes

25 1. Section 2-806 makes several changes to former Section 2-715(2). First, pursuant to the L
26 recommendation, sellers may now recover consequential damages. Second, the standard of foresee
27 principle in subsection (a)(1) apply to all consequential losses except for personal injury. Thus, con
28 and loss to property other than the goods sold are now covered under subsection (a)(1). Third, the 29 requires the breaching party have reason to know the loss would probably result as well as know of 30 particular needs and requirements. Fourth, subsection (b) allows the breaching party to establish th
31 damages the aggrieved party seeks result in disproportionate compensation to the aggrieved party.
32 explained in more depth below.

33
34 2. Seller's recovery. Sellers may now recover consequential damages under the same stan

1 applicable to buyers. The Drafting Committee rejected the interpretation that former Section 2-710
2 Section 1-106(1), denied consequential damages to sellers.

4 The following examples illustrate the application of Section 2-806 to sellers. Assume that t
5 mitigation requirements of subsection (a)(1) have been satisfied.

7 (a) Seller makes a special expenditure in preparation to perform which will not be reimburs
8 performance. After breach, Seller is unable to salvage the investment. The unreimbursed expendit 9 consequential damages.

10
11 (b) Seller has a profitable business opportunity the capture of which depends upon prompt p
12 the contract price. Buyer, who knew of the opportunity at the time of contracting and that substitut
13 difficult, fails to pay and Seller is unable, after reasonable efforts, to obtain substitute financing. Th
14 with reasonable certainty, are recoverable as consequential damages. If Seller had been able to obta
15 to capture the opportunity, the interest paid would be consequential rather than incidental damages.
16 Second, Contracts § 351, Comment (e).

18 (c) Seller borrowed money at 8% interest to finance performance of the particular contract.
19 repaid from the contract price. Buyer was late in payment and Seller could not obtain more favorab
20 the loan. Consequential damages include the interest paid on the loan between the time when Buye
21 price and the time when it was paid if the Buyer had reason to know at the time of contracting of th
22 particular financing arrangement. If, however, the loan was obtained to finance general business op
23 particular contract, the interest is fixed costs or overhead rather than consequential damages. See A
24 Corp. v. Metallurgiki Halyps, S.A., 772 F.2d 1358 (7th Cir. 1985).

26 3. Damage to other property. At the March 1997 meeting, the Drafting Committee voted
27 require that personal injury damages be recoverable as provided in former Section 2-715(2)(b) but t 28 consequential losses be evaluated under the test of subsection (a)(1).

29
30 4. Disproportionate compensation. In addition to the usual limitations on the recovery of 31 consequential damages, i.e., foreseeability, mitigation of damages, cause in fact, and proof with rea
32 November, 1996 Draft also excluded from consequential damages losses which were “unreasonably
33 risks fairly assumed under the contract by the breaching party. This limitation, which the breaching 34 derived from § 351 of the Restatement, Second, of Contracts.

35
36 After discussion at the January, 1996 meeting of the Drafting Committee, the limitation was 37 (a) rather than in a separate subsection (b) to clarify that the test was to be applied by the finder of f
38 rather than subsequently by a court in what looked like a remittitur. Thus, claimed consequential d
39 within the limitation or not under subsection (a) and there was no reason to give the court power to 40 excluding or limiting recovery for loss of profits, by allowing recovery only for loss incurred in reli
41 Section 2-806(b) (January, 1996). After discussion at the November 1996 meeting, two additional 42 First, the unreasonably disproportionate limitation does not apply to consequential losses which are 43 Second, the unreasonably disproportionate limitation is something that the breaching party must est
44 “affirmative defense” to the consequential damage case of the aggrieved party rather than requiring 45 establish in every case that the consequential losses were not unreasonably disproportionate. At the 46 an issue was raised whether damage to other property should also be exempted from the unreasonal

1 No action was taken on this suggestion. At the March 1997 meeting, the Committee voted to continue
2 disproportionate concept to consequential damages other than personal injury and to rephrase the concept
3 along the lines expressed in the Restatement Second of Contracts § 351 while keeping it as a fact question
4 the nature of an affirmative defense rather than as part of the plaintiff's case in chief. Subsection (f)

6 The background of the “unreasonably disproportionate” limitation should be clear, especially
7 the plaintiff. Consequential damages result where the buyer is deprived of timely use of conforming goods
8 repudiation, non-delivery or breach of warranty. They usually include lost business profits, but courts 9 award damages for loss of good will, unreimbursed reliance and various disruption losses caused to 10 parties. The potential scope of consequential damages is influenced by the purpose for which the goods
11 nature of the breach, and the type of loss caused. Where the purpose is to use the goods in a business
12 breach is by non-delivery, the loss is profits (opportunity costs) that would have been made if delivered.
13 Hydraform Products Corp. v. American Steel & Aluminum Corp., 498 A.2d 339 (N.H.
14 1985). Where the purpose is resale or the goods are intended as components for use in or with other
15 parties and a breach of warranty occurs, (i.e., the goods are unmerchantable) more than the buyer's
16 Third parties now have claims for breach of warranty against the buyer, including possible damage
17 which can be asserted cumulatively by the buyer against the seller as consequential damages for breach.
18 Finally, the liability potential may be exacerbated if there is a product recall. Thus, the risk of unexpected
19 heavy consequential damages is a matter of continuing concern to sellers. Although this limitation
20 risk, its application should be limited to cases where there is an extreme disparity between the price
21 and the foreseeable loss caused to the buyer (this suggests that the price was not intended to cover the 22 “informality of dealing, including the absence of a detailed written contract, which indicates that the 23 attempt to allocate all of the risks. Restatement, Second, § 351, Comment (f).

25 5. Buyer's Recovery. Section 2-806 states a default rule which tends to favor the buyer but 26 easy to limit or exclude by agreement. In the current jargon, it is a “penalty” default rule because the 27 recovery) if it fails to inform the seller of particular circumstances or losses of which the seller would 28 reason to know. So if the foreseeability test is not satisfied or the contract contains an excluder clause,
29 consequential losses is on the buyer.

30
31 6. Conditions to recovery of consequential damages. Even without an excluder 32 clause, the aggrieved party must satisfy four conditions to recover:

33
34 (a) The loss must result from (be caused by) the breach. This cause-in-fact requirement is common
35 of contract claims, but may be more difficult to establish when the loss is remote from the breach.

37 (b) The loss must result from general or particular requirements of the aggrieved party of which 38 party had notice (knowledge or reason to know) at the time of contracting. This is Article 2's version of 39 principle in Hadley v. Baxendale. In addition, Section 2-806 now requires the breaching party to have 40 know at the time of contracting that the loss “would probably result from the breach. See Restatement
41 § 351. This occupies the middle ground between losses that are “likely to result” and losses that are 42 and is unlikely to change the operation of this section.

43
44 (c) An otherwise foreseeable loss is not recoverable if, after the breach, it could have been prevented
45 the aggrieved or the breaching party through “reasonable measures under the circumstances. This 46 specific application of Section 2-803(b), works best where the buyer can cover to minimize or avoid the loss.

1 Normally, the breaching party must establish that the plaintiff failed to mitigate. See Section
2 where both parties could have avoided the loss by the same or similar acts and it is “equally reasona
3 breaching party to minimize damages, the defendant is in no position to contend that the plaintiff fa
4 e.g., Nezperce Storage Co. v. Zenner, 670 P.2d 871 (Id. 1983). An unresolved issue is whether the
5 must bear the burden of proof that it mitigated its consequential damages as part of its case to recov
6 damages or whether mitigation is in the nature of an affirmative defense that the defendant must est
7 failed to mitigate in order to reduce the amount of consequential damages. Section 2-803(b) places
8 that mitigation did not occur on the breaching party. The PEB study report assumed that the breach
9 burden of demonstrating that the aggrieved party did not mitigate. The Comments could make this

10
11 (d) The plaintiff must prove the loss with reasonable certainty. This limitation controls loss
12 remote or speculative damage, (e.g., loss of good will, new businesses) but is not an insuperable ba
13

14 7. The Drafting Committee rejected an alternative to subsection (a)(1), taken from Section 15 provided that between merchants, no consequential damages are recoverable unless they are expres
16

17 This rejected alternative is a simple but extreme penalty default rule. Under it, the seller ha
18 consequential damages unless the buyer bargains for protection that is expressly agreed to. This de
19 in an Article 4A funds transfer, where the low cost of the transfer has no relationship to the dollar a
20 risk that a payment order will be late, improperly executed or not executed at all and commercial p
21 equal bargaining power are involved. Given the varieties and complexities of contracts for the sale
22 appropriateness of the Article 4A model was doubted by the Drafting Committee.

23
24 8. CISG. There is no specific provision permitting the recovery of incidental damages, but 25 buyer can recover foreseeable consequential damages. Article 74.

27 28 SECTION 2-807. SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

29 (a) A court may enter a decree for specific performance if the parties have expressly agreed
30 goods or the agreed performance of the party in breach of contract are unique or in other proper circ
31 parties expressly agree to specific performance, a court shall not enter a decree for specific perform
32 breaching party’s sole remaining contractual obligation is the payment of money.

33 (b) A decree for specific performance may contain terms and conditions as to payment of th 34 or other relief the court considers just.

35 SOURCE: Licenses, Section 2B-704; Section 2A-521; Sales, Section 2-716
36 (December, 1994).

1           1. Section 2-807 makes the following changes from former Section 2-716. First, specific performance is
2 limited to the buyer [former Section 2-716(1) applied only to buyers]. A seller may obtain specific performance of the
3 buyer's agreement to accept and to pay for the goods in appropriate cases. This simply affirms what has been
4 always done, especially in long term supply contracts. Specific performance is an alternative to the action for the
5 price under Section 2-822. Unlike an action for the price, however, specific performance preserves the contract
6 personam to enforce the agreement for future performance.

8           Second, the parties may expressly provide for the remedy of specific performance in the contract, in accordance
9 with the PEB study report recommendation. The expectation is that a court will enforce the agreed specific performance
10 legal remedies at the time of the breach are entirely adequate. This expectation is consistent with a policy favoring
11 specific performance is, in most cases, a more efficient remedy than damages. See, e.g., Alan Schwartz, *Why
12 That Promisees Prefer Supra Compensatory Remedies: An Analysis of Contracting For Damages*, 100 Yale L. J. 369 (1990).

15           Note that subsection (a) gives the court discretion ("may") to award specific performance if the court finds it
16 agreed. Thus, the court might decline to make the award where the remedy is burdensome to administer. The 17 assumption is that a court will condition the specific performance decree upon full performance by the buyer.
18 Thus, a seller cannot obtain specific performance of the buyer's agreement to pay the price in the full if the 19 tender goods that conform to the contract. See Section 2-822.

21           On the other hand, concern was expressed that under an agreed specific performance remedy, particularly a consumer
22 buyer, could be forced to take and pay for goods that it did not need or want. This remedy is not inconsistent
23 with the policy expressed in Section 2-822(a)(3) that unless resale is not reasonably available, the seller may 24 recover the price of identified goods that the buyer has not accepted. In these cases, the court "may" award
25 the remedy. At the March 1997 Drafting Committee meeting, the Committee voted to limit the availability of the 26 remedy where a party's sole obligation was to pay money. The language at the end of subsection (a) and the 27 last sentence of subsection (a) is designed to distinguish the "take and pay" contracts from contracts where the 28 obligation is to pay for goods already accepted. In take and pay contracts, the parties would be able to obtain 29 specific performance and have that agreement enforced.

30
31           2. Because the buyer's right to replevin under former Section 2-716(3) was not a remedy available to both 32 buyers and sellers it has been relocated to the buyer's remedy section, Section 2-824. See notes following Section 2-824.

33
34           3. CISG. Specific performance is the preferred remedy for sellers and buyers under the CISG, Articles 28 and 29.
35 Articles 46 and 62. See also, Steven Walt, For Specific Performance Under the United Nations Convention on 36 Sales, 26 Tex. Int'l L. J. 211 (1991). Article 28 provides, however, that if under CISG "one party is not bound to 37 performance of any obligation by the other party, a court is not bound to enter a judgment for specific performance
38 the court would do so under its own law in respect of similar contracts of sale not governed by this Convention."

19 Notes

20 1. Former Section 2-106 contained a definition of cancellation and a cryptic rule about what
21 cancellation. The PEB study report recommended that the definition of cancellation be separated fr
22 of cancellation and, in discussing the remedies sections of Article 2, recommended that the revision
23 aggrieved party to cancel the contract. Section 2-808 responds to those recommendations. Section
24 same definition of cancellation as found in former Section 2-106(4).

26 2. Subsection (a) provides that an aggrieved party has the right to cancel a contract for bre
27 that the right to cancel cannot be exercised if the breach has been waived under Section 2-702 or th

1 the breach under Section 2-709. Subsection (a) makes explicit what was implicit in former Section
2 Section 2-711 which listed cancellation as one of the seller's or buyer's rights when the other party
3 was unclear on when the remedy to cancel was precluded. Sections 2-815 and 2-823 continue to list
4 breach and reference this section for the exercise of that right.

6 3. Subsection (b) is a new subsection that clarifies that the cancellation is effective when the 7 notifies the breaching party. Under the definition of notify in Section 1-201(26), conduct may be sufficient
8 the buyer both rejects and cancels the contract at the same time, the buyer need not send two notices.
9 cannot use cancellation as a substitute for rejection under Section 2-703. If the seller tenders nonconforming goods
10 the buyer has a right to reject the goods under that section, the buyer may cancel. That cancellation
11 suffice as a proper rejection of the goods unless the buyer also complies with the sections on proper rejection.
12 See Sections 2-703, 2-704, and 2-705. If the buyer rejects, and then the seller attempts to cure but the buyer
13 to cancel the contract, the buyer must notify the seller of that cancellation unless the circumstances are such 14 that the buyer has canceled if the seller fails to effect a proper cure.

15
16 4. Subsection (c) states the effect of the cancellation on executory obligations found in former Section 2-703
17 and (4). This general rule is subject to the specific exceptions stated in subsection (d). Subsection (c) is 18 from former Section 2-106(3) that cancellation preserves any right based upon a previous breach. The buyer
19 that cancels the contract may sue for past breaches of the contract. Subsection (d)(5) continues the rule in 20 2-106(4) that a canceling party retains any remedy for breach of the whole contract or its unperformed part.
21 effect of an aggrieved party's cancellation is that neither the aggrieved party or the breaching party is liable for 22 performance of fully executory obligations but the aggrieved party retains all remedies for breach as to the part
23 party as to both the past and future performance of the breaching party. Because cancellation is not a breach
24 the contract, the performance already rendered need not be returned to the other party. For example, if the 25 breaching party and has delivered a non-conforming installment of goods and the nonconforming installment
26 breach of the whole contract, the buyer may cancel the contract. When the buyer cancels, the buyer is not
27 accepted non-conforming installments to the seller, but has the right to obtain damages due to the nonconforming
28 past installments. The cancellation means that the seller need not deliver any of the remaining installments
29 liable for breach of the whole contract. If the parties have already rendered their performance so that the contract
30 executory on both sides, then cancellation is a meaningless remedy. Assume in a one shot contract the seller
31 delivered non-conforming goods and the buyer has accepted those goods. The buyer cancels due to the nonconforming
32 The buyer is still liable for the price and has a counterclaim for damages under Section 2-827 unless the buyer
33 acceptance under Section 2-707. The buyer's cancellation does not affect the buyer's obligation to pay the price
34 give the buyer the ability to return the goods to the seller outside of the revocation right.

36 Subsections (2) through (4) of subsection (d) are new and were not found in former Section 2-703.
37 (2) is designed to allow the parties to provide in their contract the obligations that should survive cancellation.
38 (3) recognizes the validity of non-disclosure agreements that operate after cancellation of the contract.
39 rule is subject to contrary agreement of the parties. In some situations, the parties may intend that the contract
40 obligation not survive cancellation of the contract. If so, the parties can so provide in their agreement.
41 not only the language of the parties, but also applicable usage of trade, course of dealing and course of 42 Subsection (4) allows enforcement of alternative dispute resolution clauses, choice of forum clauses, and 43 clauses regarding reduction of the statute of limitations period as allowed under Section 2-814 as well as 44 regarding dispute resolution that is enforceable under other law. Cancellation of the contract should not 45 The list in subsection (d) is not exclusive and other rights may survive cancellation if the parties so provide.
46

5. Subsection (e) is the same in substance as former Section 2-720.

6. CISG. CISG's equivalent to "cancellation" is "avoidance" for a fundamental breach of Article 25, 49(1), and 64(1). The effects of a proper avoidance are stated in Articles 81-84. In general, it is easier to avoid the contract under CISG than it is to cancel under Article 2. Moreover, the seller's remedies are limited to damages or resale and the buyer's remedies of contract-market price damages and "cover" depend on Articles 75 and 76.

SECTION 2-809. LIQUIDATION OF DAMAGES; DEPOSITS.

(a) Damages for breach of contract may be liquidated [in the contract] but only in an amount that is reasonable in the light of the difficulties of proof of loss in the event of breach and either the actual loss or the loss that was foreseeable at the time of contracting, or the loss caused by the breach. If a term liquidating damages is unenforceable under this subsection, the aggrieved party may recover the amount of the actual loss or the loss caused by the breach, or the remedies provided in this article.

(b) If a seller justifiably withholds or stops performance because of the buyer's breach of contract, the buyer is entitled to restitution of the amount by which the sum of payments exceeds the amount due. If the buyer is entitled to restitution under a term liquidating damages in accordance with subsection (a).

(c) A buyer's right to restitution under subsection (b) is subject to offset to the extent that the buyer has received from the seller the value of any performance by the seller under the contract. The buyer's right to recover damages under the provisions of this article other than subsection (a) and the amount of any benefits received by the buyer directly or indirectly by reason of the contract.

(d) If a buyer has received payment in goods, their reasonable value or the proceeds of their sale of the goods, as determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, shall be the proceeds of the sale of the goods for the purposes of subsection (b).

Notes

1. Section 2-809 makes several changes from former Section 2-718. The PEB study report recommends that the parties' agreement on liquidated damages should be enforceable regardless of the amount of actual damages if the amount was a reasonable forecast at the time of contracting. Subsection (a) follows former Section 2-718(1) and allows the parties to fix a damages amount in their agreement if it is reasonable in light of either the anticipated loss or the difficulty of proof of loss. Language regarding the inconvenience or nonfeasibility of obtaining damages from former Section 2-718(1) is not retained. The PEB study report also recommended that the last sentence of former Section 2-718(1) be deleted. That sentence provided that unreasonably large liquidated damages were

5 Section 2-809 deals with the liquidation of damages not the limitation of damages by agreement.
6 agreements are covered by Section 2-810. To illustrate, suppose commercial parties negotiated a re

21 buyer's performance obligation is subject to the provisions on an aggrieved seller's resale under Section 2-718
22 had notice of the buyer's breach prior to reselling the goods. Comment 2 to former Section 2-718 states

29 30 SECTION 2-810. CONTRACTUAL MODIFICATION OF REMEDY.

31 (a) Subject to Section 2-809, the following rules apply:

32 (1) An agreement may add to, limit, or substitute for the remedies available under this article
33 limiting or altering the measure of damages recoverable for breach of contract or limiting the buyer's
34 the goods and repayment by the seller of the price or to repair and replacement of nonconforming goods 35 seller.

36 (2) An agreed remedy under paragraph (1) may not be applied to deprive the aggrieved party of 37 minimum adequate remedy under the circumstances.

38 (3) Resort to an agreed remedy under paragraph (1) is optional. However, if the parties

1 that the agreed remedy is exclusive, it is the sole remedy.

2 (b) Subject to subsection (a)(2), if, because of a breach of contract or other circumstances, a
3 remedy fails substantially to achieve the intended purposes of the parties, the following rules apply:

4 (1) In a contract other than a consumer contract, the aggrieved party may pursue all remedies
5 under this article. However, an agreement expressly providing that incidental or consequential damages
6 resulting from the failure to provide the limited remedy, are excluded is enforceable to the extent permitted by 7 (c).

8 (2) In a consumer contract, an aggrieved party may reject the goods or revoke acceptance to the extent
9 extent of the failure, may pursue all remedies available under this article including the right to recover
10 incidental damages, despite any term purporting to exclude or limit such remedies.

11 (c) Subject to subsection (b), consequential damages and incidental damages may be limited by an 12 agreement unless the limitation or exclusion is unconscionable. Limitation of consequential damages on the part of 13 person in the case of a consumer contract is presumed to be unconscionable.

15 Notes

16 1. Section 2-810 makes the several changes to former Section 2-719. Subsection (a)(1) is the same as 17 as former Section 2-719(1)(a). Subsection (a)(3) is the same in substance as former Section 2-719(3).
18 validates agreements modifying or limiting remedies. The unstated assumption is that such agreements are 19 conscionable at the time of contracting, Section 2-105, and not otherwise subject to the defenses of 20 See Section 1-103. Due to the deletion of Section 2-602 on service contracts, Article 2 does not prohibit 21 performance for service promises. The classic service promise is the seller promising to repair or replace
22 goods. The issue is what level of performance is required. If the seller has a right to cure, the cure
23 the cure must result in conforming goods. Section 2-709. A repair or replacement promise as an express warranty
24 for breach of a warranty of quality should also result in conforming goods. This point could be made in 25 this section. If the repair or replacement promise is breached and repair or replacement is the exclusive 26 situation should be treated as a failure of the essential purpose of the agreed remedy under subsection (b).
27

28 Subsection (a)(2) responds to the PEB study report recommendation that the Drafting Committee consider
29 placing in the statute a standard of when an agreement goes too far in limiting or altering remedies.
30 agreed remedy become a penalty (too much) or sink below some minimum adequate remedy (too little).
31 cases where exclusive, limited remedies have been agreed, the courts have given the parties wide latitude.

1 Electric Co. v. Westinghouse Electric Corp., 973 F.2d 391 (1st Cir. 1992), upholding an allocation
2 risk between “highly sophisticated business entities. On the other hand, the aggrieved party, despi
3 be entitled at the very least to some minimum adequate remedy, presumably not less than restitution
4 Inc. v. Iron, 979 F.2d 1068 (5th Cir. 1992). To test whether the contract provides a minimum adequ
5 comparison could be to the expectancy interest, to the restitution interest, or to the reliance interest.
6 could also be tested by deciding whether the contract was illusory because the breaching party in ef
7 so that the aggrieved party had no effective recourse for the breach of contract.

9 After discussion at the January and March, 1996 meetings, the Drafting Committee approve
10 Section 2-810(a)(2) as a limitation on the agreed remedies permitted in Section 2-810(a)(1). What 11 minimum adequate remedy depends upon the circumstances of each case. At the March 1997 meet
12 Committee discussed whether the minimum agreed remedy provision is a subset of unconscionabili
13 be so stated in the text. A motion to that effect failed by a vote of 2-5. A phrasing of that idea cou
14 agreed remedy that does not provide the aggrieved party a minimum adequate remedy is unconscion
15 would thus be similar to the statement in subsection (c) about the unconscionability of exclusion of 16 for personal injury in the consumer goods case. This statement of the principle would be in accord
17 former Section 2-719 which stated “If the parties intend to conclude a contract for sale within this A

20 is subject to deletion and in that event the remedies made available by this Article are applicable as 21 never existed.

23 2. Subsection (b) is derived from former Section 2-719(2) which stated that if a limited rem
24 essential purpose, the aggrieved party could have remedies as provided in the Act. The construction
25 been troublesome for the courts. The PEB study report recommended that the revision clarify how 26 applied. In these cases, the seller, either directly or through a dealer, obtains an agreement with the 27 Make a limited express warranty, (2) Exclude or limit implied warranties, (3) Promise, on breach o
28 repair, replace parts or otherwise cure the breach for a stated period of time, and (4) Exclude liabili
29 damages. These clauses, typically, are well drafted and are stated to be “exclusive. Problems start
30 and the seller is unable or unwilling to perform the limited, agreed remedy. Here there is one (the e
31 probably two (the agreement to “cure ) breaches by the seller. What are the buyer’s remedies? Sho
32 buyer is a consumer? Subsection (b) answers these questions.

33
34 Beyond a breach of contract, no attempt is made to define when “circumstances cause a fai
35 inability of the seller after reasonable efforts to comply with the agreed remedy is a prime example.
36 second breach of contract for which independent remedies are available. See Sections 2-103(a)(3),
37 “circumstances are left to the courts. A failure, however, leaves the buyer facing a breach of warra 38 agreement to repair by the seller and usually in possession of nonconforming goods.

39
40 Non-consumer contracts. Subsection (b)(1) provides a specific answer to the enforceabilit
41 consequential and incidental damage excluder when the exclusive, limited agreed remedy fails of it
42 is the question that has been most troublesome for the courts. When a limited agreed remedy fails,
43 damage excluder is still effective if enforceable under subsection (c). Thus an aggrieved party wou
44 substitutes for the failed remedy but would not get consequential damages if the contract excludes t
45 adopts as the default rule the presumption that the agreed limited remedy and the consequential and 46 excluder are independent of each other in a commercial case. See International Financial Services.

2 for or limit, if a remedy fails of its essential purpose, the aggrieved party may resort to all remedies

4 Consumer Contracts. Subsection (b)(2) provides for the opposite presumption in consum
5 contracts as in commercial contracts. That is, in consumer contracts, the consequential and incident
6 clauses would not be enforceable in the situation where the agreed remedy failed. Subsection (b)(2
7 default rule the presumption that the consequential and incidental damage excluder clause is dependen
8 the limited remedy.

10 Subsection (b) is subject to the overriding principle in subsection (a)(2) of a minimum adequ
11 a limited, exclusive remedy was not provided and a consequential damage excluder that is enforcea
12 and subsection (b) but if the aggrieved party was precluded from recovering consequential damages
13 effect has no remedy. These circumstances have prompted some courts to deny enforcement to the 14 presumably because either the seller was in some way at fault or the buyer had no minimum adequa
15 restitution.

17 3. Subsection (c) is the same in substance as former Section 2-719(3) except that it explicit
18 exclusion of incidental as well as consequential damages. An agreement excluding recovery for co
19 incidental damages was enforced in McNally Wellman Co. v. New York State Electric & Gas
20 Corp., 63 F.3d 1188 (2d Cir. 1995) (New York law). The Drafting Committee voted against provid
21 consequential damage excluders by stating a presumption of conscionability in a commercial case.
22 report recommended that no special provisions for personal injury damages be included in this prov
23 Committee rejected that recommendation as detrimental to the enactability of a revised Article 2.

24
25 4. CISG. There is no comparable provision in the Convention. Is Section 2-810 a rule of v

18 1. Section 2-812 makes only one change in former Sections 2-723 and 2-724. Subsection (

1 Second, it stated that “any damages based on market price were subject to the “learned of t

24 that accrued before the effective date of this article.

25 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-725; Licenses Section 2B-707.

1. Section 2-814 makes several changes to former Section 2-725. Former Section 2-725(1) action for breach of contract must be brought within 4 years after the cause of action accrued. Subsection (a) extends the limitation period of four years after the right of action accrues by allowing an action for breach to be brought within 5 years after the breach was or should have been discovered. An outside time limit of 5 years after accrual of the cause of action extends the extension of the limitations period. Thus if a party discovers a breach near the end of the four year period, the party would have one year to bring the action but not longer than 5 years after the accrual of the cause of action. This follows the approach of Section 2B-705 (May 5, 1997 draft). Subsection (a) continues the rule from former Section 2-725(1) that the original agreement may reduce the limitations period to one year but no less. However, subsection (a) does not allow that reduction of the limitation period in a consumer contract or allow that reduction in an indemnity action. The limitation on the ability of parties to extend the statute of limitations by agreement found in former Section 2-725(1) was deleted as parties can find other ways to extend the limitations period.

2. Subsection (b) retains the rule from former Section 2-725(2) that a right of action accrues when the breach occurs regardless of knowledge of the breach. This general rule is subject to the exceptions for breach of warranty in subsection (c), for indemnity actions in subsection (d), for breach of warranty of title in Section 2-404, for the discovery rule for accrual) and for breach of a remote warranty in Section 2-404(e) (providing a discovery rule for accrual). With the exception of the breach of warranty provisions in subsection (c), the other exceptions to the general rule. Subsection (b) also clarifies when a breach by repudiation occurs for purposes of accrual of the cause of action. Market price damages may be measured at a different time. See Sections 2-821 and 2-826.

3. Subsection (c) continues the rule from former Section 2-725(2) that the cause of action for breach of warranty accrues when the tender of delivery is completed (including any agreed assembly or installation) in Section 2-602 unless the warranty expressly extends to performance of the goods after delivery. In that case, the warranty governs when the right of action accrues. Under current law, courts treat these two promises differently for limitations purposes. Promise 1 is a promise that the goods will be free of defects for a period of time. Promise 2 is a warranty to repair or replace the goods if a defect arises during that time. Promise 1 is a warranty of quality covering the goods for one year if the warranty is breached. Courts treat Promise 1 as a warranty of quality extending to future performance and the discovery accrual rule applies. Courts treat Promise 2 as a warranty of quality explicitly extending to future performance, rather the goods must conform at time of tender and the promise is for a year. The cause of action for breach of warranty accrues upon tender of delivery, and the cause of action for repair would accrue upon the seller's failure to do so.

The Drafting Committee rejected a discovery rule for all breach of warranty causes of action. The Committee's test responds to the real risk that where certain types of manufactured goods are involved a buyer may not have reason to know of a breach of warranty until the limitation period has expired. The effect of this risk is the so-called "economic loss" rule, which prevents access to the "discovery" statute of limitations applicable to breach of warranty. This issue was raised at the December, 1996 meeting of the ALI Council and the Council, by a vote of 10-9 in preference for a "discovery" rule where building materials and similar products were involved. At the meeting of the Ad hoc ALI group, the group acknowledged the Committee preference for the tender of delivery rule.

4. Subsection (d) responds to the need to provide an accrual rule for indemnity causes of action. The rule is based upon Section 2A-506. An action for indemnity will accrue when the act or omission on which the claim is based or should have been discovered.

5. Subsection (e) is the same in substance as former Section 2-725(3) and subsection (f) is the same in substance as former Section 2-725(4).

6. CISG. The CISG has no statute of limitations. Parties must rely upon the on the Limita International Sale of Goods (1974), which the United States has now ratified.

[B. SELLER'S REMEDIES]

SECTION 2-815. SELLER’S REMEDIES IN GENERAL. If a buyer breaches the contract under Section 2-701 or 2-710(c) becomes insolvent, the seller may:

- (1) withhold delivery of the goods under Section 2-816(a) or 2-818(a);
- (2) stop delivery of the goods under Section 2-818(b);
- (3) proceed with respect to goods still unidentified to the contract or unfinished under Section 2-818(c);
- (4) reclaim the goods under Section 2-816(b);
- (5) obtain specific performance under Section 2-807 or recover the price under Section 2-820;
- (6) resell the goods and recover damages under Section 2-819;
- (7) recover damages for repudiation or nonacceptance under Section 2-821;
- (8) recover incidental and consequential damages under Sections 2-805 and 2-806;
- (9) cancel the contract under Section 2-808;
- (10) recover liquidated damages under Section 2-809;
- (11) enforce limited remedies under Section 2-810; or
- (12) recover damages under Section 2-804.

SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-703.

1. Section 2-815 is based on former Section 2-703 which indexed the seller's remedies as to some circumstances when the remedies were available. Former Section 2-703 was criticized as an index section with the aggrieved seller's right to pursue any particular remedy dependant upon the particular section and the principles in Subpart A, most notably those principles in Section 2-803, to recover twice for the same injury and construing the remedies in light of the expectation principle. Section 2-801 already states that the remedies in Subparts B and C are subject to the provisions of Subpart A. This section restates that principle in this section.

Whether the buyer has breached the contract depends upon the provisions of Part 7. Thus Section 2-701 references the generic definition of breach in Section 2-701 and of breach in an installment contract in Section 2-712. Whether the seller can resort to remedies under this section for repudiation, depends initially upon whether there has been a breach of contract under Section 2-712. The seller may not resort to Section 2-815 unless the buyer has breached the contract with respect to a performance not yet due the loss of which will substantially impair the value of the contract. Thus, a partial repudiation of an installment that does not substantially impair the value of the contract will not be actionable. It would, however, justify a demand for adequate assurance of due performance.

Because two of the seller's remedies, Section 2-816(b)(1) on reclamation and Section 2-818(2) on delivery, become available upon buyer's insolvency, which is not necessarily a breach of the contract, this phrase references insolvency.

2. Relationship to Article 9. Several of the catalogued remedies for breach are "self-help" remedies. Depending on the nature of the breach, the seller can withhold delivery, stop delivery by identifying goods to the contract or salvage unfinished goods, resell the goods or cancel the contract with the buyer's intervention. So long as the seller has possession or control of the goods the remedies are effective in breach.

What about purchasers from or creditors of the breaching buyer? Can they take an interest in the goods? Until the buyer has possession or control of the goods, the answer is no. This is consistent with Section 2-701. Some of these remedies as security interests arising under Article 9, and the fact that what ever interest in the goods before delivery is subject to the seller's right to withhold delivery. Although the Article 2 and Article 9 Committees agree on what the answer should be, a clear statement in the relevant sections must still be made. An answer may be required where the seller is in breach and the buyer has the right to obtain possession of the goods under the buyer's remedy sections even though the buyer does not yet have physical possession of the goods. Section 2-824.

These remedies are supplemented by the power to suspend performance after a demand for performance under Section 2-711 or where the buyer is insolvent. Section 2-818(a). The exercise of self-help remedies by the seller, lead to an agreed settlement of the dispute or simply be a prelude to litigation. The unjustified exercise of a remedy is a breach by the seller.

3. The seller's judicial remedies include specific performance, Section 2-807, an action for damages, Section 2-822, damages based upon the difference between the contract and market price, Section 2-821(a), and claims for lost profits, Section 2-821(b). Claims for incidental damages are made under Section 2-805 and

1 damages, to which the seller is now entitled, are made under Section 2-806.

3 4. CISG. Article 61(1) provides a general guide to the Articles dealing with the seller's right
4 on breach by the buyer. Article 61(2) states that the seller is "not deprived of any right he may have 5 exercising his right to other remedies.

8 SECTION 2-816. SELLER'S RIGHT TO WITHHOLD DELIVERY OF

9 GOODS OR TO RECLAIM GOODS AFTER DELIVERY TO BUYER.

10 (a) If a buyer is in breach of contract under Section 2-701, the seller may withhold delivery
11 affected. If the breach is of the whole contract, Section 2-710(c), the seller may withhold delivery of the 12 balance.

13 (b) Under this article, a seller may reclaim goods delivered to a buyer under a contract for sale in 14 following circumstances:

15 (1) A seller that discovers that the buyer has received goods on credit while insolvent may 16 goods upon a demand made in a record within 10 days after receipt of the goods or, if a bankruptcy
17 is the debtor is commenced during the 10 day period, such demand must be made within 20 days after 18 If the buyer made a material misrepresentation of a credit condition in a record to the reclaiming seller
19 reporting agency or the like less than 90 days before delivery, the demand is timely if made within a 20 delivery.

21 (2) If payment is due and demanded on delivery to the buyer, the seller may reclaim the goods
22 upon a demand made within a reasonable time after the seller discovers or should have discovered the 23 made.

24 (c) Reclamation is subject to the rights under this article of a buyer in ordinary course of business
25 good-faith purchaser for value that arise before the seller takes possession under a timely demand for 26 Successful reclamation of the goods under subsection (b)(1) precludes all other remedies with respect to the goods.

Notes

1. Section 2-816 makes several changes to former Section 2-702. First, the right to withhold delivery of the buyer's insolvency found in former Section 2-702(1) has been relocated to Section 2-818(a). Section 2-818. Section 2-816(a) states the right of the seller to withhold delivery for breach of contract formerly stated within former Section 2-703 without a separate section. Pursuant to the Style Committee's recommendation to make Section 2-815 a pure index section, the statement of the actual right to withhold delivery has been moved to a separate subsection. Perhaps the right to withhold delivery for either insolvency under Section 2-815 or Section 2-816(a) should be combined in one subsection.

2. Second, pursuant to the PEB study report recommendation, subsection (b) sets forth two grounds for reclamation in a credit sale because of the buyer's insolvency from former Section 2-702(2) and rights recognized under former Section 2-507. Insolvency is defined in Section 1-201(23). These grounds for Article 2, are in addition to the repossession right given to a secured party under Section 9-503. Section 2A-525. They are, however, limited to the goods and do not extend to the proceeds of the goods. See Bank of America v. United States v. Westside Bank, 732 F.2d 1258 (5th Cir. 1984) (proceeds within scope of reclamation). Moreover, if public notice of the reclamation right has not been given, it is a mistake to treat this historical Article 2 right as a non-possessory security interest. Reclamation here is exceptional and limited.

Although the PEB study report recommended that reclamation in a credit sale not follow the procedure for reclamation under 11 U.S.C. § 546(c) for reclamation rights recognized in a bankruptcy case, at the time of the Drafting Committee's meeting, the Committee voted otherwise. Thus subsection (b)(1) has been redrafted to follow the procedure in § 546(c), including that the notice be in a record. (Section 546(c) requires the demand be in writing and the notice expands the misrepresentations of solvency that extend the time for giving notice of reclamation to include misrepresentations made to third parties such as credit reporting agencies instead of expanding the time for reclamation only when misrepresentations are made to the seller as under former Section 2-702(2).

Subsection (b)(2) codifies the right of a cash seller to reclaim the goods that had been recognized under former Section 2-507 and PEB Commentary No. 1. The time limit for making the reclamation demand, when the demand is in a record, is a reasonable time after the seller discovered or should have discovered of the non-payment. The time period was recommended in the PEB study report as reflecting the commercial reality of when the seller discovers of the problem with the payment. Subsection (a)(2) does not apply where, after delivery in a "cash sale," the seller discovers a nonconformity in the goods and stops payment of the check.

Section 2-816 does not contain the provision from former Section 2-702(2) that the seller has the right to reclaim the goods based upon fraudulent or innocent misrepresentation of solvency or intent to pay. This is needed because the introductory phrase of subsection (b) clearly provides these two bases of reclamation. The right of reclamation recognized for a seller.

3. Subsection (c) subjects the seller's right to reclaim under subsection (b) to the rights of a good faith purchaser for value. This continues the rule from former Section 2-702(3) as to the rights of a reclaiming seller in a credit sale with one change. The good faith purchaser must have given value. Under former Section 2-702(3), value was not a requirement. (See definition of purchase in Section 1-201(32) which includes a purchase for value.) As recommended by the PEB study report, with the integration of a reclaiming cash seller into Section 2-816, the rights to the goods as against third parties are the same as the credit seller's rights.

1 At the March 18, 1994 meeting of the Drafting Committee, it was argued that subsection (c)
2 protection to the reclaiming seller. Motions were made to delete secured parties from the list of cre
3 priority over the seller and to expand the seller's protection to proceeds. The votes were inconclusi
4 made in the draft. See In re Blinn Wholesale Drug Co., Inc., 164 B.R. 440 (E.D.N.Y. 1994) ("good
5 purchaser includes secured party with after acquired security interest). At the March, 1996 meetin
6 Committee, a decision to require "new value before a good faith purchaser (with a perfected secur
7 over the reclaiming seller was made. This decision was questioned at the 1996 Annual Meeting of 8 coordinated with Article 9. At the March 1997 Drafting Committee meeting, the Committee voted 9 in front of value.

10
11 Subsection (c) follows the recommendation of the PEB study report to clarify when the right
12 ordinary course and good faith purchaser for value are sufficiently ripe so as to defeat a reclaiming
13 rights or a reclaiming seller to that seller taking possession of the goods. To illustrate, consider the

14
15 Case #1. Seller makes a timely demand and takes possession from the buyer before any right
16 purchasers arise. Seller clearly wins.

17
18 Case #2. Seller makes a timely demand after the rights of buyers or purchases arise and the 19 possession of the goods. This is easy. Buyer or purchaser wins.

21 Case #3. Seller makes a timely demand after the rights of buyers or purchases arise but before
22 possession. Seller then takes possession. If a first to possess test applies, Seller, as the first to take 23 "right to possession test applies, the purchasers should win, even if that right is conditional or pos
24 transferred. As a policy matter, a "right to possession test should apply and that right arises, at the c
25 competing party becomes a buyer in the ordinary course of business or a good faith purchaser.

26
27 Case #4. Consider the following variations on Case #3.

28
29 (a) A buyer otherwise in the ordinary course of business has a special property interest in id
30 has not taken possession when the seller's timely reclamation demand is received.

31
32 (b) A good faith buyer for value has either a special property interest or title in the goods bu
33 possession when the seller's timely reclamation demand is received.

34
35 (c) A secured party (a good faith purchaser) who has given new value has an enforceable se
36 buyer's after-acquired property which attaches to the goods but the secured party has not reposse
37 reclamation demand is made.

38
39 Seller should lose in each case. The status of the purchasers is clear and the right to possess
40 though still conditional. The seller, on the other hand, has given up possession without public notic
41 reclamation right and has not regained possession before the rights of the others arises. To win, the 42 timely notice of reclamation and retake possession from the buyer before the right to possession of 43 purchasers arises.

45 Subsection (c) also contains the rule from former Section 2-702(3) that successful reclamation
46 credit sale reclamation precludes all other remedies with respect to the goods. This provision was c

1 Draft pursuant to a vote of the Drafting Committee. The issue rose again at the January, 1995 meet
2 Committee, where it was argued that the deletion was improper and would change the law. This co
3 at the December, 1995 meeting of the Reporter with the Article 9 Drafting Committee. Thus, the p
4 subject to further discussion.

6 In that discussion, it is helpful to distinguish between reclamations under subsection (b)(1) a
7 under subsection (b)(2). Reclamations under subsection (b)(1) do not involve a breach of contract t
8 Reclamations under subsection (b)(1) are based upon a special remedy triggered solely by the buyer
9 buyer's breach. Reclamation for insolvency is based upon a presumed fraud that the buyer is perpe
10 that situation, when a seller reclaims, in effect the seller is rescinding the contract as a remedy for th
11 both sides return the performance of the other. With that justification for insolvency based reclama
12 limit the seller to only its reclamation right and not give it other remedies against the buyer.

14 Reclamations under subsection (b)(2) do involve a breach of contract by the buyer. Thus it
15 in a reclamation under subsection (b)(2) to limit the seller to reclaiming the goods and not having a
16 Compare what happens if the buyer refuses to pay prior to delivery. The seller has the goods and al
17 code, including the right to damages measured either by resale or contract price. If the seller delive
18 pay because of a bounced check, the buyer has breached the contract and the seller has the right to 19 not at all clear that the seller should be limited to getting the goods back and not getting any further
20 of contract. At the March 1997 meeting, the Committee voted to limit the principle of the last sente 21 under subsection (b)(1).

23 The Committee also expressed concern about what the last sentence means when applied to 24 subsection (b)(1). Of principle concern was whether it precludes remedies for damages to the good
25 until reclaimed, the goods are the buyer's goods to do with as the buyer sees fit. Thus the goods wh
26 in the same condition as they were when delivered to the buyer. The Comments should clarify that 27 remedies is not to prevent actions for damages to the goods. The preclusion could apply only to pre
28 based upon insolvency of the buyer. Compare Section 2-811. When the buyer is insolvent, but has 29 the contract, the other remedies to preclude would be damages for fraud based upon the buyer's ins
30 the fear is double counting of harm, the principle of Section 2-803(c) that a party may not recover m
31 same injury should suffice. If the buyer is insolvent and has otherwise breached the contract, shoul
32 other remedies for breach? Is the fear here a secret lien or is the fear overcompensation of the seller
33 overcompensation of the seller, the principle of Section 2-803(c) provides the controlling principle
34 not preclude other remedies designed to place the seller in its full performance position when the bu
35 the contract. If the fear is a secret lien, it is unclear how precluding the seller's other remedies for b 36 less secret.

38 4. After considerable discussion, a decision not to grant the reclaiming seller the remedy of 39 at the March, 1996 meeting of the Drafting Committee. At the March 1997 meeting, the Committee
40 the text or in the Comments whether the reclamation right extended to proceeds. Currently courts h
41 conclusions on this issue. Thus the law would stay as it is, confused and conflicting on the proceed 42 report concluded that the right to reclaim should not extend to proceeds of the goods.

43
44 5. CISG. Under the Convention, a seller who avoids a contract for fundamental breach can

4           SECTION 2-818. SELLER'S REFUSAL TO DELIVER BECAUSE OF

5           BUYER'S INSOLVENCY; STOPPAGE IN TRANSIT OR OTHERWISE.

6           (a) A seller that discovers that the buyer is insolvent may refuse to make delivery except for 7           payment for all goods previously delivered under the contract.

8           (b) Subject to subsection (d), a seller may stop delivery of goods in the possession of a carrier
9           the buyer is insolvent or repudiates or fails to make a payment due before delivery or if, for any other reason,
10          the seller has a right to withhold or reclaim the goods.

11          (c) As against a buyer under subsection (b), the seller may stop delivery until:

12               (1) receipt of the goods by the buyer;

13               (2) acknowledgment to the buyer by any bailee of the goods, other than a carrier, or by a person in the 14          possession of the goods as warehouseman, that the bailee holds the goods for the buyer; or 15               (3) negotiation to the buyer of any negotiable document of title covering the goods.

16          (d) If notice to stop delivery has been given, the following rules apply:

17               (1) The notice must afford the carrier or bailee a reasonable opportunity to prevent delivery.

18               (2) After notification, the carrier or bailee shall hold and deliver the goods according to the order of 19          the seller. The seller is liable to the bailee or carrier for any resulting charges or damages. A carrier or 20          bailee need not deliver if the seller does not provide indemnity for charges or damages upon the carrier's or bailee's
21          demand.

22               (3) If a negotiable document of title has been issued for goods, the carrier or bailee need not deliver
23          the goods without notification to stop until surrender of the document.

24               (4) A carrier or bailee that has issued a nonnegotiable document need not obey a notification to stop
25          received from a person other than the person named in the document as the person from which the goods were 26          received for shipment or storage.

Notes

1. Section 2-818 makes several changes in former Section 2-705. As recommended by the seller's right to stop delivery on credit and demand cash as well as payment for past deliveries upon insolvency found in former Section 2-702(1) has been relocated to subsection (a).

2. Subsection (b) is the same in substance as former Section 2-705(1) except that the limitation may only stop delivery of a “carload, truckload, planeload or larger shipments of express or freight” if the contract breached the contract has been deleted. The Drafting Committee concluded that the “carload, truckload or planeload” limitation was unrealistic in light of changing shipping methods and practices. For example, why stop delivery of a packet of goods shipped by, say, Federal Express, upon breach by the buyer, especially if the location of the goods can quickly be determined by computer? In most cases, the carrier or bailee’s obligation to stop delivery is limited by subsection (d)(1), which provides that the carrier must, after receiving notice from the seller, have a reasonable opportunity to prevent delivery and by subsection (d)(2) which makes the seller liable for damages caused by stopping delivery without a right to indemnity prior to stopping delivery. This flexible standard takes into account the type of goods, the carrier’s ability to find them and promptly stop delivery at the time notice is received.

3. Subsection (c) is the same in substance as former Section 2-705(2). As under current law, to stop delivery under subsection (b) is too late if any of the events listed in subsection (c) have occurred.

4. Subsection (d) makes two changes to former Section 2-705(3). First, it clarifies that the rule applies to both bailees and carriers whereas former Section 2-705(3) seemed to limit some of its application to carriers. Second, it provides that the carrier or bailee may demand indemnity for charges or damages in excess of the limitation of carload, truckload, or planeload, the carrier or bailee could be under the obligation to pay damages to third parties for delay while the one package is dug out of the conveyance. A right to indemnity is not merely the right to sue the seller for damages. This sentence gives the carrier or bailee the right to sue the seller before the harm is caused to anyone else and is modeled on the buyer's right under Section 2-705 to recover expenses in caring for rejected goods.

5. Note that creditors of or purchasers from the buyer are subject to the seller's right to stop. See In re Morrison Industries, L.P., 175 B.R. 5 (W.D.N.Y. 1994) (right to stop effective against buyer in bankruptcy).

6. CISG. Article 71(1) states when a party may suspend performance of obligations and Article 71(2) extends that right over to cases where the goods have been “dispatched.” These provisions have little detail about when that delivery can be suspended even if the buyer has a document entitling the buyer to obtain the goods. The provision in subsection (c)(3) is to the contrary. Article 71(3), however, requires the party suspending performance to give notice of suspension to the other and to continue performance if the other provides adequate assurance. These latter requirements are not found in Article 2. Should seller be obligated to give notice of stoppage?

SECTION 2-819. SELLER'S RESALE.

(a) If a buyer has breached a contract and the goods concerned are in the seller's possession

1 may resell them or the undelivered balance. If the resale is made in good faith, within a commercial
2 in a commercially reasonable manner, the seller may recover the contract price less the resale price
3 consequential and incidental damages, less expenses avoided as a result of the breach.

4 (b) A resale:

5 (1) may be at a public auction or private sale including sale by one or more contracts to 6 identification to an existing contract of the seller;

7 (2) may be as a unit or in parcels and at any time and place and on any terms, but every 8 including the method, manner, time, place, and terms, must be commercially reasonable; and

9 (3) must be reasonably identified as referring to the breached contract, but the goods need not 10 existence or have been identified to the contract before the breach.

11 (c) If the resale is at a public auction, the following rules apply:

12 (1) Only identified goods may be sold unless there is a recognized market for the public
13 goods of the kind.

14 (2) The resale must be made at a usual place or market for public sale if one is reasonably
15 Except in the case of goods that are perishable or which threaten to decline in value speedily, the seller
16 reasonable notice of the time and place of the resale.

17 (3) If the goods are not to be within the view of persons attending the sale, the notification
18 state the place where the goods are located and provide for their reasonable inspection by prospective

19 (4) The seller may buy the goods.

20 (d) A good-faith purchaser at a resale takes the goods free of any rights of the original buyer
21 fails to comply with this section.

22 (e) A seller is not accountable to the buyer for any profit made on a resale. However, a person
23 a seller or a buyer which has rightfully rejected or justifiably revoked acceptance shall account for a

3 Notes

4 1. Section 2-819 provides for seller's recovery of damages after resale of the goods when the 5 makes a few changes from former Section 2-706. Subsection (a) states the basic ability of the seller
6 to recover damages based upon the difference between the resale price and the contract price when the 7 contract. Subsection (a) is the same as former Section 2-706(1) except that it (i) makes explicit the 8 seller be in possession or control of the goods, a requirement implicit in the seller's ability to resell
9 clear that the sale must be not only be in a commercially reasonable manner but must take place within a
10 reasonable time, and (iii) references not only the seller's right to incidental damages but also to contract
11 an action for the price is not available, Section 2-822(a), the seller may prefer to resell the "goods covered by 12 undelivered balance. The buyer, of course, must be in breach and the resale process is subject to the 13 policies in Article 1 and Section 2-803 as well as the particular requirements of Section 2-819. The 14 include those which at the time of the breach are: (1) existing and identified; (2) existing and not identified
15 thereafter; (3) unfinished but finished and identified thereafter, Section 2-817(b); and (4) not existing 16 until after the resale contract.

18 2. Subsection (b) is the same in substance as former Section 2-706(2) except that it substitutes
19 auction for "public sale. The consensus of the Drafting Committee was that a public sale was a proper 20

21 3. Subsection (c) is the same in substance as former Section 2-706(4). Subsection (d) is the same as 22 former Section 2-706(5). Subsection (e) is the same in substance as former Section 2-706(6).

24 4. The requirement in former Section 2-706(3) that a reselling seller give the buyer notice of a
25 private sale has been deleted. Previously, notice was treated as a condition precedent to a proper resale
26 required in a disposition by public or private sale to enforce a security interest under Section 9-504. If the 27 possession may have a security interest arising under Article 2, Section 9-113, and the resale remedy
28 of a secured party, Section 9-113, Comment 1, a common notice requirement seemed to make sense. If the 29 interest of the buyer or debtor was considered.

30
31 The Drafting Committee, however, decided to limit the notice requirement to sales made to a secured party
32 interest created by agreement or clearly imposed by statute. See Section 2-829(b). Notice in the latter case is 33 important because the debtor has an interest in the goods sold (title) and owes a fixed amount of money. If the 34 resale under Section 2-819, the buyer is normally not a debtor (the price is not yet due) and has no interest in the goods.
35 although the buyer could have an interest if the goods are identified to the contract for sale prior to the resale.
36 Section 2-502. In the view of the Drafting Committee, therefore, the deletion of former subsection (3) would 37 the buyer and would avoid undermining an otherwise commercially reasonable resale and creating new
38 up remedies if the resale were not proper. In short, if the private resale is in good faith and is commercially
39 under subsection (a), the seller is entitled to resale damages even though the buyer was not notified. If the seller
40 give notice to the buyer in a public sale as required by Section 2-819(c)(2), should that preclude the seller from
41 damages under this section if the sale was conducted in good faith, commercially reasonable and in a commercially
42 reasonable manner? Or should the buyer merely have a claim for damages caused by the failure to give notice?

43

1           5. The relationship between Sections 2-819 and 2-821 is important. Consider these variations
2 are in fact resold:

4           (a) Resale in good faith and in a commercially reasonable manner. Section
5 2-819(a) is probably the preferred remedy. Section 2-821(b), however, is available in a lost volume
6 2-821(a) might be available, but only if those damages do not put the seller in a better position than 7 performed. See Section 2-803(c). Thus, the fact that the seller has complied with Section 2-819(a)
8 foreclose the choice of market damages under Section 2-821(a). The question is, considering the re
9 of market price damages puts the seller in a substantially better position than full performance would
10 prove the resale was in fact a substitute transaction for the contract that was breached and that mea
11 2-821(a) would place the seller in a better position than full performance, buyer can seek to limit the 12 market price remedy under the principle of Section 2-803(c).

14           (b) Resale in good faith but not in a commercially reasonable manner.
15 Although Section 2-819(a) is not available, Section 2-821(a) may be used and, in a case of lost volume, 16 Section 2-821(b) are available.

18           (c) Resale in bad faith. Although not stated in the text, damages under Section 2-821(a) should 19 available only if they are the substantial equivalent of damages that would have been available if the 20 Section 2-819(a). Should this principle be placed in the text or the Comments?

21
22           6. CISG. Article 75 permits the seller to resell the goods after the contract has been avoided
23 breach, but contains none of the detail in Section 2-819. If the seller resells, damages are measured
24 between the contract price and the price in the substitute transaction. Furthermore, if the seller resells
25 by the difference between the contract price and the market price are not available. Article 76.

26 27 28           SECTION 2-820. PERSON IN POSITION OF SELLER.

29           (a) In this section, a person in the position of a seller includes, as against a principal, an agent
30 become responsible for the price of goods on behalf of the principal or any person that otherwise has 31 other right in goods similar to that of a seller.

32           (b) A person in the position of a seller has the same remedies as a seller under this article.

33           SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-707.

34           Notes

35           There are no changes of substance in former Section 2-70 except that former subsection (2)
36 make clear that a person in the position of the seller has all of the remedies of the seller and not just 37 listed in former Section 2-707.

1 mitigated damages--has expired. An issue left open is what should the time for measuring market b
2 repudiated just prior to the time of tender. Will the reasonable time for measuring market price in t
3 price after the tender date? Assume the buyer repudiates on Sept. 30 and the tender date is Oct. 1.
4 repudiated, market price is measured on Oct. 1. If the buyer repudiates, market price is measured a
5 seller reasonably awaited performance (presumably not later than Oct. 1) and the time necessary for
6 engaged in a substitute transaction that the seller never did engage in (presumably sometime after C
7 actually resold, its damages would be measured by the resale section, not the market price section.

9 Another way to implement this principle without stating two different times for measurement
10 is to provide that market price is measured as of the time of tender and to let the mitigation principle
11 control when the market price should be measured in an anticipatory repudiation case. This has the 12 time for measuring market price that cannot be manipulated by the buyer as illustrated above. It als
13 mitigation so that if the seller could have reduced its damages by acting before the tender date, it m
14 recover those damages that could have been reduced. Under this approach, subsection (a)(2) would 15 market price would be measured at the latest as of the time stated in (a)(1). Measurement of the ma
16 time would depend upon application of the mitigation principle.

18 3. Second, the word “unpaid prior to contract price in former Section 2-708(1) has been de
19 breaching buyer can recover all or part of any contract price paid to the seller is determined under S
20 given that the seller may now recover consequential damages, consequential damages as well as inc
21 referenced in subsection (a). Fourth, the phrase “comparable goods, which was not contained in f
22 includes both the goods themselves and the type of contract under which they are sold. Thus, the m

28 “contract price less the market price of comparable goods. The “difference between language in 29 2-708(1) has been deleted.

30
31 4. The time for determining the contract price is not the same as the time for measuring ma
32 “contract price is not tied to when a commercially reasonable time after the seller learned of the re
33 Unless the contract price is a fixed price, the parties should have the benefit of any escalation or fle 34 have agreed.

35
36 5. Subsection (a) is subject to Section 2-803. Thus, a seller cannot choose subsection (a) if 37 it in a substantially better position than full performance by the buyer would have done. To illustra
38 resells identified goods under Section 2-819(a) at or above the contract price or actually recovers th
39 2-822. Section 2-821(a) is not available because any recovery would put the seller in a better posit
40 would have done. Similarly, if the difference between the contract price and the resale price under
41 $1,000 and the difference between the contract price and the market price under Section 2-821(a) w
42 amount will control. Finally, if damages under Section 2-821(a) substantially exceed the profits tha
43 made by full performance under subsection (b), subsection (b) controls.

44
45 Note that the seller’s choice of Section 2-821(a) controls unless the buyer proves from actual 46 market price recovery puts the seller in a better position than full performance. Hypothetical figure

1 probability, market damages should be limited to the case where the seller has identified goods on hand
2 them. Here market damages serve as a surrogate for resale damages.

4 6. Subsection (b) provides for the seller's recovery of lost profit and reliance expenses that
5 recoup from resale, salvage or other reasonable measures. The seller's choice of subsection (b) is 6 2-803(c), not the nature of the buyer's breach. Thus, the seller can choose subsection (b) where the 7 the buyer establishes that the choice puts the seller in a substantially better position than full performance.
8 highly unlikely in three cases: (1) The seller does not have completed goods on hand; (2) Upon repudiation,
9 work and salvages under Section 2-817(b); and (3) The seller is a "lost volume" seller. See the proposal
10 Section 2-803 for the relationship between the lost profit measure and market price damages. The seller's
11 profits is also subject to the mitigation principle of Section 2-803. There is a consensus among the scholars
12 any recovery for future profits should be reduced to present value. See Section 2A-102(1)(u).

13
14 The buyer may require a seller who has selected subsection (a) to use subsection (b) when the market
15 market price substantially exceeds the profits that would have been made by full performance. As a result,
16 will be limited to a seller, such as a jobber or middleman, who does not have completed goods on hand
17 by making forward contracts for them. The cases have concluded that a seller who does not take the 18 fluctuations is overcompensated when market damages under subsection (a) exceed the profits that 19 under subsection (b). See, e.g., Nobs Chemical, U.S.A., Inc. v. Koppers Co., Inc., 616 F.2d 212 (5th Cir.
20 Cir. 1980); Union Carbide Corp. v. Consumers Power Co., 636 F. Supp. 1498 (E.D. Mich. 1986).

22 7. Damages under subsection (b) include lost profits and, in appropriate cases, unreimbursed
23 expenditures in preparation or part performance. In most cases, lost profits, including reasonable overhead,
24 by subtracting the seller's total variable cost to perform, whether actual or estimated, from the contract price.
25 should adequately compensate most lost volume sellers and sellers who have no completed goods on hand.
26 defining the appropriate way to measure lost profits, the separation of lost profit recovery from reliance
27 recouped from resale or other reasonable measures is consistent with the PEB study report recommendations.

28
29 A seller who stops work and salvages under Section 2-817(b), may have both lost profits and 30 reliance expenditures. Subsection (b)(2) allows recovery of those expenditures as well, provided the seller
31 reasonable efforts to mitigate losses. Thus, in this case, the amount needed to put the seller in as good a 32 performance includes both lost net profits, reasonable overhead and unreimbursed reliance.

33
34 No effort is made to state when a seller has lost volume because of the buyer's breach or to 35 measurement standard for that complex situation. Recovery for lost volume, however, is still possible
36 standards of subsection (b). As before, the problems of definition and measurement are left to the courts.

1 (a) If a buyer fails to pay the price as it becomes due, the seller may recover, together with

3 (1) goods accepted;

4 (2) conforming goods lost or damaged after risk of their loss has passed to the buyer, but

9 (b) A seller that remains in control of the goods and sues for the price shall hold for the buyer the goods
10 identified to the contract. If the seller is entitled to the price and resale becomes possible, the seller may resell the goods
11 under Section 2-819 at any time before the collection of the judgment. The net proceeds of the resale shall be paid to the 12 buyer. Payment of the judgment entitles the buyer to any goods not resold.

13 (c) If a buyer has breached the contract, a seller that has sued for but is held not entitled to the price under 14 section may still be awarded damages for nonacceptance under Section 2-821.

16 Notes

17 1. Section 2-822 makes a few changes from former Section 2-709. Subsection (a) is the same as former 18 2-709(1) with two changes. First, consistent with the seller's ability to recover consequential damages, it allows
19 the seller to recover consequential damages as well as incidental damages. Second, subsection (a)(1) removes the 20 commercially reasonable time limit on recovering the price only applies when the seller has retained control of 21 of the goods. As under former Section 2-709, Comment 1, a wrongful revocation of acceptance is not a breach of the 22 buyer of the obligation to pay the price under subsection (a)(1). Subsection (b) is the same in substance as 23 2-709(2) except that it makes clear that the seller's resale is subject to Section 2-819. Subsection (c) is the same as 24 Section 2-709(3) which provided that if the buyer "wrongfully rejected or revoked acceptance of the goods and 25 pay when due or has repudiated" the seller who could not get the price could still sue for damages under 26 2-708. That phrasing has been reduced to "if the buyer has breached the contract."

27
28 2. The seller may now claim specific performance under Section 2-807(a). If justified by the facts, the 29 buyer may be ordered to accept and pay for the goods in exchange for the seller's conforming performance.
30 circumstances where this would be improper? For example, suppose the agreement for specific performance was for goods that the seller had no right to sell.

1 form? Presumably, Section 2-206 deals with this problem. Or, suppose that there is an agreement
2 and the goods could easily be resold to a third person. Arguably specific performance is inefficient
3 court could be persuaded to exercise its discretion and not enforce the agreement. To resolve these 4 2-807(a) has been revised to provide that if the parties agree to specific performance as a remedy, a
5 performance may not be ordered if the breaching party's only obligation is to pay money.

Notes

1. Consistent with the revisions to seller's index of remedies, the buyer's index of remedies Section 2-711(1) and (2) has been revised to be an index only with no substantive limitations contained therein than there be a breach of contract as defined in Part 7. To make Section 2-823 an index section need a new section, Section 2-829.

2. All of the buyer's remedies in Subpart C are subject to the principles stated in Subpart A. Section 2-803. A remedy from the list is available as provided in the referenced section and subject to the principles of Subpart A.

SECTION 2-824. PREPAYING BUYER'S RIGHT TO GOODS;

REPLEVIN.

(a) A buyer that pays all or a part of the price of goods identified to the contract, whether or not shipped, on making and keeping good a tender of full performance, has a right to recover them from the seller if the seller repudiates or fails to deliver as required by the contract.

(b) A buyer may recover from the seller by replevin, detinue, sequestration, claim and delivery of goods identified to a contract if, after reasonable efforts, the buyer is unable to effect cover for the goods and the circumstances indicate that an effort to obtain cover would be unavailing or if the goods have been sold by the seller in violation of the reservation and satisfaction of the security interest in them has been made or tendered.

(c) If the requirements of subsection (a) or (b) are satisfied, the buyer's right vests upon identification of the goods to the contract for sale even if the seller has not then repudiated the contract or failed to deliver under the contract.

Notes

1. Section 2-824 combines the remanent of former Section 2-502 and former Section 2-716(3). In this section the buyer's right to obtain goods from the possession of the seller.

2. Subsection (a), based upon former Section 2-502, expands the prepaying buyer's ability to recover goods from the seller. Previously, a pre-paying buyer could recover identified, conforming goods from a seller who was insolvent within 10 days after receipt of the first payment. Under revised Section 2-824(a), a pre-paying buyer may recover identified goods, whether or not conforming, from a seller, whether or not insolvent, who repudiates the contract.

1 “upon making and keeping a tender of full performance.

3 Revision history. Both the PEB Study Group and the ABA Task Force favored the repeal of
4 Section 2-502 because tying the buyer’s right to the goods to the seller’s insolvency created an undue
5 invalidation in bankruptcy. See 16 Del. J. of Corp. Law 981 at 1128-1129. If Section 2-502 were repealed,
6 pre-paying or financing buyer would have no right to the goods under Article 2 unless a right to specific
7 replevin under Section 2-807 were established. See Section 2-505(a). Beyond that, protection would require
8 compliance with Article 9, which, in practice, may be difficult to do.

10 The Drafting Committee concluded, however, that pre-paying buyers, especially consumer buyers, needed
11 some protection under Article 2. An early revision of Section 2-824 broadened protection by substituting
12 “fails to deliver” for “insolvency” as the trigger for recovery and eliminating the 10 day time limitation.
13 Section 2-502(2) of the 1990 Official Text and limited the scope of buyer’s right to “conforming” goods,
14 regardless of which party identified them. See Section 2A-522(2), in accord. Under this version, the 15 nonconforming goods were not covered by Section 2-502.

16
17 At the January, 1994 meeting, the Drafting Committee expanded the scope of Section 2-824 to include
18 requirement that the identified goods be conforming and conditioning the right to recover upon tender of 19 performance rather than tender of any “unpaid portion of the price.”

20
21 At the March 1997 meeting of the Article 9 Drafting Committee, that Committee agreed in principle to 22 of the pre-paying buyer under subsection (a). In addition, the Article 9 Committee agreed in principle that 23 buyer under this section may be a buyer in the ordinary course prior to obtaining possession of the goods.

24
25 The difference between a pre-paying and a financing buyer is that the former usually pays price before
26 receiving goods that are identified and conforming to the contract and the latter pays to finance the 27 processing of goods that are likely to be unfinished at the time of identification. Revised Section 2-502
28 in certain situations, requires the buyer to tender the full contract price before identified but unfinished goods
29 extent to which a financing buyer can perfect a purchase money security interest in non-conforming goods
30 determined under Article 9. See Report, PEB Study Group, Uniform Commercial Code, Article 9.

31
32 3. Subsection (b) is the same in substance as former Section 2-716(3). This provision has been
33 section as a buyer’s remedy as opposed to a remedy available to either party under Section 2-807. It
34 been stated more broadly as stated in Section 2A-521 in order to cover variations in state law legal 35 of personal property. Although the PEB study report recommended that this provision be deleted and 36 the buyer’s right to specific performance (Section 2-807), the right to replevin the goods is a legal remedy
37 to the equitable limits on granting specific performance and thus may be available to the buyer in a 38 would not order specific performance.

39
40 4. Subsection (c) is a new provision to clarify when the rights of the buyer under either subsection
41 sufficiently vested to determine priority of claims to the goods as against third parties who may attach
42 goods. Subsection (c) states that the buyer’s rights vest upon identification, even though the seller’s rights
43 differently, the rights vest conditionally but, if there is a breach, relate to the time of identification.

45 What about creditors of the seller? Revised Section 2-505(a) (Nov. 1996) states that the rights of the 46 seller with respect to goods identified to the contract and retained and subject to the buyer’s rights under

1 those rights vest prior to the time when a creditor's in rem claim (judgment lien or security interest)
2 Thus, if the buyer's rights vest (upon identification) before the creditor's claims attach, buyer gets p
3 free of creditor claims. If, however, the rights vest after attachment, the buyer is subject to the attac
4 qualifies as a buyer in the ordinary course of business under Article 9.

6 5. CISG. CISG has no provision dealing with a buyer's right to goods on the seller's insol
7 general, does not deal with the claims of the seller's creditors to those goods. But see Articles 41-4
8 however, states that the "buyer may require performance by the seller of his obligations without re
9 buyer has prepaid the price. Revised Section 2-824 is now closer to Article 46(1) in granting the bu
10 specific performance. See CISG Article 28, which states that a court is not "bound to specifically
11 CISG "unless the court would do so under its own law in respect of similar contracts of sale not gov
12 Convention.

15 SECTION 2-825. COVER; BUYER'S PURCHASE OF SUBSTITUTE

16 GOODS.

17 (a) If a seller breaches a contract, the buyer may cover by making in good faith and without 18 any reasonable purchase of, contract to purchase, or arrangement to procure comparable goods to su
19 from the seller.

20 (b) A buyer that covers in the manner required by subsection (a) may recover damages mea
21 covering less the contract price, together with any incidental or consequential damages, less expenses
22 the seller's breach.

23 (c) A buyer that fails to cover in a manner required under subsection (a) is not barred from 24 remedy.

25 SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-712.

26 Notes

27 1. Section 2-825 makes no changes in substance from former Section 2-712.

28
29 2. If, after a breach, specific performance is not available and the buyer still needs the good
30 preferred remedy. Subsection (a) authorizes "cover and promotes flexibility in the sources and nat 31 a buyer may cover in good faith by making the goods itself, purchasing from the breaching party or 32 parties if those transactions are reasonable. Similarly what is "reasonable may vary with whether t
33 commercial or a consumer buyer. Finally, the phrase "comparable goods suggests that the goods c
34 not conform exactly to those promised under the breached contract.

3. Subsection (b) conditions the “cover measure of damages upon satisfying subsection (a).” The measure of damages would not be available if the buyer acted in bad faith, delayed unreasonably or made an unreasonable arrangement. Presumably, the burden is on the buyer to prove that it is entitled to damages under subsection (b). If recommended by the PEB study report, if a buyer covers under subsection (a), the buyer should not be able to recover market price damages under the principle of Section 2-803(c) without stating the principle in this section. See Comment to Section 2-803.

4. As in Section 2-819, a buyer who covers in bad faith may be limited to the damages that recovered by a good faith cover under Section 2-825(b). See Section 2-803.

5. CISG. Under Article 75, if the contract is avoided and the buyer has “bought goods in replacement,” damages are measured by the “difference between the contract price and the price in the substitute transaction,” and not by the “difference between the contract price and the market price.” The CISG does not allow for any further damages under article 74. If the buyer has made a purchase under Article 75, damages are limited to the difference between the contract price and the price of the substitute goods available.

SECTION 2-826. BUYER'S DAMAGES FOR NONDELIVERY OR REPUDIATION.

(a) If a seller breaches a contract, the buyer may recover damages based on market price, to incidental and consequential damages, less expenses avoided in consequence of the seller's breach,

(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), the measure of damages is the market price for the goods at the time of the breach or when the buyer learned of the breach, whichever is later, less the contract price.

(2) In the case of a repudiation governed by Section 2-712, the measure of damages is the difference between the market price of comparable goods at the time when a commercially reasonable period after the buyer learned of the repudiation and the contract price. The commercially reasonable time includes the time for awaiting a retraction under Section 2-716 and the time needed to obtain substitute performance.

(b) Market price is determined at the place for tender. However, in cases of rejection after of acceptance, it is determined at the place of arrival.

SOURCE: Sales, Section 2-713.

Notes

1. Section 2-826 makes several changes to former Section 2-713. This provision is parallel to recover damages based upon the market price under Section 2-821. Subsection (a) changes the n price to the later of the time of the breach or when the buyer learned of the breach whichever is later. Section 2-713(1) measured the market price when the buyer learned of the breach. Thus, if the seller failed to deliver on October 1 but the buyer did not learn of that failure until October 4, market price is determined on October 4.

2. If there is a repudiation, market price is measured at the end of the commercially reasonable time for cover. Thus, market price is measured at the time when the buyer should have covered. See Karl O. Helm Aktiengesellschaft, 736 F.2d 1064, rehearing denied, 750 F.2d 69 (5th Cir. 1984). Under this approach, whether the buyer had a valid reason for not covering is irrelevant. See also, Elevator Co. v. Frosh, 494 N.W.2d 347 (Neb.App. 1992), holding that the time for determining market price is the time the buyer learned of the repudiation if it was commercially reasonable to cover on that date. Section 2-713 and Section 2-723(1), if the case came to trial before the time for performance, the market price is measured at the time the buyer learned of the breach. This was criticized as being inconsistent with the anticipatory repudiation rule, which allowed an aggrieved buyer to await the seller's performance for a commercially reasonable time. A court's decision when the case comes to trial is not relevant to when the market price is measured under Section 2-825.

If the seller repudiated on September 15 and the contract performance date is Oct. 1, under Section 2-825, market price would be measured at the end of the time the buyer awaited retraction (presumably not later than the end of the time needed for cover (sometime after Oct. 1). If the buyer actually covered, however, market price is measured under Section 2-825. If the seller just didn't deliver on Oct 1, as opposed to repudiating before Oct 1, market price would be measured either on the date of the breach (Oct 1.) or when buyer learned of the breach.

As stated in the notes after Section 2-821, this leaves the time for measuring market price open to manipulation by the breaching party. Any repudiation would extend the time for measuring market price beyond the time pointed out in those notes, stating one time for measuring market price, subject to the mitigation principle. Section 2-803(b), is a cleaner way of measuring market price damages and much less subject to manipulation by the breaching party. Under this approach, subsection (a)(2) would be eliminated and market price would be measured at the time of the breach as stated in subsection (a)(1). Measurement of the market price before the time stated in subsection (a)(1) would depend upon the mitigation principle.

3. Section 2-826 does not freeze the contract price to the same time as measurement of market price. If the agreed price contains escalation provisions, the court must attempt to interpret and apply those provisions. The principle of putting the party in the position it would have been in if the contract had been performed.

4. Section 2-826, like Section 2-821 for the seller, is the buyer's "fall back" remedy. It is a "cover" remedy, in that damages are measured by the difference between the contract price and the market price for the goods at a time when "cover" could have or should have been made. Like Section 2-821(a), choice of law under Section 2-826(a) is limited by the remedial policy in Section 2-803(c): It must not put the buyer in a substantially less favorable position than full performance would have. This approach rejects cases like Tongish v. Thomas, 840 P.2d 444 (Mont. 1992), holding that the specific terms of Section 2-713(1) of the 1990 Official Text control the general remedy in Section 1-106(1). The mitigation principle in Section 2-803 also serves to control the buyer's remedy. On the other hand, a buyer who properly covers under Section 2-825(a) is precluded from seeking damages under Section 2-826.

5. Subsection (b) is the same in substance as former Section 2-713(2).

6. CISG. Under Article 76, if the contract has been avoided and there has been no "purchase substitute," Article 75, the buyer may recover the difference between the contract price and "current price at the time of avoidance."

26 3. Subsection (b) has been frequently litigated, with sometimes puzzling results. The key n

31 the market value at the time of acceptance; (b) If the goods are not usable without repairs, the court
32 value as delivered plus the reasonable cost of repairs, which constitutes the market value of the goo
33 the goods are not usable under any circumstances, the court determines the difference in market val
34 and the cost to purchase (market value) goods as warranted. See Schroeder v. Barth, Inc., 969 F.2d 35 1992).

4. It is not always clear what “special circumstances” show damages of a different amount should be. For example: (1) Suppose a seller warrants to a farmer that seeds are X when in contract excludes liability for consequential damages. As a result of the breach of warranty, the farmer loses crop Y because Y won’t grow on the land. The market value of X and Y at the time of acceptance are the same. The court found “special circumstances” on these facts and awarded the farmer the value of the lost crop. This is a measure of really consequential damages liability for which was excluded by the contract. (2) Suppose that the contract for a computer system would satisfy the buyer’s particular purposes. The specific system, however, was defective and another, more expensive system was required. Again, special circumstances suggest that damages should be measured by the difference in the market value of the system delivered and the market value of a hypothetical replacement system that would satisfy the particular purposes rather than the specific system promised. See Computer Systems, Inc. v. Staten Island Hospital, 788 F. Supp. 1351 (D. N.J. 1992). (3) Another category where special circumstances frequently exist is damages for breach of warranty of title. See Leasing, Inc. v. Goushy, 795 F.2d 693 (D. N.J. 1992). These damages are now to be measured under the contract rule (a).

5. CISG. Under the Convention, a buyer has more power to “require the seller to perform” than under Article 2. After delivery where the seller has more power to “cure” non-conformities than under Article 2. However, Article 50 provides that if the goods “do not conform with the contract and whether or not the price has been paid, the buyer may reduce the price in the same proportion as the value that the goods actually have at the time of delivery bears to the value that conforming goods would have had at that time.” Thus, Article 50 is a measurement standard in 2-827(b) with the buyer’s power to reduce the price granted in Section 2-827(b).

SECTION 2-828. DEDUCTION OF DAMAGES FROM PRICE. A buyer, on so notifying a seller, may deduct all or any part of the damages resulting from any breach from any still owed under the same contract.

Notes

1. There are no changes of substance in former Section 2-717 of the 1990 Official Text, con-

2. At the March 1997 meeting, there was some discussion of whether this is too limited a rule. The ability to deduct from the unpaid price might be appropriate in other situations. After the meeting, the following was proposed for discussion and decision:

If the buyer is a consumer and a remote buyer as defined in Section 2-401(4), that buyer, or a transferee of that buyer, on so notifying the immediate seller of that buyer, may deduct all or any part of damages for any breach of warranty under Section 2-404 that is related to the sale from any part of the contract price paid under the related contract of sale to the immediate seller, or to any transferee of that seller. If the full contract price has been paid, a consumer buyer who is a remote buyer as defined in Section 2-401(4) is entitled to the full amount of the contract price paid, from the immediate seller, or its transferee, for all or any part of the damages.

1 resulting from a breach of warranty under Section 2-404 related to the sale.

3 This could be added as subsection (b) and would allow a consumer remote buyer who suffers
4 of the obligation under Section 2-404 to deduct its damages from the price still owed to the immediate
5 the immediate seller would recover from the remote seller the amount so deducted. If the price is paid,
6 would have a right of refund for the amount of damages resulting from the breach of the remote obligation.
7 would obtain that refund from the immediate seller or its transferee.

9 This is not a set off in the traditional sense as the parties are not mutual. The immediate seller is 10 not an assignee of the remote seller's rights and obligations to the buyer. Thus this provision could be 11 consistent with either traditional set off rights or rights of a contract assignee. This provision would not 12 breach of the remote seller's obligation against the immediate seller who has not breached its own obligation.

15 SECTION 2-829. RECOVERY OF PRICE; BUYER'S SECURITY

16 INTEREST IN REJECTED GOODS.

17 (a) If the seller has breached the contract, the buyer may recover any payments made on the contract
18 are not accepted.

19 (b) On rightful rejection or justifiable revocation of acceptance, a buyer has a security interest in the 20 buyer's possession or control for any payments made on their price and any expenses reasonably incurred in 21 inspection, receipt, transportation, care, and custody. The buyer may hold the goods and resell them
22 for an aggrieved seller under Section 2-819, except that the buyer shall give the seller reasonable notice of 23 resale and must account to the seller for any excess of the proceeds of resale over the amount of the debt
24 in this subsection.

Notes

27 1. Pursuant to the revision of Section 2-823 to be a pure index of remedies and that should not 28 substantive rights, the buyer's right to return of the price from former Section 2-711(1) had to be set forth in 29 Subsection (a) does so.

30

31 2. Subsection (b) is the same in substance as former Section 2-711(3) and former Section 2-711(4).
32 (b) creates a statutory security interest on behalf of the buyer in limited circumstances and for a limited
33 compass, the subsection deals with when the security interest arises, what it secures, how long it lasts, and 34 the buyer's rights as a secured party and its duties as a bailee, and the right of resale. Compare Section 2-711(4).

1 the buyer is exercising a security interest in the goods, should the buyer's resale be subject to the A
2 or should current law be continued and make the buyer comply with the seller's resale provisions in
3 that the buyer resells under Section 2-819 to protect a security interest in goods in which the seller has 4 interest. The buyer must account to the seller for any excess over the claims secured and must give
5 intended resale to the seller. The buyer's obligation under Section 2-704 or 2-705 is subject to the 6 subsection.
